Mr. Condé Nast, Publisher
The Vogue Company,

New York, N.Y.

Average Sale VOGUE $90.
"Ordinary Publication" $42

Dear Mr. Nast:

I have your communication of June 17th and we likewise enjoy the thrill of knowing that we have been in Vogue since 1910. Yes, our experience with Vogue has been one of pleasure and profit. Our orders are in with the Rankin Company for more space in Vogue than ever before. Our list would not be started, to say nothing about being complete, if we did not have "Vogue" on it.

Here is the secret that we won't expect you to keep under your hat — the ordinary publication that we use brings us an average sale of about $42.00. Vogue brings us an average sale of about $90.00. When you consider this you will know that there is nothing wonderful about our sticking to you and your Vogue so continuously since 1910.

Yours very truly,
E. Albrecht & Son.

Results from advertising in Vogue—however extraordinary—cannot be expressed merely in volume of sales to Vogue readers.

What the Vogue woman buys —others buy

Where she buys—others buy

The Vogue customer is such an important customer that what she demands is stocked by the dealer—not only for her, but for the others who, he knows, will certainly follow her example.

TELL your story to Vogue's 100,000 wealthy families and a national demand is the natural result. This has been proven in countless cases. For instance, the Futurist Company says that Vogue "in less than one year, placed Futurist undergarments in practically every nationally known department store in the country."

When you consider Vogue's far-reaching influence, there is nothing very wonderful in the fact that it carries more than twice as much advertising as any other women's magazine—and that, out of a total of 37 different lines of business from which women's magazines draw their advertising, Vogue leads in 26.

Why not employ Vogue in selling your goods?

Offer "Fake" Models as Bait.

Complaint is heard in the local cutting-up trade that some of the dress manufacturers are luring buyers into their showrooms with "fake" models, which they cannot possibly deliver at the prices quoted, with the intention of selling them more expensive garments on which they can make good. One well-known manufacturer asserted yesterday that some of these houses were offering models at $25 or less, which cost pretty nearly that much for the cloth alone. This is especially true of "bait dresses," made of tricotine and other popular cloths that are scarce. "The manufacturers I speak of will tell you that they are doing a big business on these dresses," he said, "but ask them if they are actually shipping the goods. I'll wager ten to one that they won't be so ready with an answer. This certainly is no season for a buyer to go shopping around. He should confine his purchases to sources that have proved their calibre in the past."

Losses on Early Orders.

In cases where woolen mills were content to let their contracts stand and not cancel orders when buyers refused to pay more, it is understood that the losses on the early Fall business will run into the millions. Selling the market short was a policy of even the most representative mills following the armistice, when it was thought that business and prices would show big drops from their wartime levels. The square treatment given to buyers by the large selling organizations is the subject of considerable praise, and the big companies added a lot to their reputation, however large their losses were.

AUSTRIA'S REPLY IS MILD IN TONE

DOUBT IF THEY CAN PAY

Indicate Their Intention to Sign, but Ask for Oral Discussion and Some Modifications.

PARIS, Aug. 6.—The Austrian counterproposals to the peace terms were handed to the allied mission at St. Germain-en-Laye at 12:15 o'clock today. The counterproposals were brought at once to Paris and delivered to the Supreme Council of the Peace Conference.

The Austrian observations on the treaty were considered in Peace Conference circles to be very temperate in tone.

The Austrian reply said the delegation realized Austria's position was that of a defeated power, but complained that its territory had been limited in too sweeping a manner. Particular objection was offered to the loss of Southern Bohemia and the Tyrol district.

The Austrians state they also believe they have been greatly overcharged, as two-thirds of the debt of the Austro-Hungarian State is being loaded upon them. They say that the proportion is too heavy, considering their small population, and they are not sure they can live under such conditions.

A special appeal was made by the Austrians for an oral discussion of the treaty. They said they believed such a discussion would result in a more complete understanding of the conditions imposed.

Although the Austrians indicated very clearly their intention of signing, even if the treaty is not modified, yet they expressed the hope that some modification may be effected.

Dr. Karl Renner, Austrian Chancellor, and head of the delegation, and most of his colleagues, will leave tonight for Vienna.

The Austrian counterproposals will be made public, together with the reply of the Allies, when the latter are formulated and presented.

REDS RIOT IN TRIESTE; 700 ARRESTS ARE MADE

People Aid Police in Suppressing Outbreak Said to Have Been Incited by a Bavarian.

TRIEST, Aug. 5, (Associated Press.)—A group of Bolsheviki appeared here today on the streets and attempted to start rioting. The disturbers were dispersed by the police with the assistance of the population.

As a result of the demonstration 700 arrests were made.

The Bolshevist movement is said to have been directed by a Bavarian Spartacide, Dr. Levy, who is said also to have intended to incite riots in Venice and Milan. He was arrested while attempting to enter Italy across the Swiss frontier.

The demonstrators succeeded in cutting off the electric power. Trieste, as a result, is without electric lights and the tramcars are not running. There were several hundred demonstrators, but they were attacked by thousands of citizens carrying national flags and crying:

"Down with the enemies of the mother country! Down with those who sold out to Austria and the Croats!"

In all Italian quarters here confidence is felt that the energetic efforts of the new Governor of Trieste, Augusto Ciufelli, (who was a member of the Italian Mission to the United States in 1917,) will rid the city of the disorderly elements.

CUBA HONORS CROWDER.

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

HAVANA, Aug. 6.—With the approval tonight by the Senate of the three laws which he came to Cuba to assist in making so that the republic would escape in the future electoral frauds which threatened its sovereignty, Major General Enoch H. Crowder is receiving the most extraordinary honors ever bestowed on a foreigner here.

The laws will be taken tomorrow to Variadero de Cardenas, where President Menocal will sign them, and the President has chartered a special train for General Crowder on his acceptance of an invitation to spend the day with the President and his family. President Menocal has also ordered the cruiser Cuba put at the disposal of General Crowder to take him back to the United States when he leaves next Saturday.

The Senate tonight voted authorization to Havana University to confer on General Crowder the degree of Doctor of Laws, an honor it is said the university has not paid to anyone in the last fifty years. A special vote of thanks also was voted the General by the Senate.

SHARP ALLIED NOTE SENT TO RUMANIA

will give up the occupation of all of Hungary if the Hungarian Supreme Commend agrees to deliver all material of war of every kind which remains in possession of the Hungarian troops and State, excepting material considered necessary to armed forces which Hungary will have the right to maintain to keep order in the interior until the ratification of peace with Rumania. The strength of these forces will under no circumstances be more than 15,000, officers included.

"The Hungarian Supreme Command must also deliver the factories now existing in Hungary which have been used for the fabrication of munitions of war. Their dismantling for the benefit of Rumania will be carried out by Rumanian specialists without the aid of Hungarian officers.

"Equipment of all kinds needed for an army of 300,000 men must be handed over, along with the following: Fifty per cent. of all the rolling stock which still belongs to Hungary, according to the records of the Hungarian State; 50 per cent. of all the machinery and material which exist in Hungary and are used for the construction, maintenance and repairs of rolling stock; 200 touring cars; 400 motor trucks in good condition, with their accessories; 30 per cent. of all livestock animals of all kinds which exist at present, according to the records in Hungary.

"For the purpose of delivering these articles to Rumanian soldiers who were unable to cultivate their land because they were kept mobilized to guarantee the safety of the State against those who continuously disturbed the peace and because they lacked the necessary means, which was taken from them by the enemy, the Hungarian Supreme Command agrees to maintain, at the expense of the Hungarian State, during the entire period which the Rumanian troops occupy Hungarian territory west of the Tisza (Theiss) River, all the royal Rumanian forces which were in these regions at the time of the signing of the present agreement, and to procure the coal necessary for the circulation required by Rumanian military necessity in the region west of the Tisza.

"The royal Rumanian armies will not be withdrawn to the east of the Tisza until the Supreme Hungarian Commander has carried out the conditions imposed in Paragraph A," (for the delivery of war material.

After minor details, covering the delivery of material and animals, the ultimatum provides:

"For the supervision and execution of this agreement a Rumanian mission will be established in Budapest. This mission will operate until the ratification of peace between Rumania and Hungary by legally constituted Hungarian authorities. The mission will enjoy all diplomatic privileges and the immunity granted by civilized nations.

"The present demand must be accepted or rejected in its entirety, consequently counterproposals will not be received. The time for reply expires at 10 o'clock P. M., Aug. 5.

"In case these conditions are not acceptable, the Rumanian Supreme Command will remove from Hungary, without regard to proportion, material and animals which may be necessary to Rumania to repair, at least in part, the sad devastations wrought by the enemy, who, during all the time of his occupation and on the occasion of the peace of Bucharest, never knew the meaning of humanitarian sentiments."

LONDON, Aug. 6.—A German Government wireless dispatch, giving the heads of the Rumanian ultimatum to Hungary, says that notification of acceptance of the conditions must be given not later than Aug. 13.

The dispatch adds that the Hungarian Government has appealed to the Entente powers, pointing out the impossibility of fulfilling such conditions, and requesting them to intervene as arbitrators between Hungary and Rumania.

Troops of Big Allies Arrive.

COPENHAGEN, Aug. 6.—French troops arrived at Budapest yesterday, and British troops under General Gordon and American forces under Captain Wips (?) arrived there today, according to dispatches received here from Vienna, quoting the newspapers of that city.

BERLIN, Aug. 6.—Prince Livio Borghese, head of the Allied Mission at Vienna, arrived at Budapest today, according to dispatches from there, in company with the British, French, and American officers. They immediately held a conference with General Mardereseu, commander of the Rumanian forces occupying Budapest.

Troops of the Anti-Communist Government at Szegedin are advancing on Budapest. The force is said to include a battalion of 1,800 officers who have put on mourning which they have sworn not to remove until they have avenged alleged acts of violence against their relatives.

Twenty-five hundred French troops, it is reported also, will march on Budapest from the Szegedin front. English troops from Fiume already are on their way to the Hungarian Capital as part of the allied force of occupation.

BUDAPEST, Aug. 5, (Associated Press.)—Before returning to Vienna Captain Thomas C. Gregory, member of the Interallied Relief Commission, said today:

"Unless the situation is relieved by the withdrawal of the Rumanians, except possibly a few troops outside the city for police purposes, the Hungarian Cabinet will fall, new chaos will result, and the result of the work of the Allies for several months in straightening out the Hungarian tangle will be lost."

The Hungarians are now charging the Allies with bad faith. They say that the Hungarians did not resist the Rumanians in order to have peace and save the remnants of the country, and there is some talk that it is even possible that they may resurrect their army if the Rumanians continue their operations.

It was learned today that the Rumanians shot in the suburbs of the city twenty former Red soldiers. The bodies were examined by American officers.

The Rumanians have cut off the city from food supplies by severing the five lines of communication from the east and south, and also by interfering with the plans to bring in American foodstuffs. The general attitude of the Rumanians toward the Americans is friendly, but it is evident that they are desirous of squaring old grudges against the Hungarians.

Rumanian military authorities have requisitioned all automibiles here, including those of the Hungarian Ministers.

General Holban of the Rumanian army has been appointed commander of the city, and has ordered that the Red Guard and police be disarmed.

Tramcars are stopped at 8 o'clock in the evening and the population has been ordered to remain indoors after that hour. A few workmen who were unable to return home until night have been shot while attempting to pass a Rumanian patrol.

CABINET NOW COALITION.

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

BERLIN, Aug. 4.—Abundant news is now coming through from Budapest. Some of it is contradictory, but the main features of the situation may be summarized as below.

Originally the purely "Socialist" Government which replaced Bela Kun's Soviet Government found the Entente commissions in Vienna rather reserved in their attitude toward a purely Socialist administration, and no doubt there was a shrewd suspicion that the forthcoming elections for a National Assembly, which the Allies would naturally insist on as a condition of their recognition, would not result so as to justify the Socialists in assuming all the Ministerial offices.

The members of this first Government, therefore, being at present in Vienna, had meetings with the Entente commissions there and also with leading members of other political parties in Hungary. As a result a new Ministry is being formed, including representatives of the Bourgeoise and Peasant Parties. The list of new Ministers may, when the reshuffling is ended, be expected to include Lovassey, who was formerly a colleague of Karolyi. He is friendly toward the Entente. A coalition Government has been already effected to carry on municipal affairs.

The Government will no doubt follow the lines laid down by the President of the "Socialist" Government, Julius Piedl, and the ordinances of the Soviet régime will in general remain in force, since the Ministry does not wish to cause confusion by too sudden changes. Such laws and regulations as can be usefully amended will be so altered and others will be repealed. The Government recognize the right of private property, but it also recognizes that socialization according to the principles of the old Social Democratic Party is imperative. The extent of this socialization will, however, be left to the decision of the National Assembly.

The Government is formed on a basis of democratic principles and intends to hold elections for the National Assembly as soon as technically possible. This was said before the decision to cement the members of the non-Socialist parties, but as no steps have been taken to open negotiations with the aristocratic and reactionary Government at Szegedin it may be assumed that these lines will be adhered to by the coalition.

It is said instructions have been already given for the Minister of the Interior to prepare for a general election and that the Allies will be asked to extend protection. There is also said to be a strong movement in favor of proceedings against Bela Kun and his colleagues.

COPENHAGEN, Aug. 6.—A dispatch from Vienna says that the Bourgeois politicians have refused to enter the Hungarian Government. They desire to await the results of the coming elections.

HUNGARY RUINED BY REDS.

100,000,000 Crowns in Securities and Gold Taken from Banks.

BUDAPEST, Aug. 4, (Associated Press.)—Hungary has been stripped almost bare financially, Simon Kraus, one of Hungary's leading financiers said today, but the greatest damage done has been to production. Coal, he said, is entirely lacking.

"The immediate apparent danger to Hungary, however," he said, "is insignificant when compared with the harm done by the complete destruction of production, by the enormous increase in prices, by the false economy of Soviet policies, and the prohibitive workmen's wages."

M. Kraus recommended that the labor situation be straightened out immediately.

The bank losses, he said, were partly imaginary and partly actual—imaginary so far as concerned money taken from the banks and distributed within Hungary, and actual in the case of money smuggled out of the country, and particularly the loss of 70,000,000 crowns of gold securities stored in Budapest in the form of Austro-Hungarian bank stocks and of 30,000,000 in gold coin.

The Soviet continually sold stocks and bonds, M. Kraus said, but probably not more than 30,000,000. Savings bank depositors, he said, will lose or not, according as the State is able to fulfill its obligations.

Damage to factories, he added, does not constat so much in the destruction of valuable property as in the loss of raw materials and in the coal shortage.

He said he believed it would be impossible to pay Austro-Hungarian war loans if Hungary were held responsible for the purchases of former territory now separated from it.

Resign as Ziegler Estate Trustees.

Surrogate Fowler accepted yesterday the resignations of Mrs. E. Matilda Ziegler and William S. Champ as Trustees under the will of William Ziegler, baking powder manufacturer, and appointed William Ziegler, Jr., and his wife, Mrs. Glayds W. Ziegler, to succeed them. Both resigned because of ill health. The estate increased from $11,622,737 in 1914 to $13,389,430 on May 1 last. Of this sum $3,131,964 has been paid to the son, and he will get the income from the remainder. The principal will be paid to his daughters, Elizabeth and Barbara Ziegler, on his death.

The Annual Sale of Kuppenheimer and Brill Summer Suits

Which Has Become One of New York's Most Important Clothing Events

Will Not Take Place This Season

This announcement is made for the benefit of the men who have grown accustomed to looking forward to this sale as a profitable opportunity for replenishing their wardrobe.

Some of the reasons responsible for this radical departure are—

First: That the stocks in our seven stores, as a result of the demand this past season for high-grade clothing of the Kuppenheimer type, are just large enough to enable us to offer that wide selection for which Brill stores are noted, but not large enough to justify the losses from price reductions which a sale would entail.

Second: Because the general shortage of clothing and of woolens is becoming more acute every day.

And Third: Because rising costs already indicate such advances in the wholesale cost of clothing that next Spring and Summer

This season's $30 suits will cost at least $45
This season's $35 suits will cost at least $50
This season's $40 suits will cost at least $55
This season's $65 suits will cost at least $80

So, while there will be no Brill Sale this season, it is highly advisable for you to buy now, without a sale

LANSING ADMITS SHANTUNG DISSENT

But Denies He Protested—Holds Treaty Substantially Covers the 14 Points.

WILSON HELD UP MINUTES

Secretary Also Would Not Favor Giving Them to Senate Lest It Irritate Allies.

LEAGUE DRAFT NOT PRESSED

He Tells Senate Committee Common Sense Was Rule at the Conference.

WASHINGTON, Aug. 6.—Secretary Lansing expressed the opinion before the Senate Foreign Relations Committee today that the Shantung provision of the Peace Treaty did not square with President Wilson's enunciated principle of self-determination, but maintained that the treaty as a whole carried out "substantially" the President's Fourteen Points.

Declaring his unfamiliarity with many details of the peace negotiations and the treaty, the Secretary told the committee that he was unable to answer many of its questions and reminded Senators in answering others that he was merely expressing his own personal views.

"Ask the President," the Secretary said when pressed for details. When asked for a detailed construction of the labor and reparation clauses, he answered that he could not be expected to carry the minutes of an 80,000-word document in his mind.

Both the Shantung provision and the League covenant, the witness said, were negotiated largely by the President, who alone of the American delegation would be able to reveal details of the discussions.

The Secretary was before the committee throughout the day and will reappear Monday.

As his own personal views, Mr. Lansing said that Japan would probably have signed the treaty without the Shantung provision, that the United States should ask no part of the German reparation; that the Kaiser could not be legally tried, and that the mutual guarantee of territorial integrity from external aggression, as contained in Article X. of the League covenant, imposed a moral obligation but not a legal one.

The Secretary said that it was true that the Fourteen Points were not discussed to his knowledge in the preparatory stages of the peace negotiations; that the American draft of the League was never "pressed" before the conference, that the President asked the Peace Conference not to lay before the French Senate the record of discussions on the League, and that the United States did not know of secret treaties between the Allies and Japan regarding Shantung, when this country signed the Lansing-Ishii agreement.

It was not true, Secretary Lansing said, that he and other members of the American delegation "protested" against the Shantung settlement, that Great Britain "refused to permit" discussion of the freedom of the seas by the Peace Conference, or that any of the American expert advisers had resigned because they disagreed with the decision regarding Shantung.

The general basis on which the treaty was framed, said the Secretary, "was common sense and general principles, with an avoidance of policy and expediency." Verbatim records of the discussions, he told the committee, were left in Paris, adding that he would not favor giving to the Senate the less complete transcripts in the possession of the State Department, because it might cause "irritation" to other Governments.

Senator Brandegee brought up the question of President Wilson's refusal to allow Clemenceau to lay before the Chamber of Deputies and Senate the minutes of the debates on the League of Nations, by stating that he had seen in The New York Times a Paris dispatch which said that M. Clemenceau had laid before the parliamentary bodies a cable from President Wilson requesting the French premier not to make public any of the notes or documents in relation to the treaty.

"Do you know whether such a cable was sent by President Wilson?" asked Senator Brandegee.

"No; that was not it, at all," said Mr. Lansing. "The Senate chamber in Paris asked M. Clemenceau to lay before it the minutes of the proceedings of the commission on the League of Nations, and M. Clemenceau said that as that was a matter which pertained to other Governments as well as France, he must make inquiry as to whether it was advisable, and he did. He inquired, I think of me, in the first instance, and I said that my impression was, in view of the great freedom of debate in the commission, that it would be unwise to lay the minutes before the Senate, as it might cause irritation, but that I would communicate with the President in regard to it, which I did, and the President agreed as to that answer."

The Shantung settlement was then taken up by Senator Borah. When the Lansing-Ishii agreement was made, Mr. Lansing said, the department knew of Japan's twenty-one demands upon China, but added that the demands did not enter into discussion of the agreement.

"At no time was it understood that the Lansing-Ishii agrement was the indorsement of Japan's twenty-one demands?" asked Senator Borah.

"Absolutely not," said Mr. Lansing. "We were opposed to them."

"And the agreement was not enforcement of the secret agreement regarding Shantung?"

"No."

"And if you had known of those secret agreements would you have likely entered into the agreement with Viscount Ishii?"

"Yes, I think so," Mr. Lansing replied. "I think I can say that one of the very reasons for the Lansing-Ishii agreement was to secure from Japan a redeclaration of the open-door policy, which she gave."

"Was the secret agreement between Japan and the Allies brought to the attention of the President before you went to Versailles?"

"Oh, yes."

Mr. Borah then took up the report that Secretary Lansing, General Bliss, and Henry White filed a written protest against the Shantung provision. Mr. Lansing stated that General Bliss wrote a letter to the President in behalf of the three. Mr. Lansing added that it was a private communication from General Bliss to the President, and that he had no copies available.

Letter Not a Protest.

Pressed to describe the letter, Mr. Lansing said:

"The President had consulted with us and had asked us to communicate our opinions. General Bliss prepared a letter and showed it to us, and we concurred in it. It was a matter of our advice to the President."

"Was it in the nature of a protest?" asked Senator Borah.

"No."

Asked why the letter was not available, Secretary Lansing said:

"Ask the President. It was sent to him, and I suppose he has it."

Replying to Senator Borah, the Secretary said that he could not recall having seen a letter relating to any effort of the Japanese delegates to "intimidate" the Chinese.

Questioned again about the Lansing-Ishii agreement, the Secretary said he would prefer to make a full statement later on that subject, as well as the attitude of the American Government toward the twenty-one demands by Japan upon China and toward China's entrance into the war.

Senator New asked whether China made any appeal to the American delegates about the Shantung matter.

"I do not think there was anything formal," said Mr. Lansing. "Of course the Chinese delegates called up the American delegates and discussed the subject. I don't call it an appeal as it was a discussion the same as we had with the Japanese delegates."

"Was any effort made by the American delegates to have Japan guarantee to return Shantung to China?" asked Senator New.

"Yes, there was such an effort. And by the word 'effort' I do not mean to imply that it was a failure."

"Do you mean to say it was not a failure?" asked Senator Harding, Republican, Ohio.

"I cannot pass upon that, as the matter was handled entirely by the President."

Secretary Lansing said he "had reason to believe" there were no secret agreements in effect now among the other allied and associated powers of which the United States had no knowledge. He also said he had been "assured by Mr. Balfour" that Great Britain favored the open-door policy in China and not special spheres of influence.

Secretary Lansing said there were no resignations of expert advisers so far as he knew because of the Shantung agreement. E. C. Williams, formerly head of the State Department's Far Eastern Bureau, did resign, he said, but not on account of the Shantung agreement.

The selection of William C. Bullitt to go to Russia and investigate conditions for the Peace Conference was made by the conference, the Secretary said, and not by President Wilson.

When Senator Johnson asked on what general plan the Peace Conference worked in formulating the treaty Secretary Lansing said they worked on "common sense and general principles, with an avoidance of policy and expediency."

"And not on the Fourteen Points?" asked Senator Johnson.

"Yes, I consider them common sense," replied the Secretary.

"And did you accomplish your purpose to frame the treaty around them?"

"Yes, substantially; so far as it was possible to do so with twenty-three nations around the table."

Senator Johnson recalled that Mr. Lansing had stated that the American commissioners went on the policy that "expediency should not rule principle," and asked whether that policy was followed as to the Shantung provision.

"Not entirely," said Mr. Lansing.

"Could Japan's signature to the League have ben obtained without the Shantung decision?"

"I think so."

Questioned in detail, Secretary Lansing reaffirmed his statement that the Fourteen Points were "substantially" carried out.

Regarding the first point, dealing with "open covenants openly arrived at," he said:

"I consider that was carried out. Of course no negotiations can go on between nations that are done in public or at a public hearing."

Freedom of the seas, the second point, the Secretary said did not enter into the negotiations.

"Isn't it a fact that England would not let it be considered?" asked Senator Johnson.

"No; it never came up."

Equality of trade conditions were established, the Secretary said, on the third point. The fourth, for reductions of armament, he declared, was effected by the league covenant.

Discussing the fifth point, relative to Germany's colonial possessions, the Secretary said the mandatory system would carry out the principle laid down by the President. Many mandataries had been suggested for the United States, but none had been agreed to.

The Russian problem dealt with by the sixth point could not be taken up by the conference, the Secretary said, while the seventh and eighth, relative to Belgium and France, had been carried out.

The ninth point, relative to Italian borders, was to be worked out in other treaties. The tenth, eleventh and twelfth, regarding Balkan conditions and Turkey, also would be worked out later.

The thirteenth and fourteenth points, relative to Poland and the League, the Secretary said he considered carried out.

Senator Lodge quoted the principle of self-determination laid down by President Wilson, and Senator Johnson asked whether that was not violated by the Shantung settlement.

"Yes," said Secretary Lansing.

Discussing the obligations assumed under Article X., by which the League members agreed to guarantee mutually each other's territorial integrity against external aggression, Mr. Lansing said he "presumed in honor that he would have to follow out the general purposes embodied in that article," though he thought there would be no "legal obligation." He said the covenant went no further than the Panama Treaty in that regard.

American Plan "Not Pressed."

The Secretary told the committee that the American plan for a League of Nations was "not pressed." He presumed that the draft was made by President Wilson and that a copy might still be in the President's possession.

He did not recall how the American plan differed from that eventually adopted, but thought the plan, embodied in the league covenant, was a "decided improvement" on the American plan.

The Secretary was asked at whose suggestion this Franco-American treaty was made.

"The President's," Mr. Lansing replied. "I don't know if it was his original suggestion, but I first heard of it from him."

Mr. Lansing said he believed the French treaty merely supplemented Article 20 of the League of Nations covenant, treating with special offensive and defensive alliances.

BRITISH UNIONS WON'T AID POLICE

Railwaymen's Decision Not to Strike Regarded as Blow to Direct-Action Policy.

BREAD SITUATION WORSE

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

LONDON, Aug. 6.—The labor sky cleared to a considerable extent today. In fact, the blue expanses in it are estimated by some observers to be much more important than the cloudy patches.

The executive of the National Union of Railwaymen held a meeting today and was addressed by J. H. Thomas, M. P. It also received deputations from various bodies which argued in favor af a sympathetic strike on behalf of the Police Union. While no official notice of the action taken by the union's executive has yet been issued, it is learned that the decision was against a strike.

This decision is not only important in its relation to the police walk-out, but is regarded by labor experts as a severe blow against the policy of direct action favored by some extremists. Direct action in some respects remains the gravest menace of the period, despite Government assurances that it will be fought with all the resources at the Government's disposal, but without the support of the railwaymen other transport workers and dockers who favor this policy are unlikely to embark on an adventure bound to be suicidal.

In various other directions also the situation shows improvement. The police strike gains few adherents. The local railway workers who struck sympathetically in opposition to their unions are returning to work rapidly. The bakers' strike continues and in some parts of London today it was impossible to get bread, though cakes were plentiful.

Liverpool is described as the danger spot of the moment. Tom Mann, the stormy petrel of industrial trouble before the war, is there, and several local labor organizations have given notice of their intention to come out in support of the police strike. As Liverpool is a great food distributing centre, serious inconvenience might be caused throughout the country if these threats were carried into effect.

The city on the Mersey is today short of bread, though there is flour in plenty. The Lord Mayor has called a meeting of trade union representatives to consider making temporary arrangements for supplying the public with bread while the bakers' strike lasts.

An effort, which in some quarters is described as a misguided one on the part of the authorities, has been made to suggest that the industrial unrest is being financed by foreign money, which is variously reported as having come from Bela Kun through Sweden or from German sources in the United States. The Evening Standard, which is obsessed with the idea that an attempt to create a Bolshevist revolution is afoot in this country, estimates the funds alleged to have been thus expended at $30,000. Other papers do not seem to be impressed by the story, to which publicity was first given in the London Times, and asked pertinent questions in regard to its details as furnished by an agency which claims to have obtained its information from Scotland Yard.

The reported decision of the Government to retire from direct intervention in labor disputes has been the subject of much misunderstanding. So long as the Government remains in control of important industries it clearly cannot disinterest itself in labor disputes directly affecting those industries. The Yorkshire miners' strike is the outcome of the intervention of the Coal Controller, a Government official responsible for the administration and interpretation of the Sankey Commission's awards, and in several other industries the Government so regulates conditions of employment as to be responsible for relations between employers and employed. In these instances the Government cannot stand aside from labor disputes.

It is suggested that what was meant by the alleged Government decision is that "the system of sudden interventions of the Cabinet or Prime Minister to effect a settlement," which Lord Asquith denounced, will be abandoned. This is heartily applauded as a wise decision by the Westminster Gazette, which again presses upon the consideration of Parliament the industrial conference which opened with a flourish of trumpets at the beginning of the year, which later presented a series of reports, and which since has lapsed into silence.

The Gazette, after surveying labor conditions in Europe and America, says:

"If in the next four years of peace we can enlist half the energy and zeal in the service of the world at peace that has been developed in the stress of war we might be quite happy about the future of the world. Let us make up our minds that it is going to be a testing time and face it squarely."

RIOT IN LIVERPOOL.

Troops at Midnight Charge Crowd with Bayonets.

LIVERPOOL, Thursday, Aug. 7.—Troops at midnight charged with bayonets and dispersed a crowd of persons outside St. George's Hall. Several of the soldiers were beaten with axe-shafts by the mob. At the same time firing was heard in the Scotland Road District. Details of the trouble there have not been received.

The clash outside St. George's Hall resulted from an attack on a sentry by rowdies who endeavored to take away the sentry's rifle. The sentry fired his gun in the air and a squad of troops responded and charged the disturbers.

Tramway service was suspended completely today and there was virtually no bread to be had as a result of the strike movement which began with the police and now include the tramway men and the bakers. Municipal employes last night voted to give twenty-four hours' strike notice unless demands of the tramway men were met.

Physicians at a meeting today adopted a resolution in favor of organizing themselves on a trade union basis.

BRITISH CABINET TO FIGHT PROFITEERS

Ends Labor of Committee of Inquiry Just Appointed and Will Take Action Itself.

DRASTIC BILL PREPARED

Sir Auckland Geddes Says Profiteers May Be Made to Give Up Their Gains.

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

LONDON, Aug. 6.—Sir Auckland Geddes dropped a bombshell today among the members of the select Parliamentary committee inquiring into profiteering by announcing that the Government was introducing drastic legislation to deal with the problem. The select committee only began work two days ago, and now their services are dispensed with, and they are asking why the committee was appointed if the Government had already determined to take action.

The proposals which the Minister of Reconstruction said would be embodied in the bill do not meet with much approval. Sir Auckland Geddes's plan for dealing with profiteers is based on the system of the local military service tribunals during the war which, while they worked well enough in large towns, were distinctly unsatisfactory in many areas of smaller population. In some quarters the description of panic legislation is applied to the Government proposals.

Some newspapers have been conducting an anti-profiteering campaign and the Government is stated to have been greatly impressed by it and to have decided that it would be dangerous to await for the report of the select committee.

Food Controller Roberts explained to the committee the methods whereby prices of controlled foods had been kept down, and the general opinion of the select Committee was that the extension of the system to other supplies which could be standardised would be the best safeguard against profiteering.

"Prison for profiteers," which is the alliterative way in which most of the papers have summed up the Government proposals is a catching phrase, but as even the Daily Chronicle, which is a Government organ, points out, it may prove an empty one, for there will be considerable difficulty in defining the offense of profiteering with sufficient accuracy for penal purposes.

LONDON, Aug. 6, (Associated Press.)—While making his statement on the profiteering question today, Sir Auckland Geddes was asked whether an attempt would be made to make the profiteers disgorge. In reply the Minister of Reconstruction said:

"The question of retrospective action is now under consideration."

The tribunals which it is proposed to set up, Sir Auckland continued, would be empowered to inflict penalties up to £200 or six months' imprisonment. The proposed bill would apply to England, Scotland, and Wales, but not to Ireland.

The Minister added that the House of Commons would not adjourn until there was some power in the hands of the Government to deal with profiteering.

BRITAIN STILL LEADS IN MERCHANT SHIPS

Lloyd's Shows 16,345,000 Tons to Our 9,773,000—World's Net War Loss 7,473,000 Tons.

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

LONDON, Aug. 6.—Great Britain maintains the lead in the world's shipping, although the margin of superiority has been vastly reduced by the United States shipbuilding output and the losses due to the war.

In the new edition of Lloyd's Register, which is the first issued free of censorship since the beginning of the war, the race between this country and the United States is clearly shown. It demonstrates that, in spite of competition from the American side, Great Britain's advantage, in bigger ships particularly, is high, although the tables are incomplete in so far as they do not take into account the distribution among the Allies of 1,788 German boats which at the date of the armistice had not been captured or requisitioned.

United Kingdom	18,892,000	16,345,000
British Dominions	1,632,000	1,863,000
United States (seagoing)	2,027,000	9,773,000
United States (Great Lakes)	2,260,000	2,160,000
France	1,922,000	1,962,000
Holland	1,472,000	1,574,000
Italy	1,430,000	1,258,000
Japan	1,708,000	2,325,000
Norway	1,957,000	1,597,000
Sweden	1,015,000	917,000
World's total	45,404,000	47,897,000

By means of an intricate calculation Lloyd's has summarized the net results of the war on the world's merchant steam tonnage as follows:

LOSS OF WORLD SHIP TONNAGE.

British	5,202,000
Foreign, except U. S.	9,000,000
Total	14,202,000
Net gains U. S. tonnage	6,729,000
Net world loss	7,473,000

GOVERNOR STARTS LIVING COST INQUIRY

After Conference with Mayor He Names Glynn and Finley to Investigate.

MAY CALL LEGISLATURE

Extra Session Depends on Developments—State to Aid in Distribution of Army Food.

ALBANY, Aug. 6.—Ex-Governor Martin H. Glynn and John H. Finley, State Commissioner of Education, were named by Governor Smith tonight as a committee to inquire into the high cost of living in this State. The Governor also announced that should the committee develop any information that would warrant it, he would call an extra session of the Legislature to take such action as might be deemed necessary.

The foregoing announcements followed a conference which the Governor had today with the Mayors or their representatives of a number of cities relative to the best manner in which municipalities might take advantage of the War Department's distribution of foodstuffs. It was agreed that the cities should appoint citizen committees to finance the purchase of foods and supervise their sale.

Subsequently the Governor announced that immediately after the conference he had communicated with the War Department at Washington and had been informed that the department would consign to cities, or to committees appointed by Mayors, the surplus army foodstuffs on thirty days' credit, with the right to return whatever they were unable to dispose of without cost.

The Governor has announced that he had instructed Adjutant General Berry to place motor trucks and State property generally, located in the various armories, at the disposal of the Mayors to aid in the food distribution.

Governor Smith's letter appointing Messrs. Glynn and Finley as investigators contained the following instructions:

"I request you to inquire into the entire question of the cost of the production of food products and of their distribution; into the transportation, storage and marketing of food products; into the storage of food products in both public and private warehouses in this State, and to investigate the methods of the control of the roduction of food and its marketing the distribution, if such control exists, and into any illegal or unfair practices that exist in controlling the production, sale and distribution of food and other necessaries of life.

"I request you to report to me the results of your inquiry and if, in your opinion, conditions can be remedied under existing laws, and if so, how, and if not, why. If in your opinion existing laws are inadequate, I request that you suggest wherein they are so, and what changes, if any, should be made to make the laws effective, and suggest any new laws deemed necessary.

"To the end that your inquiry may be complete and that you may be able to report conditions as they exist, I suggest that, if you deem it advisable, you call upon me to exercise such powers as I possess as Governor to assit you in uch inquiry."

Mayors or their representatives of the following cities attended the conference: Albany, Troy, Schenectady, Utica, Syracuse, Auburn, Jamestown, Elmira, Newburg, Poughkeepsie, Yonkers, Buffalo and Glens Falls.

WASHINGTON, Aug. 6.—The War Department's telegram, sent in response to the inquiry made by Governor Smith of New York was as follows:

"The War Department announced on Saturday, Aug. 2, through the press, that it would ship surplus subsistence supplies to all municipalitie on consignment on order from the Mayor, goods to be paid for or returned within thirty days after receipt. Prices quoted are F. O. B. point of shipment, municipalities to pay freight on all goods sent and all goods returned.

"The minimum quantity which can be ordered has been reduced to standard case or carton lots. This ruling, in addition to previous authorization for sale to municipalities due to the fact that some municipalities owing to character restrictions are not able to purchase for resale.

"It is the desire of the War Department to make it possible for all municipalities to participate in the distribution of this surplus. Your interest and assistance is appreciated."

DAY TO HANDLE FOOD SALES.

Deputy Commissioner of Public Markets Jonathan C. Day was formally designated by Mayor Hylan yesterday to take charge of the surplus army food sales which will begin in the schoolhouses of the city some time next week. Deputy Commissioner William W. Smith will act as receiver of the food, Deputy Commissioner William P. Mulry will supervise the distributing centres, and the personnel will be in charge of Deputy Commissioner Edwin J. O'Malley. Deputy Commissioner Laura A. Cauble will conduct the publicity campaign.

When Commissioner Day was asked what effect he thought the sale of food would have upon the retail market prices he said he did not think there would be an appreciable reduction. The amount to be sold, he said, was too small and the period too brief to have anything more than a passing effect, although he thought the sale would be a good thing for the people.

The prices of the various commodities have not yet been sent from Washington, and until this is done the city cannot place its order and shipment cannot begin. Therefore the date of the sale is dependent upon the receipt of these prices.

SCHWAB ANSWERS SUIT OF DE BOBULA

Pleads Justification in Replying to Nephew-in-Law Who Seeks $100,000.

REVEALS SERIES OF LOANS

Contends That Plaintiff's Financial Transactions Merited Language on Which Charges Are Based.

Charles M. Schwab filed an answer in the Supreme Court yesterday to the suit of Titus de Bobula, an architect, with offices at 10 East Forty-third Street and living at 170 West Seventy-fourth Street, who married Mrs. Schwab's niece, to recover $100,000 for alleged injurious statements. De Bobula alleged that Mr. Schwab stated at various times that he (de Bobula) was dishonest and incompetent and that on Aug. 7, 1918, in the presence of Mrs. De Bobula and others, he said:

"Bob is dishonest, and I would give a million dollars if he would jump out of this window now."

In his answer Mr. Schwab denies that he spoke maliciously or that he intended to injure the plaintiff, but in justification of his language he sets forth a series of financial transactions involving loans to the plaintiff, one of which was to enable him to avoid being sent to prison.

Mr. Schwab says that de Bobula called the attention of himself and his attorney to a bankruptcy referee's report directing him to return $24,855 to the Pressed-Asbestos Products Company and stated that "unless he got assistance he would be imprisoned because of his inability to make payment. Mr. Schwab had his attorney examine the report and found that it was based largely on the plaintiff's own testimony and that he really was "in a scheme to rob and loot the corporation." He advanced $6,831 to the plaintiff up to Jan. 2, 1918, to aid him in the settlement of claims arising out of the corporation, although he had previously advanced $13,000 to de Bobula for the use of the company.

Mr. Schwab says further that in June, 1916, de Bobula represented that he wanted to engage in a building operation in the Bronx and to acquire property to erect the Shakespeare apartments. The plaintiff prepared estimates of the cost and told the defendant that if he could have a loan of $11,000 he would repay it in a year and would ask no further assistance. He has never paid the money.

The answer further states that de Bobula incorporated the Peerless American Products Co., which took title to the property subject to mortgages and began to erect the apartment house. In March, 1917, he represented that he couldn't proceed without further assistance and Mr. Schwab advanced $13,500 and took a junior participation certificate in the building loan mortgage. Later de Bobula asked more help and got $14,000 additional.

Mr. Schwab states that notwithstanding these payments the plaintiff couldn't complete the building, and liens and judgments were filed against it. The premises sold for less than enough to pay the claims, Mr. Schwab said, and at the request of the plaintiff and to enable him and his wife to save their equity, he aided them to incorporate the Transit Building Corporation to buy in the property. He took in payment mortgages aggregating $139,000 representing all his advances except $11,000. The plaintiff told him on March 22, 1916, that he was heavily indebted again, and showed a statement of personal debts of $15,000, claims of $14,000 against the Peerless corporation and of $8,000 which the plaintiff had guaranteed. He represented that he could settle then for $21,745 and asked a loan of the sum and $600 for office expenses and Mr. Schwab gave it to him.

Mr. Schwab states finally that on Aug. 7, 1918, prior to the interview with Mrs. de Bobula on which the suit is based, notwithstanding the fact that he had made all the advances referred to, and that Mrs. de Bobula was receiving $500 a month income from a trust he created for her, the plaintiff said he was still indebted and the apartments were not yet finished. He asked the defendant to give him $12,000 more, to waive the payment of $3,960 interest coming due, and asked Mr. Schwab to sell him for half the value $55,000 of the $139,000 mortgages on the apartments. Mr. Schwab gave the plaintiff all he asked in reliance on his written agreement, "pledging his solemn word of honor that under no circumstances whatever would be again ask assistance from the defendant, directly or indirectly, or communicate in any way with the defendant or any one connected with him," except to pay the interest due on the mortgages.

In view of these assertions Mr. Schwab contends that his language concerning the husband of his wife's niece was justified.

IDENTIFY 3 OF DEAD IN RARITAN EXPLOSION

Government Investigators' First Official List Contains Names of Ten Missing Since Mishap.

BONHAMTOWN, N. J., Aug. 6.—The first official list given out today at the Raritan Arsenal by the Adjutant, Lieutenant L. R. Jeffords, contains the names of ten men missing since the explosion Monday. All are civilian employes. Of this number three have been identified as among the seven bodies recovered from the ruins of the magazine and freight car.

According to the Adjutant's report, the three known dead are: J. Besary, 192 New Street, New Brunswick; George S. Tuzik, 272 Oak Street, Perth Amboy, and L. S. Clair, Stelton. The seven bodies have been taken to the morgue of William F. Harding at New Brunswick. The two men who were injured are reported as improving.

The missing, in addition to the three identified as dead, are: William Dougherty, 244 Somerset Street, New Brunswick; A. Dunham, 186 Seaman Street, New Brunswick; P. Annatides, 99 Church Street, New Brunswick; Lawrence Schaefer, 218 Augusta Street, South Amboy; E. Bedard, 80 Jersey Avenue, New Brunswick; Alex Bergoforowski, Main Street, Saverville, and M. Zraneak, Catherine Street, Sayreville. According to Coroner William F. Harding, three of these have been identified as dead, but their names are not on the list of dead given out by the Adjutant. They are Dougherty, Dunham, and Schaefer.

Major Gen. C. C. Williams, Chief of Ordnance at Washington, who is in charge of the investigation, said that no statement will be made until the investigation is completed. The officers did say that the damage was entirely confined to one magazine and the freight car which was being unloaded from it preparatory to shipment.

Coroner Harding said today that the foreman in charge told him that he had occasionally had to go into some of the magazines to brace up the buildings, which showed a tendency to sag, and that he saw the magazine at which the explosion occurred sag just before the explosion. Mayor Frank Dorsey of Perth Amboy has sent letters to all Mayors in this vicinity requesting that they get together to take action to have the danger removed. The Board of Aldermen of Perth Amboy last night passed a resolution calling upon United States Senators Edge and Frelinghuysen and Congressman Thomas J. Scully to take up the matter with the War Department. Mayor Dorsey says that there are 3,000,000 pounds of TNT at Camp Raritan now.

Allies Still Intend to Try Kaiser in London

LONDON, Aug. 6.—The Allies have not altered their decision to hold the trial of the former German Emperor in London, Andrew Bonar Law, Government leader, announced in the House of Commons today.

He said no action in the matter could be taken until the German Peace Treaty was ratified.

HOOVER WON'T RUN ALLIES' COAL POOL

As a Foreign Problem, He Thinks Europeans Should Have Entire Control.

HIS PROPOSALS ACCEPTED

Allies Will Try Regulation to Overcome a Shortage of 25,000,000 Tons Every Month.

By CHARLES A. SELDEN.

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

PARIS, Aug. 6.—Herbert C. Hoover received an urgent appeal today from the European allies that he assume the Presidency of the European Commission on Coal Control, which has just been established on his advice. Mr. Hoover positively refused to serve, not so much on the personal ground that he is in a hurry to finish his present duties and get home to California, as because he considers the coal situation on this side of the Atlantic a purely European problem which Europeans ought to solve for themselves.

"According to the coal facts furnished to Europe by him (the facts already sent to America for publication by Mr. Hoover) Europe is now suffering from a coal shortage of 25,000,000 tons a month. Europe expected that this matter, of course, would be made up by American shipments. Now Mr. Hoover has convinced them that America cannot send more than 1,000,000 tons a month under the present condition of limited port facilities, tonnage, and the fact that the United States is furnishing practically all the coal supply for South America which formerly came from Europe.

Because of these difficulties, Mr. Hoover has urged the allied nations to tackle the coal problem themselves by organizing an interallied commission on production and distribution. There is ample coal in Europe if Europe would only cease quarreling about it long enough to dig it. The present shortage of 25,000,000 tons a month is due entirely to the low average productivity of labor, way below normal, and to the practical nonproduction in the coal fields for the future possession of which European States are now quarreling.

LONDON, Aug. 6.—Picture Lloyd George and Bonar Law seated on three-legged wooden stools beside a stream with a notice board reading, "Fish here for Ambassadors." Lloyd George has rod in his hand, and the taut line encourages him to cry, "Hooray, we've got a nibble." Bonar Law remarks: "Bet it's a whacking big one." In the background Uncle Sam, basket on arm, is stroking his chin with a perplexed air.

This cartoon in the Evening News set all London laughing today, both because of its whimsical caricatures and of the point conveyed. There is much speculation as to the "gentleman" to whom Bonar Law, in the Commons yesterday, referred as the best man possible for the embassy at Washington.

The London Times suggestion of Admiral Sir David Beatty, who is soon to be created an Earl, does not find general acceptance and if it should turn out to be true the selection of the gallant sailor for the most important post in the diplomatic service would be regarded as a Governmental failure.

The name of Viscount Grey, whose sight is failing rapidly, is most frequently mentioned today as best answering Bonar Law's description and Asquith's is also suggested. Lord Reading, H. A. L. Fisher and Speaker Lowther are in the second rank of favorites in the speculative betting, with the first named heading the list.

The Times says editorially:

"Bonar Law yesterday held out the prospect that 'the best man possible' may be found to accept the position of British Ambassador to the United States. All things have an end, and if the country waits long enough there will doubtless be an end also to what has become a national, nay, an international scandal. Apparently the Prime Minister has now an Ambassador in pectore. Whether he is locked up in a box we are not told, but we cannot be sure. Neither can we be sure he will not die of asphyxiation before Parliament serves on the Government in regard to him a writ of habeas corpus.

"Frankly, we do not believe the Government has given this important matter one tithe of the attention it demanded. We believe they have been influenced by a dozen minor considerations and presumed expediences rather than by the imperative consideration of securing without avoidable delay and without other thought than that of national interest the best man for the post. Candidatures by the dozen have been canvassed, some of them so manifestly inadequate as to fortify the suspicion that the size and importance of this appointment has never been fully appreciated. At a time when issues of the utmost moment may depend upon the nature of Anglo-American diplomatic intercourse it is little short of a betrayal of trust that the Government should so long have dallied with the selection of an Ambassador to Washington, and unless Bonar Law's 'best man possible' proves to be on production an entirely satisfactory choice, which could manifestly not have been made earlier, the record of the Government in this respect will be added to many other existing proofs of their unfitness for their trusteeship of the nation's interests."

Underwood Hearing Today.

The examination of Frederick D. Underwood, President of the Erie Railroad, set for yesterday, was adjourned until this morning by Municipal Court Justice William T. Croak at New Brighton, S. I., at the request of Arthur Simonson, associate counsel for Underwood. Underwood was arraigned Saturday on a charge of disorderly conduct in his test case of the Staten Island ferry boat line's return trip rule.

FINDS NON-RESIDENT TAX IS PARTLY VOID

Federal Judge Knox Calls Discriminatory Sections of the State Law Unconstitutional.

DOES NOT AFFECT STATUTE

Opinion in Connecticut Firm's Suit Does Not Pass on Power to Levy on Incomes.

SEES LOSS CLAUSE UNFAIR

Court Specifies Deductions Not Permitted to Those Living Elsewhere.

In an opinion made public yesterday Federal Judge John C. Knox stated that the new personal income tax law of the State was unconstitutional so far as it discriminated against non-residents. The opinion was the result of the action instituted by the Yale & Towne Manufacturing Company of Connecticut, which sued to enjoin State Controller Travis from compelling the company to deduct the amount of the taxes from the salaries of their employes enployed in this State.

The company complained that if it withheld money due its employes it would be subjected to suit for restitution, that it should not be forced to act as a collecting agent for the State, and that the collection or withholding of money due by its employes under the tax law would entail a large expense. It also contended that the law violated the Constitution of the United States because it burdens and interferes with commerce between the States, and deprives the citizens of Connecticut of immunities and privileges enjoyed by citizens of New York.

In his opinion Judge Knox dealt only with the constitutional questions. He said in brief that the citizens of New Jersey and Connecticut employed by the company in this State are discriminated against mainly because the law deprives non-residents of the exemptions of $2,000 and $1,000 allowed to unmarried and married citizens, respectively, of this State, and because it does not permit them the same exemptions for children, nor the same release from paying a tax on money lost in business ventures in this State.

Sees Nonresidents Exempt.

Counsel for the complainants construed the decision to mean that unless the law is amended at the next session of the Legislature, and the amendments made retroactive, that non-residents will be freed from paying any personal tax to the State for the current year. Other lawyers said that the decision only invalidated those sections declared by the court to be unconstitutional. Governor Smith has stated that if any section of the law were found to be invalid for any reason it would be amended when the Legislature meets in January, and that the income which it was expected to raise would not be affected in any way.

A motion made by Controller Travis to dismiss the suit was denied by Judge Knox, which leaves the complainants free to proceed in their attempt to be freed of the necessity of collecting the tax. It was estimated that there are at least 250,000 persons living in adjoining States who do business in this city alone, and that many more are employed in other sections of the State.

Judge Knox said that the provisions of the tax law which discriminates against non-residents "are unconstitutional and void," but that "nothing herein, however, is meant to be decided as to the validity of the statute as far as it relates to residents of the State of New York. Neither that question nor the question as to the power of the State to lay a tax upon non-resident citizens of another State, based upon their earnings in this State from personal service rendered, need, in view of my decision, now be considered."

Judge Knox described the various provisions of the law, and gave the date when it went into effect, May 4 last, and explained that under the law the complainants, with other employers of non-resident help, would have to serve as withholding agents of the tax due by their employes, and then his opinion stated:

Finds No Precedents.

"That a State possesses practically unlimited powers of taxation within the realm of its jurisdiction, save as circumscribed by constitutional limitations, is elementary and income taxes are no exception. The outstanding question in this litigation is whether the act as drawn transgresses upon the equal privileges and immunity provisions of the Federal Constitution. If it does, I need go no further. So far as decided cases upon this precise question go, there appear to be none."

To illustrate the discrimination the law makes in favor of residents of this State as against residents of other States, the opinion said:

"Two persons are employed in this State by the plaintiff. Their work is in all respects similar, and each receives a salary of $2,000 per annum. Assuming that each employe is married, one living with his wife in New York and the other living with his wife in Connecticut, the resident of New York would be exempt from taxation but the resident of Connecticut would be subject to a tax of twenty dollars."

The opinion illustrated another form of discrimination by showing how a resident of this State under the law could deduct losses from his income in any transaction for profit even if not connected with his regular business, but that a non-resident would be taxed on the money he lost. The opinion says that "no State shall make or enforce any law which shall abridge the privileges or immunities of citizens."

INJUNCTION ISSUED AGAINST JOHNSON

American League President Forbidden to Stop Yankees from Using Mays.

CASE TO BE HEARD TUESDAY

ASK CLUB OWNERS TO MEET

The American League Baseball Club of New York last night obtained a temporary injunction from Justice Robert L. Luce of the Supreme Court of the State of New York, Part II., restraining President Ban Johnson of the American League or any of his agents or employes from interfering with the performance of the contract between the Yankees and Carl W. Mays, the pitcher who recently came to the club through a trade with the Boston Red Sox. The injunction also restrains Johnson or any of his agents from interfering with the established schedule of games between the New York club and other clubs of the American League.

The action is returnable before Part I of the Supreme Court on Tuesday, Aug. 12. The order means that Mays can pitch with the Yankees against either St. Louis or Cleveland, the two clubs scheduled to play here between now and Tuesday. Copies of the injunction were served last night on Umpires Owens and Connolly, who will officiate at the games here, and also on Manager Jimmy Burke of the St. Louis club. It will be served on Manager Tris Speaker of the Cleveland club when he comes to this city Friday.

President Jacob Ruppert of the Yankees last night sent out a telegraphed invitation to the owners of all the clubs in the American League and to President Ban Johnson to come here on Monday, Aug. 11, for a meeting at the Biltmore Hotel. President Ruppert and his partner, Colonel T. L. Huston, will make this eleventh hour appeal to the club owners for a peaceful settlement of the difficulty which threatens to shake the national game.

Mays Contract Submitted.

The injunction was obtained on the affidavits of President Harry H. Frazee and Manager Edward G. Barrow of the Boston club, of which Mays was a member before being traded to New York; also on the affidavits of Secretary Harry Sparrow and Charles H. Tuttle of the Yankees, and on the affidavit of Mays.

The contract of Mays with the Boston club, which was transferred to New York in the trade, was also submitted. This shows that Mays received a salary of $8,000 a year for pitching for Boston. Mays states in his affidavit that he left the Boston club to go to his home on affairs of a personal nature, and when Manager Barrow telegraphed him to come back to the club Mays says:

"I telegraphed him (Barrow) in effect that I could pitch with my arm, but I could not pitch with my heart and soul, which every person has got to do if he pitches winning games in baseball."

Mays's affidavit goes on to state that he met President Frazee in this city and they talked over his matter. Frazee received Mays's explanation as satisfactory, the document says, and asked him if he wanted to be traded to another club. Mays said he did, and when Frazee asked him what club he wished to be traded to, he answered New York. He told Frazee that he could not give the Boston Club his best services.

Mays also states that at no time has he ever received from the league or from the Boston or New York Club any notification that he had been suspended.

President Ruppert said last night that he would make a last attempt to settle his differences with Johnson in a peaceful, friendly way, if the club owners and the league President accept his invitation to meet here Monday.

"If we do not reach an amicable settlement at that time," said Colonel Ruppert, "we will fight this case to the last ditch. We must protect our property rights and will do everything in our power to bring about a satisfactory adjustment on Monday."

Ruppert's Telegram to Owners.

Colonel Ruppert's invitation to Johnson and the club owners, sent last night, was as follows:

Under compulsion of the action of the President of the American League as to the Mays controversy we have, under advice of counsel, been obliged to initiate legal proceedings to enjoin him, or any club influenced by his threats, from doing acts to the irreparable injury of our organization and yours as well, when the occasion should arise in your case. Now that these proceedings have been begun, we desire to meet you in the most friendly spirit, and accordingly invite you, as we have invited the other clubs of the American League, to discuss the subject fully with us at the Hotel Biltmore on the 11th day of August, in order to lay before you information which will make it abundantly clear to you that our action was essential for the protection of our respective interests in our several club organizations, and for the welfare of baseball. We have likewise invited the President of the American League to be present at such meeting. Kindly reply. JACOB RUPPERT.

We have sent the following communication to all the clubs of the American League. We invite you also to be present to hear what is said and also to be heard if you so desire.
JACOB RUPPERT.

Colonel Ruppert also made the following statement last night after the injunction had been granted:

The issues that have compelled us to take this action are vital to the future of baseball, and have arisen and are bound to arise so often that they must be settled at once in the interest of the property rights of the clubs, the personal rights of the respective clubs and of fair play to the players themselves.

The action of the President of the League in suspending a player in violation of the American principle of a fair hearing and of overruling without notice the decision of the Boston club that the player had done nothing amiss, makes the issue unavoidable. We have sought in vain to avoid court action by laying the facts before the President, and we now trust that by the meeting we have called further litigation may be avoided.

If, however, our expectation in this respect is disappointed, we propose to defend what we believe to be the essential interests of this great sport by insisting on principles which we consider fundamental in this country. We are confident that the public will understand and support the action we are taking, and will welcome every sincere effort to rid the sport of arbitrary action detrimental to the interests of the clubs and players.

The affidavits of President Harry H. Frazee and Manager Edward Barrow of the Boston Red Sox are included in the document.

Before Mays met me in New York I had not known the facts regarding his going from Chicago to Pennsylvania. I had taken no action in regard thereto. His explanation concerning his difficulties in his personal affairs satisfied me. I concluded that his act did not constitute desertion or furnish grounds for suspension or for any discipline whatsoever. My club, which had been solely affected by his acts, thereupon paid him his salary to date.

Subsequent to the time Mays went from Chicago to Pennsylvania a number of clubs negotiated with the Boston club for him. On July 12 Charles Comiskey sent me the following telegram: "Understand you intend disposing of Mays. Would appreciate if you would give me opportunity to deal for him either cash or trade. What is your proposition? Regards.
"CHARLES A. COMISKEY."

On July 26 Comiskey sent me the following telegram: "Wire received. What proposition have you to offer on Mays. Might make some deal involving players and cash. Let me hear from you. Appreciate an opportunity to deal for your pitcher."

On July 26 Manager Barrow received a telegram from Hugh Jennings as follows: "Have no players to give for Mays. Will consider cash proposition. (Signed) HUGH JENNINGS."

Affidavit by Barrow.

The Chicago, Cleveland, St. Louis, and Detroit clubs negotiated with me regarding a deal for the services of player Carl W. Mays. The Chicago club, on July 13, 14, 15, through President Comiskey and Manager Gleason; the Cleveland club, on July 16, 17, 18, 19, through President Dunn and Manager Fohl; the St. Louis club through Secretary Quinn, over the long distance telephone on July 20, and the Detroit club, through President Navin and Manager Jennings, on July 21, 22, and 23 at Detroit; and also with Manager Jennings over the long distance telephone to Cleveland on July 25.

Manager Huggins of the Yankees was a happy individual last night because he is now at liberty to pitch Mays if he needs him. He would not state last night whether he expected to use the famous underhand flinger in the double-header against St. Louis today or tomorrow. He may save him for Cleveland on Saturday or Sunday. As Cleveland is in the fight along with the White Sox, Yanks, and Detroit, the Cleveland series, which opens here on Saturday, will have an important bearing on the flag race.

The Mays case has turned the baseball world topsy-turvy ever since July 13, when the pitcher left the Boston Red Sox in Chicago. After he left the club and it became known that Frazee was willing to part from him, Chicago, New York, Cleveland, Detroit and Washington started a lively bidding match for his services. All the telegrams received and telephone conversations which Frazee had with these clubs are part of the evidence in the case and will be submitted at the hearing on Tuesday.

New York was the successful bidder, because it was Mays's desire to play with the Yankees. As soon as it was announced in the newspapers that Boston had traded Mays to New York for Pitchers Russell and McGraw and another player to be delivered later and a sum of money said to be over $25,000, President Ban Johnson suspended Mays indefinitely, on the ground that five clubs of the American League objected to New York negotiating with a player, who, it was alleged, had violated the League's rule of discipline. Johnson conferred with the owners of the Yankees here last Sunday night and refused to lift the suspension. Johnson left town suddenly on Tuesday, without any further communication with the New York Club.

CARDS AGAIN TAKE MEASURE OF GIANTS

Fred Toney Pitches the Entire Game, Then Collapses from Heat—Score Is 8 to 4.

ST. LOUIS, Aug. 6.—The path of the Giants through the West continues to be beset with disappointment and defeat. The despised tail-end Cardinals, who were looked upon to furnish balm for the wounds inflicted by the Reds at Cincinnati, are themselves maltreating the pennant chasers of McGraw. This afternoon the tribe of Rickey made it two straight against the erstwhile league leaders, pounding out a comparatively easy victory by the score of 8 to 4.

Fred Toney went the entire route for the home team, pitching up to his usual fine form most of the time, then suddenly lapsing into a spell of ineffectiveness. He got away badly in the first inning, when Rogers Hornsby smashed out a home run with a runner on first base. Then he went along like a champion up to the fifth inning, allowing only two singles in the interim. In the fifth the Cardinals nicked him for four hits, one a triple by Milton Stock. In the seventh two clean singles and a trio of scratch hits combined to send three runs over the plate.

Collapsed After Game.

In the Giants' dressing room after the game Toney was stricken ill, a result of the extreme heat, and a physician was called to attend him. He had not complained during the game, but his ineffectiveness in the fifth and seventh innings led to the belief that he had been affected since the early part of the contest.

Rickey used three pitchers, though none of the trio was hit very hard by the Giants. Oscar Tuero allowed only one single in the first three innings but he showed signs of poor control by handing out three passes and hitting a batsman. When the first two Giants to face him in the fourth inning cracked out clean singles Rickey withdrew the Cuban and substituted Frank Woodward, who finished the fourth inning and pitched the fifth. Woodward gave way to a pinch hitter at the start of the home fifth and Elmer Jacobs finished the game, allowing the Giants only four hits in the last four frames.

Rogers Hornsby was the main factor in the victory of the Cardinals. He started the home team on its way to victory with a homer in the first frame that accounted for two runs. He carried over another run in the fifth inning rally, and in the seventh, with the bases filled, he smashed a single to left that chased two more runs across and killed the last chance of the Giants to hold the Cards in check.

The Cardinals chased two runs across in their half of the first. Shotton and Smith were easy outs on pop fouls to Chase and Snyder, respectively. Stock worked Toney for a pass and Hornsby followed with a drive to the fence in deep centre field for a home run. Stock scoring ahead of him. McHenry then nicked Toney for a single and stole second but was left when Clemons grounded to Fletcher.

The first New York run drifted over in the second inning. Kauff opened with a pass and reached second on Zimmerman's infield out. Baird singled to left, and Shotton's quick return held Kauff at third. Baird being nailed when he tried for second on the throw-in. Snyder was hit and started to steal second, Kauff scoring while the catcher was being run down between first and second bases.

Giants Tie Score.

In the fourth McGraw's men tied the score. Fletcher opened with a single to right and Chase drove a single to left. The ball slipped out of Tuero's hand as he started to pitch, and both runners advanced on the balk. At this stage Rickey removed Tuero and sent Woodward to the hill. The newcomer walked Kauff and the bases were filled with none out. Zimmerman's long fly to Shotton allowed Fletcher to score, but the other runners could not advance. Baird forced Kauff at second with a grounder to Hornsby and Snyder ended the inning by striking out. It was a poor finish after filling the bases before a batsman had been retired.

The Giants went to the front in the fifth, only to lose the lead in the home half of the same frame. With one out, Burns walked and went to third on Young's single to right. Fletcher hit to Woodward and Burns beat the latter's throw to the plate. After Chase had fouled to Clemons, Kauff lined a single to centre and Young hurried home with New York's last run.

In the Cardinals' fifth Sherdell batted for Woodward and singled to centre. Shotton's single to left sent him to second and Smith sacrificed the pair along. Stock tripled to left and both runners registered, tying the score. On Hornsby's grounder to Zimmerman Stock was run down, Hornsby reaching second on the play. He scored on McHenry's single to left.

REDS FURNISH FUN FOR THE DODGERS

CINCINNATI, Ohio, Aug. 6.—The Brooklyn Dodgers took the bit between their teeth this afternoon at Redland Field and leaped all over Pat Moran's League leading Cincinnati Redlegs. Like a steam roller, the Brooklynites swept before them the opposition that the Reds offered, and made the leaders in the championship struggle take on the appearance of tail-enders. In three riotous innings the Dodgers accomplished all their afternoon's work. When the smoke of battle cleared from these three frames, the first, second, and third, the game was sewed up beyond recovery in the visitors' batbag. Brooklyn's advantage at the end was 6 to 1.

Leon Cadore, Manager Robinson's mainstay in the box, was the prime mover in the League leaders' downfall. Leon pitched one of his best games of the season, and kept the Reds absolutely under his spell from start to finish. Not once did the Moranites really threaten to score on the Dodgers' star, although Eddie Roush managed to get as far as third base in the fourth with two down.

Ivan Olson and Jimmy Johnston contributed to the successful Brooklyn day with brilliant stickwork. Each player got three hits that were timely and productive. In the field the team played sterling ball behind Cadore and presented a defense that was impenetrable until the ninth, when Griffith's muff was followed by a fumble by Olson. The latter error, however, didn't figure in the score.

While Cadore was making the Reds play dead, jump through a hoop, and otherwise play the rôle of decidedly docile League leaders the Dodgers were unleashing a heavy artillery barrage that reverberated over Redland Field and the vicinity. A former Giant twirler and a former Yankee pitcher felt the weight of the Dodgers' assault before quiet was restored through the medium of Adolfo Luque, a Cuban importation. Luque came on the scene in the third frame, after Slim Sallee, the Higginsport Sheriff, who formerly gave his efforts in the cause of the Giants, and Ray Fisher, erstwhile Yankee slabman, had been knocked to every part of the lot. The Cuban pitcher with his funny windup checked the Brooklyn onslaught and pitched airtight ball during his reign on the mound. He was relieved for a pinch hitter in the eighth, and Gerner finished the game without attracting any trouble.

All told, Manager Moran utilized fifteen of his players in an effort to prevent the landslide. Among them was Charlie See, a new Red acquisition who played Rube Bressler's position in left field after the fourth.

Chuck Ward started the second with a single to left. Zack Wheat died by the air route to Roush and Cadore doubled to left, sending Ward to third. Olson got his second hit of the game, a single to right, which scored Ward and Cadore, Ivan taking second when Neale fumbled the ball. Sallee here was ejected and Ray Fisher summoned to duty. Johnston greeted the former Yankee with a single to centre which scored Olson.

Hy Myers skied to Roush, starting the third, and then Big Ed Konetchy singled to centre. Ward singled to left, sending Konetchy to second, and as Mack Wheat was being disposed of at first, both runners moved up a peg. Cadore bounced a single off Daubert's glove to right, scoring Konetchy and Ward. Olson singled to center, sending Cadore to second and Fisher was sent to the showers. Luque pitched to Johnston and was nicked for a single to centre, which jammed the base paths with runners. The Cuban, however, averted disaster by making Griffith hit weakly to Daubert, who quickly relayed the ball to Luque, covering first.

Griffith muffed Groh's fly starting the ninth and the foundation was laid for Cincinnati's lone tally. Roush forced Groh at second with a grounder to Johnston and then Neale dumped a single in right which sent Roush to third. From this station the Feds' centrefielder registered on Kopf's sacrifice fly.

TIGERS DEFEAT SENATORS.

Jennings's Men in Second Place by 4-1 Victory at Washington.

WASHINGTON, Aug. 6.—Detroit took the second game of the series here today, 4 to 1. Harper was batted hard at times while Leonard was effective in the pinches. By winning today's game the Tigers went into second place in the American League pennant race, breaking the tie with the Cleveland Indians. The batting of Judge, who got four singles, was a feature. The home team had eleven runners left on the bases.

KEATING WINS OWN GAME.

Pitcher's Home Run Gives Braves 2 to 0 Score Over Cubs.

CHICAGO, Aug. 6.—Ray Keating's drive, which bounded through a hole in the fence and went into the bleachers for a home run with a man on base, decided a pitching duel between Alexander and Keating, Boston winning 2 to 0, and making it two straight over Chicago. The locals were able to make three scattered hits off Keating, while the visitors bunched two of their hits in the inning in which they scored.

COX HORSES WIN IN STRAIGHT HEATS

McGregor the Great and Mignola Outclass Their Fields in Races at North Randall.

CLEVELAND, Aug. 6.—McGregor the Great, owned and driven by Walter R. Cox of Dover, N. H., won the $3,000 Press Stake for 2:17 trotters, the feature event of today's Grand Circuit meeting at North Randall. Cox made it two straight when he drove Mignola to victory in the 2:07 trot. Both horses completely outclassed their fields and won in straight heats at prohibitive odds.

After winning the first heat of the 2:12 pace yesterday, Double G., the favorite, succumbed today to Tenna, a rank outsider in the betting. After Double G. finished a poor eighth in the second heat Valentine was substituted for Sturgeon in the sulky in the third heat, but Double G. could not finish better than fourth.

Miss Darby, swimming unattached, also won the 100-yard back-stroke in 2:00 4-5. Her time in the half-mile—which really was about five-eighths—was 20:43 4-5.

TEN MARKSMEN TIE IN CALDWELL MEET

CALDWELL, N. J., Aug. 6.—With Colonel William C. Harllee executive officer of the match, firing the first shot, the competition for the Leech Cup began on the navy rifle range this afternoon. There were 350 entries. Shooting today was at the 800-yard target. Tomorrow shooting will be at the 900-yard range and Friday at the 1,000-yard range.

The Ohio civilian team is out for a record. Every one of the seventeen members of the team is entered in the Leech Cup contest and the members say they will enter in all other matches. They are after the grand aggregate prize.

Two teams arrived today, the West Virginia and Montana Civilians. The former was captained by H. D. McClintock and the latter by Carl Magni.

Probably never in the history of the national matches have three brothers competed against each other for the individual championship of the United States, which will be shot off on the navy rifle range. Three Spooner boys, all officers in the United States Army, will oppose one another at the targets. Lieutenant L. S. Spooner, a member of the A. E. F. team that has just reported at the range, won fifth place in the inter-allied tournament recently held at D'Avours range, Le Mans, France. Lieutenant L. H. Spooner of the Field Artillery, who has just returned from twenty-one months' service in France, and Captain C. T. Spooner, Quartermaster of the Camp Funston, Kan., rifle team, are also competing.

Three hundred and fifty men participated in the 800-yard event today. Ten tied for first place, handing in perfect scores. They shot seven shots each, hitting the bullseye and counting five at each shot. These men were:

KUPCHIK DEFEATS JAFFE.

Chajes Also Wins in State Chess Tourney at Troy.

Special to The New York Times.

TROY, N. Y., Aug. 6.—A. Kupchik of New York, champion of the Manhattan Chess Club, improved his position in the annual championship tournament of the New York State Chess Association at the Chess Club of Troy today by defeating Charles Jaffe, also of New York, in the second round. Kupchik, playing black, defended a Ruy Lopez with the Morphy variation. Jaffe enlivened the proceedings by a bold line of play, which, however, led to an even ending. In this Kupchik proved his superiority, and he scored after 72 moves, bringing his total up to 2½ to ½.

The other game was between Oscar Chajes and J. Bernstein, also a Ruy Lopez, Chajes playing black. Bernstein did not play up to form and lost in forty-two moves. Jaffe then finished his game with Bernstein in the third round, winning a Ruy Lopez after sixty-seven moves. This gave Jaffe second place with a total of 2—1, Chajes following with 1—1, and Bernstein with ½—3½.

VOSHELL CONQUERS CALIFORNIA COMET

SEVEN PLAYERS SURVIVE

Special to The New York Times.

NEWPORT, R. I., Aug. 6.—The stanch admirers of the once great Maurice McLoughlin received another shock today when the California comet lost to S. Howard Voshell in the third round of the invitation tennis tournament at the Casino by a score of 6—3, 5—7, 7—9, 6—2, 6—2. The Brooklyn southpaw thus became one of seven survivors to reach the round before the semi-finals, the others being C. J. Griffin, W. T. Tilden, 2d, R. N. Williams, 2d, Ichiya Kumagae, W. M. Johnston, and W. F. Johnson. Rain interrupted the play in the middle of the day, leaving national champion R. Lindley Murray and N. W. Miles one round behind the rest of the field, with the doubles event stormbound in its opening stages.

Voshell's victory over McLoughlin can scarcely be put down as a surprise. He had been picked as the winner by the majority of the players, and at no time during the match did he seem in real danger of defeat, although the ex-champion once led by two sets to one. The left-hander was confident of success before he stepped on the court, and he never really lost command of the situation, although running into some peculiarly bad luck on several occasions.

McLoughlin, no longer a comet or even a fixed star, put up a game fight against a man distinctly his superior along the lines which formerly were his own supreme possession—service, volleying and overhead play. There were flashes of the old McLoughlin in his forehand drive, and occasionally the Californian killed a lob with something of his customary finality. But consistent speed was no longer there, and the softer game did not have even the merits of steadiness and accuracy to commend it. Voshell himself was inclined to be erratic, mixing some bad errors with his brilliant shots. He always had a distinct edge in serving, for in this department McLoughlin could produce only a faint imitation, slow and awkward, of his former cannonball delivery, whereas the lefthander's service had speed and sharp breaks, and he was able to deliver the ball fairly consistently to his opponent's weak backhand.

Upsets McLoughlin's Service.

Voshell upset McLoughlin's service at the very start and then took a love game on his own delivery. But the Californian squared the games when he was presented with two successive double faults, only to lose again when Voshell passed him cleanly for a 3—2 lead. Service then alternated in winning to the close of the set, which went to the metropolitan champion at 6—3, the final point coming when Voshell placed a beautiful low lob to the extreme corner of the court.

The winner continued his aggressive tactics and led up to 5—3 in the second session, when McLoughlin staged a magnificent pull-up and took four games in a row for a 7—5 decision, squaring the match. The third set also went to deuce games and was even harder fought. McLoughlin had the winning point in sight at 5—3, but Voshell pulled out a deuce game and then tied it up at 5—all. He broke through for the odd at 7—6, but McLoughlin again came from behind and won the set, 9—7, with a run of three straight.

But this was the old champion's last stand. Voshell came back from his rest supremely confident and smothered his rival in the two sets necessary for victory, both being scored at 6—2. His volleys were his chief weapon in this merciless attack, and he followed his service to the net whenever possible, cutting off McLoughlin's returns in spectacular style.

To the small crowd that stood in the drizzling rain to the finish watching the downfall of America's most popular tennis player the wonder was only that he had been able to stand the gaff for the full five sets, instead of losing, as seemed likely at the start, without a set to his credit. Voshell meets Clarence J. Griffin tomorrow for the honor of a semi-final bracket.

William T. Tilden, 2d, and Watson M. Washburn were awarded the honor of playing before the buzzing grandstand this morning, and they proved themselves worthy by putting on a scintillating exhibition of fast back-court driving, the former winning in four sets, 6—4, 4—6, 6—3, 10—8. Washburn has seldom shown such tennis as he flashed today, his usually machine-like game suddenly becoming animated with energy.

Washburn's drives had remarkable speed and opened the way for volleys and overhead shots of startling accuracy. Against this rare skill Tilden was forced to use everything at his disposal, and he responded nobly to the challenge. Contrary to his usual custom, he depended largely on speed, discarding his chop-stroke, except by way of occasional variety, and exchanging drives, backhand and forehand, with complete abandon. He refused to try his fortunes at the net, knowing well that Washburn's accuracy was fatal to volleying, and as a result there were long rallies in which both players drifted up and down the base line, pounding the ball to the opposite corners, and waiting for the mistake which would permit a quick finish at close quarters.

With all his strokes working well from the start Washburn speedily gathered a lead of 4—1 in the opening set, only to see his opponent pull up with one of his characteristic brilliant streaks, taking five straight games for the set, 6—4. Washburn again led at 4—2 in the second session, but immediately lost his advantage when Tilden broke through his service for a love-game, ending with a terrific drive, and then tied it up with his own fast serves and placement shots. Washburn, however, served himself into the lead again at 5—4, and then broke through for the set, 6—4, finishing with two marvelous passing drives, after being forced back of his base line by Tilden's lobs, and making several sensational returns of hard smashes.

Tilden Outdrives Rival.

Tilden got the first game in the third set when he made it 3—2 on Washburn's service, a double fault and a splendid pass adding to the upset. The Harvard man equalized matters at once when Tilden netted two volleys, one error coming right after he had made a spectacular backhand pickup, Tilden finally throwing away the love game with a double fault. The Philadelphian came back with still another break for a 43 lead, introducing a clever chop for the final point, which Washburn volleyed out. Tilden outdrove his rival for an increased advantage of 5—3, and then beat Washburn's delivery once more for the set, 6—3, a succession of nets losing for the server.

The final set found Washburn a trifle weary, but still resisting valiantly. He upset Tilden's service at the start, and led up to 3—1 by wonderful control of his fast forehand shot. Service won for the Philadelphian, who proceeded to make it 3—all by mixing chops with his drives, although Washburn once saved himself with an astonishing volley at the side. Tilden served a love game for the 4—3 lead, and Washburn tied it up again at 4—all, making a timely smash of a lob, which almost beat him. Great volleying and a remarkable passing drive gave Washburn the break at 5—4, but Tilden got back the game by forcing his opponent into more netting. The match point came up with Tilden leading, 6—5 and 30—40 on Washburn's service, and a beautiful passing shot seemed destined to end the set.

Washburn Saves Himself.

Washburn made a desperate backhanded stab, however, and somehow dug up the ball, dropping it just over the net for the deuce point, and then pulling out of danger on successive nets by Tilden. Service won alternately up to 8—all, though Tilden missed an opportunity to finish the game by an ill-considered poke at an easy ball in the air. He was lucky on his next service, trailing at 15—40 and "vantage out," but emerging safely on Washburn's errors. The latter led at 40—0 in the final game, but deuced the points with errors and a double fault, after changing racquets because of a broken string. A placed shot at Washburn's feet introduced the match point again, and, when Washburn barely returned a net-corder, Tilden cleaned up at 10—8 with a quick poke which the loser volleyed into the net.

Tomorrow's program brings Tilden and R. N. Williams, 2d, together in what should be one of the greatest battles of the meeting.

Garland Makes Williams Work.

From the players' point of view, however, today's feature match was the meeting of Williams and C. S. Garland, and those who were not in action crowded around the clubhouse court to see how much of an argument the Yale Captain could give the 1916 champion. They were not disappointed, for Garland ran through the opening set for a sensational 6—1 victory, and gave Williams plenty of trouble before letting the three sets go at —4, 8—6, 6—4.

Williams was wild at the start, losing his opening service with a double fault, and missing a number of easy volleys, while Garland's game worked from the outset in the mechanically perfect style that he has developed this season. Up to 4—0, the former champion failed to score, and his lone tally came on a grouping of Garland's rare errors. He netted a volley from mid-court for the 5—1 advantage and dropped the set on his own service by flubbing a simple backhand volley.

Williams was a different player in the remaining three sets, and the rest of the match scintillated with spectacular rallies, in which the great exponent of tennis audacity always had a slight edge, as his control of the ball became more and more dependable.

Almost Flawless Tennis.

Williams, in the third and fourth sessions, played almost flawless tennis, exhibiting great speed and accuracy. Garland led in the third set at 3—0, 4—1, and 5—2, but brilliant and courageous play saved the set for Williams at 8—6. After breaking through early in the final set Williams was never headed, although the struggle was close to the end.

Williams ....1 5 1 3 4 2 0—16 1

C. J. Griffin was given a surprise by the veteran J. S. Cushman, who took the second set of their match at 6—4, after holding the Californian to the same score in the opener. T. C. Bundy also succeeded in making W. J. Johnson work for his victory, carrying the third session to 10—8 by the steadiest of defensive play before succumbing in straight sets. Kumagae had an easy time with Alex Gravem and Wallace Johnson of Philadelphia advanced by the default of W. P. Burden, being bracketed with W. M. Johnston in the semi-final round tomorrow, weather permitting.

AUSTRALIANS DUE TODAY.

Tennis Stars Will Leave for Newport for Tournament There.

Officials of the United States National Lawn Tennis Association were notified yesterday afternoon that the Adriatic, on which the Australian tennis team is traveling, will dock this morning. The visiting players, who are Norman E. Brookes, Gerald L. Patterson, Randolph Lycett, and R. V. Thomas, will be met by George T. Adee, Julian S. Myrick, and other officials of the national association. If the landing is completed in time for the visitors to catch an early train to Newport it is thought that they will leave in time to play there this afternoon.

Various invitations from tennis clubs in all parts of the country who desire to entertain the visitors will be given them upon landing, but their itinerary will not be determined for some days. It is thought likely that they will play in the national doubles next week and then go to Southampton, before the singles championship starts at Forest Hills the week of Aug. 25.

CONLEY IS MEDAL WINNER AT SIWANOY

Plodding with steady foot through the water-soaked fairway, and putting with steady touch on the heavy greens, G. L. Conley, Westchester champion, playing over his own home course, won the medal in the qualifying round of the Victory Tournament at Siwanoy yesterday with a card of 39—36—75. It was good putting that brought him home in front. J. W. Sweetser of Ardsley, the young medalist at Apawamis, trailed Conley with a 78. The Ardsley golfer spent too much time on the fifth hole, where by journeying from the tee to the green via sundry bushes and ditches he accumulated an 8. He partly made up for this on the very next hole, taking a 2, but a few lapses in putting in the second half left him three strokes behind the ultimate winner.

Ned Sawyer and John G. Anderson, both playing from the home club, and both former runners-up in the national amateur championship, were well to the front with a pair of 80's. Reggie Lewis of Wykagyl, former Westchester champion, also turned in a card of 80, and C. E. Van Vleck of Greenwich had the honor of leading the field for quite an extended period with his card of 41—38—79.

Conley played consistent golf going to the turn, but he got into trouble twice, at the second and the fourth holes, taking two over par on each. He arrived at the turn with a 39 and proceeded to better that mark on the inward journey. He was in the rough on his drive from the tenth, but should have had a 4 in any case, missing a fairly easy putt. He played par golf to the fourteenth, where he took three putts, but on the sixteenth he made up for this by taking only one for birdie 3. The seventeenth he played very well. His drive hooked into a poor lie, and it took a magnificent shot with his second to put him left of the green. He chipped on, sank his putt, and got a par 4. He played the eighteenth in par 5 nicely. His card:

Out ....4 6 3 5 5 3 4 5 4—39
In ....3 3 4 3 5 4 3 4 5—36—75

Oswald Kirkby Retires.

It was Oswald Kirkby of Englewood, metropolitan amateur champion, who furnished the high lights in yesterday's tournament. He was not scoring particularly well for a golfer of his calibre, but at least he stood on the ninth tee with a par 4 for a 41 on the outward journey. He played into a trap, however, and in coaxing the ball out of the trap he used more force than diplomacy, for it shot high into the air and not only landed on the roof of the clubhouse, but stayed right there. Kirkby excused himself to his partner, and entering the clubhouse he was seen to emerge on the upper balcony. He made one swing at the ball, and after running around wildly looking for some avenue of escape it apparently gave it up as hopeless and settled in a little gutter on the balcony. Again Kirkby hit the unresisting ball, and after playing the "Devil's Tattoo" on all the uprights in the railing it finally popped through and dropped into a hedgerow.

Thinking the worst was over, Kirkby descended, reappeared on terra firma, and looked under the hedge for his ball. Instead of finding it on the ground, however, he discovered that it was wedged into the thickest part of the bush about eighteen inches off the ground, and in a position that demanded not a niblick but an ax to get it out. He and his caddie searched his bag, and not finding any ax therein he picked his ball up and retired as an active competitor. However, he finished out his round with Anderson, and though he had two balls out of bound, he came back in 37, a mark as good as anything in the tournament.

A. E. Hedley of Siwanoy also enlivened the dull, rainy day with his exploits. He played golf for the first nine holes, coming to the turn with a 43. Right then he ceased to play the royal and ancient game, and took up another pastime which the London "bobbies," when they arrested American soldiers for this high crime and misdemeanor, called "shooting the craps." On the tenth, eleventh, and twelfth holes Hedley's score was 7—11—7. The 11 was on a short par 3 hole, and was gathered in this wise: He put his tee shot into a trap to the right of the green, into which he descended with a heavy heart and a heavier niblick. He found that some one had been there before him and had left a deep hole, at the bottom of which the ball was nestling. One terrific swing moved the ball an inch and a quarter. Another got it out, but to Hedley's horror it rolled across the green without stopping, and into a similar trap on the far side.

Back to First Trap.

Two very fine strokes in this trap sent the ball back again to its original position in the first trap. By this time the Siwanoy golfer had warmed up to his work, and he surely made the sand fly! Stroke after stroke he took, sand flew in every direction, and finally, to the surprise of every one, the ball came out, stayed on the green, and Hedley went down in two putts for his 11. Three men and a boy were summoned with wheelbarrows and spades, and, having erased all signs of the struggle in the traps, the play was resumed.

Over 120 golfers started in the tournament, and there was a tie at 89 for last place in the first thirty-two to play for the Victory Cup. H. L. Phillips and O. E. Carlson of Siwanoy, W. M. Townsend of Shackamaxon, and Dr. C. M. Adams of Williamsport were tied at 89, and played off in the rain and darkness from the first tee. There were three places, and one player was to drop out. It turned out to be Dr. Adams, who took a 6 after getting into various troubles on his way to the green. The scores:

MISS LOUNSBERY BEATEN.

Favorite Is Off Form in Shenecossett Golf Match.

Special to The New York Times.

NEW LONDON, Conn., Aug. 6.—There was one great surprise in the women's Shenecossett championship when, in the first round of match play, Miss Beatrice Lounsbery, yesterday's medal winner, was beaten by Miss A. E. Stumer of Chicago. Miss Lounsbery did not play within a dozen strokes of her score on the first day, and it was quite evident that her nerves had not settled from last night's automobile accident, in which Miss Elaine Rosenthal, Miss Kate Bomann, and herself were thrown from a motor car which had been hit by a train. Miss Rosenthal defeated Miss Bomann, the little Plainfield champion, who hobbled around the links with the support of a cane and was too game to quit even when it began raining several holes from the finish.

The other stars, Mrs. W. A. Gavin of New York and Mrs. Ronald Barlow of Philadelphia, experienced no trouble in their matches, winning by wide margins. Mrs. Gavin met Mrs. Myra Patterson of Englewood, who a few years ago would have given Mrs. Gavin a hard battle, but was hardly equal to the task today. Mrs. Gavin played steadily and won by 6 and 5. Mrs. Barlow defeated Mrs. Eberhardt Faber of Sleepy Hollow by 7 and 6. The Philadelphia star moved along at a steady rate, but was never extended.

The summaries:

CHAMPIONSHIP DIVISION.—Miss A. E. Stumer, Ravinslow, defeated Miss Beatrice Lounsbery, Bedford, 3 and 2; Mrs. F. C. Rian, Cranford, defeated Mrs. J. D. Armstrong, Montclair, 7 and 6; Miss Glenna Collett, Metacomet, defeated Mrs. C. N. Bicknell, Cleveland, 7 and 5; Mrs. Ronald Barlow, Merion Cricket, defeated Mrs. Eberhardt Faber, Sleepy Hollow, 7 and 6; Mrs. W. A. Gavin, South Shore, defeated Miss Myra D. Patterson, Englewood, 6 and 5; Mrs. C. J. Ahern, Dwight, Ill., defeated Miss Lois Stumer, Ravinslow, 4 and 3; Mrs. Ralph Hammer, Flushing, defeated Mrs. A. G. Wooley, Hartford, 8 and 7; Miss Elaine Rosenthal, Ravinslow, defeated Miss Kate Bowman, Plainfield, 6 and 5.

YEARLING BRINGS $25,000.

Highest Baby Price Since 1889 for Son of Sunstar-Marion Hood.

Special to The New York Times.

SARATOGA, N. Y., Aug. 6.—A record price for a yearling in recent years was realized tonight at the sales conducted here by the Fasig-Tipton Company when Captain P. M. Walker paid $25,000 for a son of Sunstar-Marion Hood, the colt being a full brother to Sunbonnet. The price paid tonight was the largest since King Thomas brought $40,000 as a yearling in 1889.

The bidding tonight for the Sunstar colt was very brisk and was participated in by several well-known horsemen. Montfort Jones kept raising the bid until he reached $10,000, when George D. Widener, Samuel D. Riddle and Robert L. Gerry entered the competition and carried the price upward until it reached the figure at which Captain Walker took the colt.

The next best price realized at the sale was $11,000, which was paid by Captain Walker for a colt by Short Grass-Ellangowan. Max Hirsch, bidding for his employer, George W. Loft, went as high as $10,000 before he let the colt go to Walker.

Some good prices were also realized for the four yearlings from the Waylands Stud. These brought a total of $26,600, or an average of $6,500 each. The best figure for any of the four was $9,300, paid for a filly by Ultimus-Torpenhow. The successful bidder was W. H. Karrick, who was presumably bidding for his employer, W. R. Coe.

MUSGRAVE IS REINSTATED.

The Jockey Club Lifts Ban on Rider Who Was Suspended in 1915.

Special to The New York Times.

SARATOGA, N. Y., Aug. 6.—The Stewards of the Jockey Club today reinstated Jockey Phil Musgrave, who was suspended in the Autumn of 1915 for an unsatisfactory ride on Frederick L. at Laurel. Musgrave had been engaged under a two-year contract by Samuel Ross, who filed the contract with the License Committee and opened the way for the lifting of the suspension.

KRAMER HAS BROKEN RIB.

Veteran Cyclist Ignorant of Condition for Five Days After Injury.

NEWARK, N. J., Aug. 6.—Frank Kramer, American bicycle champion, is suffering from a fractured rib. He sustained the injury in a fall while riding at Providence last Friday. Kramer did not realize what happened until he went out on the golf links at Forest Hill here yesterday. He took a hefty swing at the ball and dropped in his tracks. The club physician wrapped the injured side tightly and Kramer is able to be about, although the injury pains him quite a bit. Kramer was supposed to ride Ray Eaton a match race at the Velodrome here tonight and had to cancel it.

HISSES FOR JUDGES AT SARATOGA TRACK

Storm Breaks When Herodias Is Placed Before Fruit Cake—Kinnoul Wins the Albany.

Special to The New York Times.

SARATOGA, Aug. 6.—The patrons of racing here today had some excitement besides that provided by the running of the Albany Handicap, which was the feature on the card, and their own efforts in picking mud runners. A glaring and almost unaccountable error by the judges in placing the horses in the third race brought out a storm of protest, which did not die out for the balance of the day, and resulted in awarding a victory to W. R. Coe's Herodias after the filly had been plainly beaten nearly half a length by A. K. Macomber's Fruit Cake, which was an odds-on favorite.

Had it been really close there would have been room for doubt and some justification for the decision, but as the two contenders finished it was so plain that Fruit Cake had won the race that C. H. Pettingill and E. C. Smith, who were the officials, were the only ones who could be found to agree with the finish as it went down officially.

The race was for mares, three years old and upward, over a six-furlong route, and brought out only four starters, those besides the two named being Looking Up and Merry Princess. Because of her known liking for the mud, Fruit Cake was made a strong favorite and was very heavily backed. There was scarcely any attention paid to Herodias as a possible winner.

Herodias Sets the Pace.

The gray filly went to the front with a rush, as usual, and set a fast pace despite the heavy going. Fruit Cake and Looking Up took after her and, turning into the stretch, Fruit Cake drew up and challenged the leader. Slowly the Macomber filly came up until, within a hundred feet of the wire, she pushed her nose in front and in the next few strides was nearly half a length ahead of the contender.

The applause which went up with the supposed victory of the favorite was suddenly stilled when the numbers were placed on the board, showing that Herodias had won. Then there was a wait, as it was thought the judges would realize their mistake and make the necessary changes. But the numbers were soon made official and when the red board went up it was the occasion for jeers and hisses.

Looking Up, a filly that ran some good races in the West, lacked the speed to stay up with the flying leaders and took third rather easily from Merry Princess.

The Albany Handicap of $3,000 value, for two-year-olds, over a distance of six furlongs, proved a fine contest, despite the fact that it did not bring out the real topnotchers of the division, and was won rather handily by Walter M. Jefford's Kinnoul, which had been something of a sensation in Maryland last Spring. It was the first start for Kinnoul on the metropolitan circuit. He was one of the many horses which was ill with influenza and was unable to race during the Summer around New York. J. H. Shreve's Kalipolis took second, and Ral Parr's Paul Jones was third.

Man o' War Withdrawn.

The Albany usually attracts a field of the best youngsters, but it was an unfortunate circumstance this year that two of the headliners, Miss Jemima and Bonnie Mary, were not eligible. Man o' War was eligible, but his owners withdrew him from the race, as he would have been obliged to carry 137 pounds as the result of his last victory. They thought this was too much to ask of this colt. However, the field included, besides Paul Jones and Kalipolis, such good ones as Evergay and White Socks, both winners during the season.

Kinnoul was away rather poorly and was among the last to leave the post. Paul Jones rushed to the front, but Kinnoul soon showed his speed by coming from behind and, before the first turn was reached, he had gone into the lead and was drawing away from the others. Ambrose eased him up turning into the stretch and permitted the others to come up close to him. Paul Jones and Kalipolis took advantage of this move to make a challenge when they had been straightened out for the drive, but Ambrose had only been saving his mount and, when urged, Kinnoul drew away once more to win handily by nearly two lengths, with Kalipolis taking second from Paul Jones by a length.

The steeplechase event today resulted in a good contest, and was won by Mrs. F. A. Clark's Elysian in a rather close finish with Ral Parr's Robert Oliver. Elysian jumped well in spite of the fact that the course was wet and slippery, and was always in the lead. Robert Oliver was far back at one time, but Crawford brought the aged fencer up on the second time around, and had him almost abreast of Elysian at the last jump. The two raced nicely through the stretch, but Elysian was able to draw away at the finish and win.

Warm Weather Breeds Disease Germs

Deadly disease germs breed, thrive, and spread by the thousands in warm weather.

A serious epidemic spreading throughout your entire organization could easily start from a cuspidor, toilet-room, or some dark corner not properly disinfected.

Take precautions against this constant, invisible menace now, and continue to do so all through the summer.

Lysol Disinfectant
Reg. U. S. Pat. Off.

At the office: Order Lysol Disinfectant used regularly in cuspidors, toilet-rooms, dark corners, on floors, rugs, and all surfaces.

In the home: Have a solution of Lysol Disinfectant sprinkled regularly in sinks, drains, toilets, garbage cans, and wherever flies gather.

Remember, there is but one genuine Lysol Disinfectant — made, bottled, signed, and sealed by Lehn & Fink.

Lysol Toilet Soap
25c a Cake

FINANCIAL MARKETS

Those influences which brought about Monday's abrupt decline in the stock market were ignored or forgotten by speculators yesterday and prices were bid upward with as great a vigor as at any time during the advance of early July. It seemed as though easier money and increased offerings had much to do with the movement, for the call loan rate worked down to 3 per cent. after loans had been made and renewed in the morning at 6 and 7 per cent. Sentiment in the brokerage offices was more cheerful and the impression that the worst would not result from the railroad unions' demands was heightened by Washington dispatches, which quoted Chief Stone as saying before the House Interstate Commerce Committee that a general strike was not contemplated. Railroad shares were fairly prominent in the rise, although, as has been the case in all the advances of the year, the industrial group stood far in the lead. Tobacco, steel, rubber and automobile issues moved upward from 2 to more than 6 points, with buying most insistent in the last hour of business. Dealings were on a smaller scale than the day before, the result, in chief part, of moderate trading in the fore part of the session before speculation, for the rise had gathered confidence.

The cotton market also displayed a strong tone and improvement occurred in the grain and provision markets. In fact, advances in corn at Chicago were as sharp as those recorded on the local stock market. Doubtless there was a large volume of short covering purchases put through everywhere, but signs of heavy buying for the long account were clear enough. The reasons for the resumption of speculative activity were not altogether plain. The spread of the local traction strike supplied fresh developments in the current unrest of labor, and reports from major steel producing regions showed that production had been adversely affected during the last week by railroad strikes. The steel and iron industry thus far has been fairly free of disturbances, but trade discussion yesterday noted that a new uncertainty had been brought into the situation by railroad labor difficulties. The foreign exchange market was again brought sharply to the foreground as a factor of influence in the country's export trade. An expansion of offerings of bills acted to force the French rate down to 7.53, a decline of 21 centimes from Tuesday's closing quotation. The easing tendency of sterling, noted the day before, was extended into a reaction of 2¼ cents in the pound, the final quotation for sight drafts being 4.31. The other European exchanges also moved in favor of New York. The situation appeared to have no new angles, reflecting again the abnormal relation between exports and imports, and the delay in completing credit arrangements on a broad scale. While the extent of private financial agreements between foreign buyers and American corporations and firms cannot be estimated, it seems as though these have so far been more important than those handled directly by banks.

The Iron Age said that pig iron production in July had amounted to 78,340 tons daily, compared with 70,495 tons in June. Despite handicaps of recent developments the steel industry is evidently growing in activity and foreign orders are becoming more of a factor in the market. It would seem as though the steel trade is one which should not be apprehensive of an inquiry into prices, as relatively few advances have been made since the quotation list was revised in the Spring.

Market Shows Strength.

A decided display of strength was evidenced in yesterday's trading on the Stock Exchange. Following an early endeavor on the part of the bears to force prices lower there was a quick change of tone and with good buying a market factor the shorts were inclined to cover. In the minds of those who have steadfastly held to the long side during the last several days the market was considered as striking testimony that the break of Monday had been overplayed and that the prosperous industrial condition could not be ignored in stock market calculations. The toning down of the railroad demands on a restatement of the Brotherhood position in the matter had a stimulating effect, but more than this was the easing of money rates to as low as 3 per cent. When all is said the money market has been a disquieting factor for some time and high rates probably more than all else served to instill a fear of drastic action which might even take the form of a reassembling of the Money Committee. The market can at times ignore unfavorable news, but it cannot for long overlook prohibitive money rates.

German Credits.

Reports continue to be in circulation that Germany is arranging credits here, but as yet there has been nothing in the way of confirmation. It is logical to assume that credits will be arranged, and the knowledge that they must eventually come to pass may have given rise to the reports of their completion. It may be that the banks which would be involved hesitate to make the announcement that they are in communication with Berlin for fear of arousing antipathy. In the minds of some people, no matter how wise may be the course, or how necessary, there is a repugnance to the idea of lending money to Germany. Economic factors are overlooked. However that may be, credits will be established shortly, unless all signs fail, but the manner in which they are to be accomplished has yet to be determined. Certain it is that orders from Germany are in the local markets awaiting the fulfillment of credit arrangements before they are accepted.

Stock Dividends.

Apparently a number of companies are getting ready to announce stock dividends. Such announcements are not feasible at present owing to the doubt which exists as to whether such disbursements are taxable, and until this point is cleared up by a Supreme Court decision few companies would so disregard the interests of their stockholders as to make the actual declarations. In the case of large holders of stock the Government would take a heavy toll of the stock dividend, should it be decided that the dividend was subject to the income tax. At any rate stock increases are being proposed by several companies which have been in a position for some time to cut a melon. For the present, however, the stock, even though authorized, will remain in the treasury of the company.

Steel Shares in Demand.

There was good buying throughout the steel group yesterday, the leading issues recovering sharply from their low prices of the morning and closing the day with substantial gains. While the bull market was at its height the steel companies were laboring against adverse conditions, and except in occasional instances the market gains were not commensurate with the advances in other sections of the list. The same was true in a measure of the coppers. At the low yesterday, United States Steel was some 15 points above its low for the year. The buying of the steel shares on the decline has been described as of the best, and reports of business both at hand and in prospect are decidedly favorable. In view of this it was not surprising that there should be an orderly and substantial rally by the steel shares.

Copper Production Increasing.

The best sign in the copper industry, aside from the advancing price, is the greater confidence on the part of producers shown in a tendency to increase operations. It was maintained when copper was selling near the 15-cent level that production would be curtailed both because there was no profit to be derived and because the copper surplus tinged the situation in a manner that made for caution. Now, with the metal selling at 23¼ cents a pound, and with the surplus very largely eliminated, the recent figures indicate that production is gaining. Heretofore it had been attuned to meet demand and the only demand was that from this country, with a small infiltration of foreign orders. There is every reason to believe that before long the Copper Export Association will be doing a big business, for, aside from England, France, and Italy, European stocks are low or actually non-existent.

Two Strong Issues.

United States Rubber and Lorillard were two of the strongest issues in yesterday's market. The former advanced 14⅛ points and the tobacco stock 11 points. In the case of Rubber, rumors of favorable developments were current, the most tangible being a revival of the report that dividends on the common would be instituted before the end of the year. Lorillard is associated in rumor with Tobacco Products, it being said that the latter company has control and that a merger is in prospect. In recent trading the Lorillard shares have appeared to be in scant supply.

Better Now Than Later.

The consensus of opinion in banking circles seemed to be that it was fortunate that the issue of Government ownership should be brought up at this time instead of later on when the carriers have been returned to private operation and would have to bear the brunt of the fight against a nationalization of the country's transportation system. In the words of one banker: "I welcome the demands of the railroad men now. It is a good thing for the country and means an early settlement of the question."

Freight Rate Increase.

While it has been generally admitted that there should be an immediate and substantial increase in freight rates by the Railroad Administration, to offset advancing costs of operation, one of the most recent estimates of the increase necessary to meet the situation, which was 40 per cent., is considered as too high in some railroad quarters. At the same time it is admitted that the only adequate increase at this time would be 30 per cent., and sentiment is solid among the corporate managers for immediate action by the Director General of Railroads. While this is so, the majority of railroad men realize that for a time at least, or until there has been some definite action taken on the question of the high cost of living, a further increase in freight rates will probably remain in the background.

Bonds Irregular.

The bond market was characterized by dealers as irregular and "spotty." Some of the convertible issues reflected improvement in the market for stocks. Among these were Southern Pacific 5s and Chesapeake & Ohio convertible 5s. On the other hand, Baltimore & Ohio convertible 4½s and St. Paul convertible 4½s showed a net loss of more than a point. The average price for forty representative bonds reached a new low record for the year at 78.13, indicating that the trend of the bond market continues downward. At the end of each trading day so far this week the average price has been a new low for the year.

Rails Move Forward.

While the majority of the railroad stocks moved into higher ground there were one or two disappointing items outstanding. One of these was Atchison, which closed with a net loss for the day of three-quarters of a point.

ATLANTIC REFINING TO VOTE NEW ISSUES

Proposal Calls for $20,000,000 More Preferred and $45,000,000 More Common Stock.

WILL TAKE ACTION OCT. 6

The directors of the Atlantic Refining Company have proposed an increase in the capital stock of the company by issuing $20,000,000, 7 per cent., cumulative preferred stock, without voting power, and an increase in the common stock from $5,000,000 to $50,000,000. The stockholders will be asked to act on the proposals at a special meeting which has been called for Oct. 6. The entire issue of preferred stock has been underwritten by the Equitable Trust Company. The common stock, according to the announcement to stockholders, will remain in the treasury of the company "until such time as in the discretion of the Board of Directors distinct advantage will accrue to the stockholders through its issue, either in part or in whole." Atlantic Refining is the second of the so-called Standard Oil group to increase its capital recently, the Standard Oil of New Jersey having several days ago announced an offering of new stock.

Atlantic Refining is one of the highest priced of the Standard Oil group, the stock selling in the neighborhood of $1,400 a share. For a long time it has been considered probable that stock dividends would be declared by this company and the wording of the clause relating to the increase in common stock is taken to mean that the way is being prepared for such dividends. The balance sheet of the company shows that against a capital of $5,000,000 now outstanding there is a surplus of $50,000,000.

The subscription price of the new preferred stock will be $100 a share, payable either in full or in four monthly installments. It will be issued to present holders of the common stock on the basis of four shares of the preferred for each share of common stock now held. Application will be made to list the new preferred stock on the New York Stock Exchange, which is another digression from the former policy of the so-called Standard Oil Companies. The Standard Oil Company of New Jersey set the precedent in this when it announced its capital increase, the assertion being made that it would ask to have the stock listed on the New York Stock Exchange. Yesterday on a "when issued" basis the Atlantic Refining preferred stock was quoted at 110, but there was no quotation for rights.

The proposed new issue of stock is the first capital increase by Atlantic Refining since 1892. The company has no bonded indebtedness, and it has been the policy heretofore to finance its growth entirely from current earnings. In explaining the change in policy J. W. Van Dyke, President of the company, says:

"This policy cannot be further continued for at least two reasons: First, because of the lessened purchasing power of the dollar as compared with 1912, much more capital must be available in the business, and, second, because the assessment of large Federal taxes at the present time, and certainly for some future time to come, prevents the use of accruing profits for purposes of business as heretofore."

The last balance sheet of the company shows that the preferred stock will have behind it net assets totaling about $76,000,000. The total earnings of the company in the last four years amounted to $48,000,000, and against these were payments of Federal taxes of $16,384,000. The Federal taxes for 1918 were $12,000,000 from earnings of $19,610,000. The 1918 balance sheet shows current assets of $40,539,743, fixed assets of $28,642,280, and other assets of $8,036,309. Liabilities are placed at $21,295,451.

The new preferred stock is subject to retirement in whole or any dividend date after five years at $115 a share.

BUYS SUGAR CONCERNS.

Food Products Corporation Also Gets Molasses Alcohol Plant.

The United States Food Products Corporation, formerly the Distillers Securities Corporation, has bought five concerns which produce and distribute molasses and sugar. The companies are the Sugar Products Company, the Pure Cane Molasses Company of the United States, the Pure Cane Molasses Company of Canada, the British Molasses Company of Great Britain, and the Tres Company, Limited, of Great Britain. Julius Kessler, President, said yesterday that the purchase price was paid in cash.

The Tres Company owns five ocean tank steamers under the British flag, and the Sugar Products Company has a fleet of twenty ships of various sizes. The latter company owns receiving tanks and stations in Cuba, Porto Rico, Santo Domingo, and elsewhere. Mr. Kessler said that through these properties the Food Products Corporation has completed its facilities for obtaining molasses and other products at first hand and original cost, to be used in the manufacture and sale of animal feed. The corporation has also bought, it was learned yesterday, a molasses alcohol plant at New Orleans.

Coupon bonds in denominations of $1,000 and $500, registerable as to principal only.

Principal and interest payable at the office of Brown Brothers & Co., New York, the Fiscal Agents of the Loan, in gold coin of the United States of America of or equal to the standard of weight and fineness existing on July 1st 1919.

Payable without deduction for any Danish Governmental or municipal taxes or other Danish taxes present or future.

The Loan is to be repayable, by means of yearly payments of $750,000 in United States gold coin, to be made in the year 1925, and in each year thereafter during the life of the Loan. Such payments will constitute the sinking fund of the Loan, and are to be applied on July 1st 1925 and each July 1st thereafter to the redemption at par of bonds whose numbers are to be determined by lot.

The City may at its option increase the amount of any sinking fund payment.

Copenhagen, the capital of Denmark, is the chief seaport and leading commercial City of the Kingdom. Situated on one of the largest harbors of Europe at the entrance to the Baltic Sea, it holds a strategic position for world trade. The City has by far the most important Free Port in Scandinavia an advantage of much consequence in the commerce of Northern Europe. From 1895 when the Free Port was established to 1913, the last full year before the war, the annual tonnage entering Copenhagen increased from 260,096 tons to 1,801,299 tons. The population of the City is 550,000. This is nearly one-fifth the population of the entire Kingdom.

Loans of Copenhagen have always been held in high favor among European investors. In normal times these loans were issued at rates of interest of 3½% and 4%. The total debt of Copenhagen including the present issue is approximately $89,879,200. The debt of the City has increased relatively little during the entire war period. We are advised that no other foreign loan will be issued by the City within one year.

TREATY RESTORES OUR TRADE RIGHTS

Patents, Commercial Marks, and Copyrights Valid in Enemy Countries.

'WORKING' FAILURE EXCUSED

Americans Need Not Exploit Inventions for Two Years After Peace —Saves Them Millions.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, Aug. 6.—A formal statement of the effect on the interests of citizens of the United States of that part of the Peace Treaty which relates to industrial property was issued today by Breckinridge Long, Third Assistant Secretary of State.

This part of the treaty seeks to cover the readjustment of the rights of all belligerents in the matter of industrial property, including patents, trademarks, and copyrights, and is declared by Mr. Long to be exceedingly important to the people of the United States "since the rights in question very materially affect manufacturing, industrial, and financial interest throughout the entire country."

The statement, in part, follows:

"SYNOPSIS.

"1. The general system of industrial property rights as it existed before the war is restored insofar as suspended by the war, except in the special cases hereafter noted.

"2. American-owned industrial property rights in Germany (and other signatory countries) which have become invalid by reason of failure to pay annual taxes, or meet any formal requirements, may be revalidated.

"3. Failure to 'work' in Germany (and the other signatory countries) during the war is waived as a cause of forfeiture of industrial property rights, and, further, this period in which foreign working of inventions, &c., is not compulsory is extended to two years after the war.

Lifts Ban on American Patents.

"4. Americans who were prevented by the war from patenting their inventions, registering their trademarks, &c., in Germany (or other signatory countries) may do so now.

"5. Measures taken during the war by the United States by way of licensing or liquidating German patents are recognized as valid and remain effective.

"6. The right of the United States to impose conditions on German-owned industrial property if in future the national defense or public interest should require it, is reserved by the United States and recognized by Germany.

"7. The liability of the United States or those acting for it for infringements incident to the prosecution of the war is waived by Germany for itself and its nationals.

"8. License contract rights, and rights of Americans to sue for infringements committed during the war by Germany or Germans, are not surrendered by the treaty.

DISCUSSION.

"This part of the treaty covers the readjustment of the rights of all belligerent parties in the matter of industrial property, (patents, trade marks, and copyrights.) It is important to the people of the United States, since the rights in question very materially affect manufacturing, industrial, and financial interests throughout the entire country.

"Citizens of the United States more than any other belligerent country, are concerned with the readjustment of industrial property rights because as a consequence of the war such rights of American citizens had been gravely prejudiced in Europe, without any corresponding loss by European citizens in America. This, because patents in the United States are granted for an unrestricted term of seventeen years, without any requirement of taxes or invalidating conditions of any kind after the issue of the patent. Whereas in Germany, (and all European countries,) annual taxes are levied on patents and continuous exploitation there is required. Failure to meet these requirements is penalized by complete forfeiture of the rights.

"During the war Americans could not, under the conditions then prevailing, fulfil these obligations, even in allied countries. In Germany this was almost impossible after 1914 because of the allied censorship of communication before our entry into the war, and after that event because of the executive order of April 11, 1918, which absolutely forbade any further communication with the enemy by American citizens in the matter of industrial property rights.

American Patents Invalidated.

"The result was that all patents of American citizens in Germany had been invalidated by April 11, 1919, (one year after the said executive order,) for nonpayment of taxes, failure to manufacture, &c., and the condition, while not so extreme, was bad in the case of American patents in allied countries. This because under war conditions it was often impossible for Americans to manufacture in foreign belligerent countries. Therefore their patents were invalidated for nonexploitation. At the same time the validity of German (and Allies') patents in the United States was not affected because of the absence of such taxes and conditions in the American law.

"The treaty of peace remedies this condition by providing that citizens of any of the high contracting parties may renew their industrial property rights in any other signatory country within one year after the ratification thereof by fulfilling any requirement that may not have been met during the war period beginning Aug. 1, 1914. This permits citizens of the United States to reestablish their industrial property rights not only in Germany, but in all of the allied countries.

"In the matter of 'working' industrial property rights, Article 309 is especially advantageous to citizens of the United States, since by it they are excused for all failures to manufacture or otherwise exploit their inventions abroad after Aug. 1, 1914. And, furthermore, they are not required to exploit for two years after the conclusion of peace. The United States never required working, so it has been a one-sided burden on American inventors to exploit abroad, often requiring maintenance of a foreign factory. This will save hundreds of thousands of dollars, perhaps millions, that would necessarily have been expended without return by Americans to keep alive their vital foreign patents.

"During the war it was almost impossible for American citizens to file applications for patents in Germany: First, because of the allied censorship preventing their transmission, and secondly, because of the executive order dated April 11, 1918, which forbade such communication.

"The treaty relieves this situation by providing that applications on inventions made after Aug. 1, 1914, may now be made within six months after the coming into force of the present treaty.

"During the war the United States, through the Federal Trade Commission, granted licenses to American citizens to manufacture under German-owned patents in cases where there was a demand for the patented product. Later, the Alien Property Custodian liquidated a number of German-owned patents which were found to have been used as a basis for an oppressive commercial monopoly in the United States. Under the provisions of the treaty these acts of the Government of the United States are recognized as valid, continuing and unrevoked by the conclusion of peace.

"In view of what was learned during the war as to the improper use that has been made in the past by Germans of their patents in foreign countries, the treaty reserves to each of the allied and associated powers the right to impose, after the conclusion of peace, conditions or restrictions on the employment of German-owned industrial property in the respective allied countries, in cases where the national defense or the public interest may require.

"The United States has no legislation to put into effect this clause of the treaty, but it is considered important that the reservation is made and accepted by Germany, as, in case any flagrant abuse by Germans of the American patent system should arise in the future, the power to deal with it would have been reserved by agreement and could be put into effect by an act of Congress. Germany has always had such a reservation. Therefore the effect of this part of the treaty is to place the two countries on a potentially equal footing.

"During the war it was necessary for the United States Government to manufacture and use either directly or indirectly a great deal of material, such as explosives, ordnances, wireless, telegraphy apparatus, airplanes, &c., covered by German owned patents. Under ordinary peace conditions it would be necessary for the Government of the United States to pay to the owners of these patents many millions of dollars in the form of royalties, profits, or damages for this infringement.

Considers Royalties Intolerable.

"It has been considered by the commission intolerable that the Government of the United States should be required to pay to Germany or German citizens, royalty for the privilege of having used this property in the prosecution of the war which was forced on the United States by Germany. The case has been considered analogous to that of contraband property. In consequence, the treaty provides that no such claim shall be made against any allied or associated Government by Germany or German citizens.

"This clause is directed only to inventions used by the Government, or by citizens for the Government, incidental to the prosecution of the war, and does not extend to purely commercial inventions, which are not considered quasi-contraband class.

"The other Allies decided to cancel by the treaty of peace all contracts and licenses made before the outbreak of the war between citizens of their respective countries and Germany. They also decided to wipe out all reciprocal claims for infringement of industrial property rights during the war between their citizens and citizens of Germany, however arising.

"The objects and advantages of these two provisions were appreciated by the American delegation at the Peace Conference, but it was felt that they ought not to cancel any rights of American citizens. For example, if any American had a valid contract, made before the outbreak of war, with a German citizen and the American considers the contract of advantage and value, it was not believed that such a contract should now be canceled by the treaty merely as a matter of convenience.

"Likewise, if an American owns a German patent which has been infringed during the war by Germans, it is believed his right to sue for damages or profits is a property right which should not be taken away from him. In any case, should such a cancellation be made, it is believed American citizens would have a claim against the United States Government for the loss suffered."

OUTLINES BETTER TELEPHONE SERVICE

SYSTEM CRIPPLED BY WAR

Reorganization Plans Include Extensive Building Operations and Improvement in Operating Force.

That the telephone service in New York city has been badly disorganized and is still "far below the standard we set for ourselves," is the statement contained in a letter addressed to Public Service Commissioner Charles B. Hill at Albany, by F. H. Bethell, the First Vice President of the New York Telephone Company. Mr. Bethell recites in detail the work under way to bring the service not only back to normal but "to bring a greatly improved service to our patrons in New York City."

In a second letter, also made public last night, answering a letter of inquiry addressed to the New York Telephone Company by the Merchants' Association, Mr. Bethell replies in great detail to ten questions put to the company by the association, the questions being intended to bring out just what is being done to improve the service in this city.

After stating that the service has been disorganized and is still far below the required standard, Mr. Bethell adds in his letter to Commissioner Hill that the war stripped the company of facilities and personnel and that following the war, "reconstruction brought to a crippled system an unprecedented volume of traffic." All of these shortcomings, he adds, are due to the fact that in the judgment of the Government the telephone was a military necessity and that as a result the company was required to shape its course accordingly.

Additional Construction Needed.

There should be in the New York City plant, today, it is pointed out, no less than $25,000,000 in additional construction, all of which is needed to properly handle the traffic offered to the company. Mr. Bethell then calls attention to the fact that important new construction is already under way in the city, this construction including one new central office building in the Bronx, and two in Brooklyn, in addition to complete new switchboard units in four Manhattan central stations, and one central station in Queens. Plans are under way for two new central buildings in Manhattan and one in the Bronx, while extensive additions are to be made to three other Manhattan and one Queens central station. Extensive additions to existing switchboard equipment have been authorized for five Manhattan, six Brooklyn, one Queens, and one Bronx central station.

"The progress so far made with these projects has brought considerable relief and, but for the fact that the station gains have exceeded by far all previous records and the rate of calling continued away above normal, the plant congestion would no longer be serious. Based on pre-war experience the station gain for New York City for the year was placed at 40,000. The actual net gain for the first six months was in excess of 49,000. The gross gain exceeded 94,000, more telephones than there are in the cities of Buffalo and Albany combined. In New York City there are approximately 800,000 telephones, connected with eighty-seven central offices, originating 4,000,000 calls a day."

"The situation with respect to the operating personnel is steadily improving. Two increases in the wage schedules have been made since the beginning of the year, and during that period a net increase of more than 1,700 in the number of employes has been secured. We have in the operators' training schools at this time approximately 800 students, and, with net gains running now at about 125 a week, we should, within a very short time, have in numerical strength at least a force sufficient to handle the traffic in a satisfactory manner."

Answers Merchants' Association.

In the letter in which he answers the ten questions put to the company by The Merchants' Association, Mr. Bethell, in reply to Question 1, states that the company has on its payroll in Manhattan and the Bronx approximately 8,100 employes. To effectively handle the traffic offered, after making allowance for employes on vacation, the company should have, Mr. Bethell states, about 8,700 employes of average ability in these two boroughs.

RESIGNS AS BANK MANAGER.

James H. Perkins to Become Member of Montgomery & Co.

James H. Perkins, one of the executive managers of the National City Bank, has resigned to become a member of the firm of Montgomery & Co. It was learned yesterday that Mr. Perkins's resignation was handed in on the first of the month and that after a brief vacation he will assume his duties with Montgomery & Co. on Sept. 1.

Mr. Perkins came to the National City Bank some years ago from Albany as a Vice President, and while it is understood that his relations with the bank are most friendly, his resignation was not a particular surprise to the financial district following as it did the resignations of former President Frank A. Vanderlip and Vice President Charles V. Rich.

COUNSEL ARGUE FORD CASE.

Both Sides Make Requests of Judge for Charge to Jury.

MT. CLEMENS, Mich., Aug. 6.—Arguments of counsel bearing on the instructions which Judge Tucker is to give the jury took up today's session of the hearing of Henry Ford's $1,000,000 libel suit against The Chicago Daily Tribune.

Counsel for the plaintiff turned in 65 items which they requested the Judge to include in his charge to the jury while the defense tendered 98. The jury was not present.

Court was held two extra hours today to complete arguments on the status of Solomon Brothers of Detroit, who distributed 205 copies of the alleged libel and are co-defendants. That they distributed the alleged libel in ignorance and without malice, is not disputed. Much law was quoted by counsel for The Tribune to show that there can be but one verdict in the case—that the jury cannot assess damages against The Tribune and not against the Solomons.

In arguing on the Court's instructions to the jury, Attorney Murphy of counsel for Mr. Ford requested the jury be charged that the editorial headed "Ford Is an Anarchist" is libelous on its face and that references to the plaintiff in The Tribune as "an ignorant idealist," and "an anarchistic enemy of the nation" are also libelous. Mr. Murphy asserted none of the evidence presented by The Tribune tended to prove the truth of the alleged libelous editorial.

Attorney Long presented the requests of The Tribune. He argued that in considering the newspaper's characterization of Mr. Ford the jury should also consider "the violence of language used by the plaintiff as, for instance, stigmatizing professional soldiers as murderers."

Argument on the evidence will begin tomorrow.

COTTON ADVANCES AFTER POOR START

CLOSES 58 TO 75 POINTS UP

General Condition Improved Through Steady Buying by Spot Houses and Trade Interests.

After an irregular session, in the course of which future contracts again sold off on a sharp break in Liverpool prices, the cotton market closed yesterday with an advance of from 58 to 75 points from the preceding closing quotations. At the opening October contracts sold off sharply, following the receipt of advices that the Liverpool market was suffering from further heavy liquidation, and it was not until late forenoon that a better demand became evident.

Liverpool liquidation was attributed to sales by those who had bought heavily for speculation in June and July, but the steady improvement shown in the character of trading on the New York Stock Exchange, where money rates eased, served to offset this, and allowed a better volume of purchasing in contracts than had been seen for some time. Incidentally it appeared early in the afternoon as if the bulk of futures being offered in recent days had been absorbed, and speculative interest again turned to this market. The general condition was also improved through steady buying by local spot houses and other trade interests.

The advance continued until October contracts sold up 77 points from the preceding close, with December and January contracts also up 73 and 69 points, respectively. Later on there was considerable profit taking by those who bought at or near the low quotations on Tuesday or early yesterday, and did not care to commit themselves overnight. As a result the loss from the highs of the day ran from 5 to 15 points.

The question of a governmental cut in the cost of living again furnished material for consideration, but this was more or less submerged in the advance. Yesterday's quotations follow:

	Open.	High.	Low.	Close.	Previous Day.
Oct.	31.00	32.27	31.00	32.22@32.77	31.50

May	31.55	32.40	31.55	32.35@32.40	31.78

The local market for spot cotton was steady at 32.75c for middling upland, 75 points advance; sales, 300 bales. Southern spot markets were: Galveston, 33c; New Orleans, 31¾c; Savannah, 31@34c; Augusta, 31c; Memphis, 34½c; Houston, 32c; Little Rock, 32.75c.

Discuss Foreign Exchange Market.

The special committee appointed by the Association of Foreign Exchange Bankers to study and report on the condition of the foreign exchange market some weeks ago met yesterday to discuss the progress it has made. Earlier in the day it was reported that the committee would make its report to the association, but this was denied and it was stated that the meeting was one of committee members only for a discussion of the situation. It was also said that no report has been completed as yet.

CONDITION OF STEEL TRADE.

Weekly Review Sees Danger to Output in Strikes.

The possibility of strikes curtailing the output of iron and steel during the balance of the year is pointed to by The Iron Age in its weekly review of conditions and a new uncertainty is said to have entered the field. In discussing conditions the publication says:

Actual stoppage of pig iron and steel making by railroad strikes in the Cleveland and Chicago districts in the past week have given more weight to the possibility of curtailment by strikes in the steel industry itself. Blast furnaces and steel works operations of the American Steel and Wire Company at Cleveland have been largely suspended. At the South Chicago works of the Illinois Steel Company seven out of twelve blast furnaces are banked and at Gary fourteen out of forty-four open hearth furnaces are idle.

The unionizing of blast furnace and steel plant workers in the Pittsburgh and Ohio districts has shown no marked progress in the week, but the outlook is more threatening because of the railroad shopmen's strike, and a new uncertainty has entered into the prospect for the remainder of the year.

The increase in pig iron in July was pronounced, as was expected, the total for the month being 2,428,541 tons, or 78,340 tons a day, as against 2,114,738 tons in June, or 70,495 tons a day. The blowing in of furnaces kept up through the month, so that 239 were in blast on Aug. 1, as against 200 one month previous.

The Iron Trade Review says: "New business is more than keeping pace with the expansion of production. With one or two exceptions buying continues on a very liberal scale and receding deliveries and growing order books attest the strong position enjoyed by most products. Nevertheless a highly conservative attitude continues to be maintained with regard to price advances."

J. A. BRODERICK RESIGNS.

Leaves Federal Banks to Join National Bank of Commerce.

Joseph A. Broderick, Secretary of the Federal Reserve Board and Chief Examiner of Federal Reserve Banks, has resigned to become a Vice President of the National Bank of Commerce of New York. The announcement was made yesterday by the Federal Reserve Board and by the National Bank of Commerce. Mr. Broderick was a member of the original committee appointed by the Secretary of the Treasury to work out proposals for the technical organization of the Federal Reserve Banks. He was made chief examiner in August, 1914, and later succeeded H. Parker Willis as Secretary of the board.

Mr. Broderick was born in New York City thirty-seven years ago and began his banking career as an office boy with the old State Trust Company, which later became the Morton Trust Company. Eventually he became an examiner for the New York State Department and later went to Europe to study foreign branches of American banks and to apply a system of examination of foreign exchange departments which he had developed. Three prominent banks in this State were closed upon his disclosures of mismanagement and irregular practices and he assisted Charles S. Whitman, then District Attorney, in the preparation of the cases against the bankers responsible for the failures of these institutions.

FRENCH BILLS GO QUICKLY.

First $5,000,000 of Loan Absorbed Without Sale Effort.

The first offering of $5,000,000 French Treasury bills under the arrangements completed last week between the French Minister of Finance and a group of American bankers, headed by J. P. Morgan & Co., was quickly absorbed yesterday. The rate on the bills was 5½ per cent. This is the first actual open market financing in this country to be arranged for by the French Government, and the success of the initial bills put out, although the amount was not considered as a very severe test of the market appetite, was regarded as an indication that French Government financing of this character promises to be as popular as similar British Treasury bills.

It was learned yesterday that J. P. Morgan & Co. made no particular effort to sell the French bills, and that the demand for them was strong enough to take all that were offered within a short time.

Under the agreement between the French Minister of Finance and the American banking group, the issue of 60 and 90 day bills was not to exceed $50,000,000 with a maximum weekly maturity of not more than $5,000,000, the rate at which the bills are to be sold to depend upon local money market conditions.

In the case of the similar sale of British Treasury bills the rate has varied from 5 to 6 per cent.

Austin, Nichols & Co. Stock Offered.

Austin, Nichols & Co., Inc., have sold $5,500,000 cumulative 7 per cent. preferred stock to Hallgarten & Co. and William Salomon & Co., who are offering the shares at 98 and accrued dividends. This financing is incident to the absorption by the grocery firm of the canning business of Wilson & Co. The gross sales last year were approximately $38,000,000, according to announcement yesterday, and the consolidated net profits before providing for Federal taxes in the last fiscal year were $1,542,284. In addition to the preferred stock the company will have outstanding 137,000 shares of common stock without par value. Application will be made to list the stock on the Stock Exchange.

PRICES SHOW GAIN AGAIN.

Index Number for July Shows Increase of 4.3 Per Cent.

A pronounced increase in Bradstreet's index number of commodity prices is shown in this month's bulletin, the gain being 5.9 per cent. over June 1 and 4.3 per cent. over July 1, the hitherto high point of the index number. In discussing this the bulletin says:

"With fifty-three commodities out of 106 advancing, with thirty-eight more steady or unchanged, and with only fourteen articles declining, these movements accounting for the advance of ten out of thirteen groups during July, the index number of commodity prices has risen to a new high level, exceeding even the number ruling on July 1, 1918, just before the prices of cotton goods were revised by the Government.

"Such a price development is, of course, merely a reflection of the eager demand reported ruling for practically all commodities during the month just closed, a demand, by the way, which it is now freely admitted, was not in any manner affected by the successive and, in some instances, startling advances made during the month in quotations. That this great upward surge in prices should have acted as a curtain raiser, as it were, to the widespread revolt witnessed within the week against the prevailing high cost of living, is, of course, only a coincidence, but it nevertheless illustrates the sensitive nature of the price situation at retail, which, after all, probably merely re-echoes the movement of prices at wholesale as it has in past years, notably 1910, the year of the meat boycotts, and 1890, the year of the revolt against the so-called McKinley Tariff bill. In the spring of the former year, it may be recalled, there was a good deal of outcry against high prices; the 'back to the farm' idea received a big impetus, and a number of statesmen laid stress upon the excessive supply of gold as the guilty party in bringing about the very general advances shown not in meats alone, by the way, but in other farm products."

JUNIOR ACCOUNTANT, NOVEMBER, 1919;
SENIOR ACCOUNTANT, NOVEMBER, 1920.

November 15 to January 1 is the period during which one-fourth of the year's business changes, readjustments and building-up of staffs are made.

If you have a faculty for figures and the crude stuff for the making of an accountant; there is just about time between now and November 15 of this year for you to qualify for a Junior Accountancy position that will pay at least $35 a week.

And ample time to qualify before November, 1920, for position of Senior Accountant, Auditor, or Income Tax Expert, at a salary of at least $75 a week with possibilities of more than twice that amount.

FACTS AND FIGURES.

During the three months ending May, 1919, 715 men and women who are being given specialized vocational training by our institution received important promotions and salary increases aggregating $422,660. Our records show that 171 of these 715 members have completed, or nearly completed, their training, while 372 are not yet half way through.

It is only a question of raw ability and industry, a resolute purpose to devote five or six spare hours a week to intensive training in accordance with the most successful business training system ever devised, under the supervision of a corps of eminent Certified Public Accountants who are renowned as practical teachers.

Doing Away with the Frills

A LOT of men have a notion that a business statement is a pompous matter involving an adding machine and long columns of figures liberally sprinkled with technical names.

In reality, there is nothing involved or complicated about a business statement. It is merely a certification of facts. It can be as brief or as lengthy as you need to have it. It simply tells you what you ought to know.

It is the business of an auditor to produce a report—minus all frills and fancies—that will enable the executive to determine the status of an organization and the progress it is making.

CASHIER AND GUARDS ROBBED BY BANDITS

THIEVES ESCAPE IN AUTO

Five hold-up men, well dressed and with pistols, held up two men and a woman employed by Reisenweber's restaurant early yesterday morning as they were carrying the receipts of the night before from the roof garden on top of the Century Theatre at Central Park West, Sixty-first and Sixty-second Streets, to the main restaurant at Fiftieth Street and Eighth Avenue. The robbers made off with a bag containing $600. The robbery occurred at Sixty-first Street and Broadway. At Sixty-first Street and Central Park West an automobile was awaiting the hold-up men; they leaped into it, and the machine turned west on Sixty-first Street and was lost to view. Spiro Mavromatis, Reisenweber's cashier; Emil Krell, a steward, and May Haram, a cashier from the roof garden, composed the party who were attacked. Mavromatis carried the bag containing the money. As the trio reached Broadway after leaving the Century Theatre they were encircled by three men, one of whom stepped up and pointed a revolver at Krell's chest, while another covered Mavromatis. Krell started to grapple with his man, but was struck in the face by one of the party and dropped to the ground.

Ten men in charge of Captain Thomas Walsh of the Fourth Detective Bureau took up a search for the criminals. The number of the automobile had fortunately been obtained, and the police succeeded in tracing the car. At 2.30 yesterday afternoon Detectives Bailey, Donahue and, Moore of the West Sixty-eighth Street Station arrested the chauffeur, who gave his name as Charles Cohen, age 19, 165 East Ninety-eighth Street. He denied having had any part in the hold-up, and stated that he was engaged by three men half a block from Broadway just before the time of the robbery.

Another hold-up took place at Gunhill Road, near Bronxwood Avenue, the Bronx, when four men stepped from a hallway and accosted Nicholas Mallarde, a plasterer. They told him to hold up his hands. He started to run, calling for help. Four shots were fired at him, one striking him below the heart. He fell, but none of his assailants approached him, and it is thought that they were frightened off by a passing automobile.

$9,000,000 ON LEVIATHAN.

Gold Sent Abroad as Soldiers' Pay Returned Without Explanation.

Five general officers were among the 6,383 soldiers and civilians who arrived home yesterday on the transport Leviathan. The steamship also had on board $9,000,000 in gold which had been sent over to pay the soldiers and in some unexplained manner was brought back. The Leviathan also brought over thirty-one brides of soldiers. The largest unit on board was the 39th Infantry.

The general officers were Major Gen. John Biddle, former commandant of West Point, who was commander of all the American troops in England; Major Gen. William Lassiter, who had command of the 4th Division; Brig. Gen. Charles E. Dawes, who was President of the Central Trust Company of Chicago when he went into the service; Brig. Gen. Daniel G. Craig, commander of the 2d Field Artillery Brigade, and Brig. Gen. Charles H. McKinstry.

The body of Lieut. Commander Charles O. Maas, former naval attaché of the American Embassy in Paris, who died of pneumonia, was brought back under escort. Lieut. Commander Maas had lived at 157 West Fortieth Street in this city.

Captain Lewis McManee, who was canal adviser to the American Peace Delegation, was a passenger on the transport. He declared that the people of Europe were in favor of disarmament and were becoming increasingly dissatisfied with paying heavy taxes for the maintenance of large armies and navies. He did not believe the English would raise the German warships sunk at Scapa Flow, as he said the ships were not worth salvaging.

The transport Wilhelmina arrived yesterday with 1,807 officers and enlisted men, belonging chiefly to the Third Battalion of the 6th Marines under the command of Colonel Harry Lee. More than 100 members of the battalion have been decorated, according to the officers. Among the officers on board the Wilhelmina was Captain Charles D. Roberts, 22 years old, who, it is said, is the youngest officer in the Marine Corps.

SEEK TO UNIONIZE POLICE.

Labor Secretary Notifies Jersey City Director of Public Safety.

Notice that Frank Morrison, Secretary of the American Federation of Labor, had called upon the Hudson County Central Labor Union to "organize among other callings the policemen in your jurisdiction," was served yesterday upon Director Charles F. X. O'Brien of the Jersey City Department of Public Safety, in a letter he received from Kenneth M. Forbes, the Secretary of the Hudson County Central Labor Union.

Mayor Frank Hague recently called the attention of Director O'Brien to a movement, of which he disapproved, for the organization of the police into a body to be affiliated with the American Federation of Labor. On the order of Director O'Brien a general order was issued by Chief Battersby that the forming of a patrolmen's union would be a violation of the police manual rules and would be likely to cause "embarrassing situations."

Director O'Brien said he would not pay any attention to Forbes's letter. Membership in a policeman's labor union would be a violation of the rule in the police manual which requires that every member of the force "shall devote his whole time and attention to the services of this department," and says, "they are expressly prohibited from following any other calling or being engaged in any other business whatsoever." A rule of the manual also specifies that members of the force are always on duty.

Speed—and the price of Meat

Forty-eight hours after cattle are purchased by Swift & Company they are hanging up as meat; within two weeks the fresh meat has been sold.

This speed means money in the pocket of the one who raises the live stock and of the one who eats the meat. It means a rapid "turnover" of capital and investment—making possible the transaction of daily business on a narrower margin of profit.

Speed permits Swift & Company to do a successful business on a profit of a fraction of a cent per pound.

Such speed, with its rapid turnover and smaller profits would be impossible without the efficient organization and wide scope of Swift & Company, the results of fifty years' experience in handling meat.

Do you believe that government interference with the complicated and efficient machinery of the packing industry can be of any benefit? Experience with government regulation of railroads and telephone and telegraph might suggest an answer.

B. R. T. AGAIN SHUTS DOWN; HYLAN PLEA FOR UNION FAILS; ACTORS STRIKE, SENDING 12 BROADWAY AUDIENCES HOME; WILSON URGES 80,000 RAILWAY SHOPMEN TO RETURN TO WORK

WILSON ASKS HINES TO ACT

Says Railroad Director Has Power to Pass On Shopmen's Wages.

BUT DEMANDS STRIKE STOP

JEWELL APPEALS TO UNIONS

A. F. of L. Official Urges Men to Return to Work as Requested by President.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, Aug. 7.—The situation in regard to the striking railroad employes became so serious today that President Wilson took personal charge of the negotiations and, after a long conference with Director General of Railroads Hines, wrote a communication to the latter, in which he authorized Mr. Hines to proceed with the question of wage adjustments, through the authorized national representatives of the employes, but only in the event that the employes now on strike return to their work.

The President's communication was sent at once to B. M. Jewell, Acting President of the Railway Employes Department of the American Federation of Labor, along with a letter in which Mr. Hines urged upon Mr. Jewell the necessity for immediate action on the lines suggested by President Wilson. Upon the receipt of these statements Mr. Jewell called together a number of the officers of the railway employes' organizations.

At midnight Mr. Jewell sent a message to the officers and members of all shopcraft affiliated with the Railway Employes' Department of the A. F. of L., in which he asks them to return to their work as requested by President Wilson. He included in the message copies of the letter sent by President Wilson to Director General Hines and of the letter which he, Jewell, had received from Mr. Hines. In his message Mr. Jewell said:

The action of our membership in striking in violation of the laws of our organizations has been detrimental and embarrassing to your officers in the handling of these negotiations. It is therefore plainly our duty to instruct every member now out to return to work at once in order that we may proceed with negotiations with the hope of securing a satisfactory adjustment. Failure of the membership to comply with these instructions will, in our judgment, impair the usefulness of our organizations as well as having a detrimental effect upon the entire labor movement. We have no hesitancy in saying that we have abiding faith in the loyalty of the great majority of our membership and that they will immediately comply with the instructions contained herein. This information should be conveyed to the membership of all points."

Action on the part of the President came when Mr. Hines called at the White House early in the day and informed the President that 80,000 railway employes had gone on strike against the advice of their national leaders to support their demands for higher wages without the delay which would result for waiting on Congressional action. Mr. Hines said that the number was twice the total on strike yesterday, and that if matters were permitted to follow such a course without strong intervention a situation would be created where the best efforts in other directions to bring down living costs would be absolutely defeated.

To this viewpoint the President subscribed, and he told the shopmen in no uncertain terms that they must be prepared to accept a heavy responsibility for the situation which would be developed if they persisted in crippling the railroad systems.

The President referred to the relations between transportation and the high living costs, and said in his letter to Mr. Hines:

I need hardly point out how intimately and directly this matter affects every individual in the nation, and if transportation is interrupted it will be impossible to solve it."

Accepts Cummins Decision.

In his communication to Mr. Hines the President accepts as final a letter from Senator Cummins, Chairman of the Interstate Commerce Committee, in which Mr. Cummins set forth that the joint request of President Wilson and Mr. Hines for the establishment of a Federal wage adjustment board with rate-making power would not be acceptable to Congress. Under these circumstances, President Wilson told Mr. Hines that he had full authority to proceed with negotiations.

Text of Wilson's Letter to Railroad Director Authorizing Him to Act on Shopmen's Demands

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, Aug. 7.—The text of President Wilson's letter to Director General of Railroads Hines, authorizing him to take up the demands of the railroad shopmen for higher wages, follows:

WHITE HOUSE, WASHINGTON, Aug. 7, 1919.

My Dear Mr. Director General—I am just in receipt of the letter from Senator Albert B. Cummins, Chairman of the Senate Committee on Interstate Commerce, which set me free to deal as I think best with the difficult question of the wages of certain classes of railway employes, and I take advantage of the occasion to write you this letter, in order that I may both in the public interest and in the interests of the railroad employes themselves make the present situation as clear and definite as possible.

I thought it my duty to lay the question in its present pressing form before the committee of the Senate, because I thought I should not act upon this matter within the brief interval of Government control remaining without their acquiescence and approval. Senator Cummins's letter, which speaks the unanimous judgment of the committee, leaves me free and, indeed, imposes upon me the duty to act.

The question of the wages of railroad shopmen was submitted, you will remember, to the Board of Railroad Wages and Working Conditions of the Railroad Administration last February, but was not reported upon by the board until the 16th of July. The delay was unavoidable because the board was continuously engaged in dealing with several wage matters affecting classes of employes who had not previously received consideration. The board now having apprised us of this inability, at any rate for the time being, to agree upon recommendation, it is clearly our duty to proceed with the matter in the hope of disposing of it.

You are therefore authorized to say to the railroad shop employes that the question of wages they have raised will be taken up and considered on its merits by the Director General in conference with their duly accredited representatives. I hope that you will make it clear to the men concerned that the Railroad Administration cannot deal with problems of this sort or with any problems affecting the men, except through the duly chosen international officers of the regularly constituted organization and their authorized committees.

Matters of so various a nature and affecting so many men cannot be dealt with except in this way. Any action which brings the authority of the authorized representatives of the organization into question or discredits it must interfere with, if not prevent, action altogether. The chief obstacle to a decision has been created by the men themselves. They have gone out on strike and repudiated the authority of their officers at the very moment when they were urging action in regard to various interests.

You will remember that a conference between yourself and the authorized representatives of the men was arranged at the instance of these representatives for July 28 to discuss the wage question, and the question of a national agreement, but before this conference took place or could take place local bodies of railway shopmen took action looking toward a strike on the 1st of August. As a result of this action, various strikes actually took place before there was an opportunity to act in a satisfactory or conclusive way with respect to the wages. In the presence of these strikes and the repudiation of the authority of the representatives of the organization concerned there can be no consideration of the matter in controversy. Until the employes return to work and again recognize the authority of their own organization, the whole matter must be at a standstill.

When Federal control of the railroads began, the Railroad Administration accepted existing agreements between the shopmen's organization and the several railroad companies, and by agreement machinery was created for handling the grievances of the shopmen's organization of all the railways, whether they had theretofore had the benefits of definite agreements or not. There can be no question, therefore, of the readiness of the Government to deal in a spirit of fairness and by regular methods with any matters the men may bring to their attention.

Concerned and very careful consideration is being given by the entire Government to the question of reducing the high cost of living. I need hardly point out how intimately and directly this matter affects every individual in the nation, and if transportation is interrupted it will be impossible to solve it.

Cordially and sincerely yours,
WOODROW WILSON.

Hon. WALKER D. HINES, Director General of Railroads.

PRESIDENT TO URGE BROAD FOOD POWER

Wants Lever Act Extended in Time and Made to Cover Other Necessaries.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, Aug. 7.—President Wilson tonight completed his message to Congress containing recommendations for legislation to deal with the high cost of living situation, and will read it at a joint session of Congress at 4 o'clock tomorrow afternoon.

The message was virtually completed this morning and read this afternoon to members of the Cabinet and other Government officials composing the cost of living advisary council, who were summoned to the White House for that purpose. Secretary Glass, Attorney General Palmer, Secretary Redfield, Secretary Houston, Assistant Secretary Leffingwell of the Treasury Department, and Messrs. Colver and Murdock of the Federal Trade Commission attended.

Those present generally approved the message, but some suggestions were submitted to the President, and it is understood that these were made the basis for modifications in the communication, which was sent to the Government Printing Office tonight.

No copies of the message will be available until just before the President begins reading it. The hour when the President is scheduled to appear was fixed by himself. Stock and grain markets will be closed before the contents of the message are known. It was denied, however, that this consideration had any bearing on the hour fixed.

The Presidential message will contain 5,000 words. Officials acquainted with its contents tonight would not tell the nature of the recommendations to be

PACKERS TO FACE CRIMINAL CHARGES

Conspiracy Prosecution as Well as Civil Anti-Trust Suits Announced.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, Aug. 7.—Criminal prosecutions on charges of conspiracy as well as civil action for alleged combination will be brought under the anti-trust laws in connection with the Government's fight against the big meat packers.

This statement was made today by Charles F. Clyne, Federal District Attorney for Chicago, who has been called here by Attorney General Palmer. Mr. Clyne said that the Government's case against the packers, alleging conspiracy, would be placed before the Federal Grand Jury, which assembles in three weeks. The first charges, he intimated, would be against corporations rather than individuals.

Preparations are also being made to proceed against the big five—the Armour, Wilson, Morris, Swift, and Cudahy companies—under the anti-hoarding sections of the food control act where there appears to be evidence of violation of that statute. In fact, Mr. Clyne stated, the prosecutions would cover the broadest scope. The investigations are to reach into at least 400 branches of the industry represented by the big five.

It is stated that the rendering business of the packers' combine, in which prominent New York interests are concerned, will be the subject of investigation and of court actions. The Federal Trade Commission has amassed a vast amount of material about this branch of the industry and has charged vicious discriminations and unfair practices.

In addition, a nation-wide publicity campaign is to be put in operation to place before the public facts of production and purchase costs as related to

PLUMB PLAN OR REVOLUTION, SAYS ITS AUTHOR

Tells House Committee Work Will Cease if Returns Keep Diminishing.

CHARGES WALL ST. PLOT

Asserts Bankers Are Planning to Loot Roads When They Are Returned.

SAYS HE WILL OFFER FACTS

General Counsel of Brotherhoods Announces National Railroad Control Conference for Saturday.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, Aug. 7.—A revolution, by which he meant general strikes, within sixty or ninety days by the workingmen of the nation unless conditions were changed, was intimated by Glenn E. Plumb, testifying before the House Interstate Commerce Committee this afternoon. Plumb is the author of the "Plumb plan" to nationalize the railroads, and general counsel for the railroad unions. When Representative Barclay of Kentucky, Democrat, asked him what he meant by revolution, Plumb said that after a recent speech in St. Louis a man in a crowd of 3,000 came up to him and said:

"'By God, if we can't get this plan, there's going to be revolution.'

"What do you understand by 'revolution'?" insisted Mr. Barclay.

"I think it means," replied Plumb, "that the men have reached the level of diminishing existence. They can't stand any more. They'll cease to serve. If we don't work out a solution soon we'll have no chance to work it out."

In a statement read to the committee he asserted that railway "interests," led by "Wall Street," were already beginning a campaign to wreck the systems at the expense of the investors. In view of this situation the railway labor organizations had called a "national conference of railroad control" for Saturday in Washington. This statement read:

"During this week, and since your committee requested me to appear, there has come into the possession of the railroad brotherhoods and ten affiliated railway labor organizations of the American Federation of Labor a state of facts never spread before the American people or submitted to the jury of public opinion. These facts tend to show that the wrecking and looting of the New York, New Haven & Hartford Railroad, the Chicago & Alton, the Rock Island system, and the Frisco lines are not sporadic examples of the highway robbery to which the American Nation has been subjected as to its public transportation highways. Leading directly from Wall Street and from the banking houses controlled directly by the Morgan and Rockefeller groups, these facts show that there has proceeded a systematized plundering of virtually all of the public transportation highways of the United States.

Charges New Plunder Plot.

"We believe that a Congressional investigation will reveal that not one railroad system dominating any part of the 254,000 miles of railroad in the United States but has suffered and is suffering, in degree if not to the same extent, from carefully deliberated manipulations of the sort that have wrecked and ruined the railroads I have mentioned. It will reveal with emphasis the truth of the words recently uttered before the bankers of Missouri by Elihu Root:

"'Surely some provision must be made to prevent the continuance of the steady progress toward bankruptcy of the railroads which characterized the decade before the Government took possession in 1917.'

"It will reveal that these interests are again gathering their forces of private and secret control and seek, after having gained from Congress a sanction to rehabilitate their railroad properties at public expense, to begin again and follow through its corrupt and wicked cycle the systematized plundering and looting of the public and the public interest, in the nation's highways."

Admission was made by Plumb that the State Railway Commissions would be practically eliminated under his plan. Investors in stocks and bonds would receive only 66 per cent. of their supposed value, a percentage, which he considered adequate, as stocks were watered. From $10,000,000,000 to $12,000,000,000, he said, would be sufficient to purchase the systems. He predicted a 5 per cent. reduction in rates immediately if his plan was adopted. To Chairman Esch he said that industrial unrest had been brewing for months and that its coupling with the plan was merely because the plan had been introduced at this particular time.

Plumb will take the stand again to-

Wants to Set Up Fine Estate for Kaiser as Prussian King

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

THE HAGUE, Aug. 6.—According to the Westphalian Gazette, Count Eulenberg, as "representative of the King of Prussia," has proposed taking 2,500,000 guilders from the ex-Kaiser's private fortune in order to buy an estate where the ex-Kaiser can remain as King of Prussia.

The paper says that Count Eulenberg's proposal will be taken up in the Prussian Diet.

SHOPMEN STRIKE ON THE NEW HAVEN

Walkout of 7,000 Workers Results in Curtailment of Passenger Service.

AFFECTS WHOLE SYSTEM

An unexpected extension of the railroad shopmen's strike yesterday morning to include between 7,000 and 8,000 men employed in the mechanical and inspection departments of the New York, New Haven & Hartford Railroad resulted yesterday afternoon in the curtailment of the number of passenger trains and the elimination of a large part of the Pullman equipment on the long distance trains operated by the system. Whether a further curtailment will be necessary will be decided today.

The strike affects the entire New Haven system, which includes practically all of the railroads in New England. Every shop and every terminal in the territory covered by the system is affected by the walkout.

The first information to the public concerning the strike was in the form of a brief official statement from New York offices which read as follows:

"At 9 a. m. today employes of the mechanical department of the New York, New Haven & Hartford Railroad in the maintenance of locomotives and cars and the inspection of trains at terminals at practically all points on the New Haven road, walked out. No demands have been made upon the officials and no cause given for the withdrawal from service, which we are advised is unauthorized by the executives of the organizations and therefore illegal.

"On account of the withdrawal of the large number of men from service a very serious curtailment of passenger and freight service must necessarily follow, the extent of which cannot be accurately determined at this time. Every effort will be made to operate as many trains as can be done with safety."

A statement issued by the New Haven late last night gave notice of the discontinuance today of several trains running between Boston and New York. These are the trains leaving Boston at 10 A. M., (Knickerbocker Limited,) 3 P. M., and 5 P. M., (Merchants' Limited,) over the Shore Line, and at 7:46 A. M. and 1:40 P. M. by way of Willimantic and Hartford, and "corresponding service in the opposite direction."

Other trains cut off are the Federal Express, the White Mountain Express, the Bar Harbor Express, and the State of Maine Express.

Parlor and dining-car service will be discontinued on all trains except the Colonial Express leaving Boston for Washington, at 9 A. M.

Trains leaving Boston at 4:28 P. M. for Providence and New London, and leaving Providence at 11 A. M. for Boston will be discontinued.

Through trains will make scheduled stops in suburban territory on the New Haven Road "as far as practicable outside of rush hours."

10,000 Quit in New England.

BOSTON, Aug. 7.—The strike of approximately 10,000 mechanics employed in shops, roundhouses, and terminals in Massachusetts and New Hampshire today led to the suspension by the New York, New Haven & Hartford Railroad late in the day of passenger train service in the Boston suburban districts, and to announcement by the Boston & Maine Railroad of a similar suspension to become effective tomorrow morning. The Boston & Albany, the third road affected, did not lay off any trains today, and will try to carry on its suburban business as usual tomorrow.

Freight Traffic Curtailed in West.

CHICAGO, Aug. 7.—Practically all railroads of the Middle West had in effect today orders to "accept freight subject to delay" on account of the strike of Federated Railway Shopmen. The strike of the shopmen continued to spread, and M. L. Hawver, President of the council directing the strike in the Middle West,

LEADING PLAYERS GO OUT, CLOSING BIG ATTRACTIONS

ALL THE HOUSES FILLED

MORE SHOWS MAY BE HIT

Equity Association Expected to Attack Vaudeville, Burlesque, and Movie Houses.

On notice varying from five to thirty minutes a hundred or more actors and actresses last night closed twelve attractions in New York's first class theatres and precipitated one of the most remarkable situations ever known in the history of the American stage.

The strike, which affected two-thirds of the legitimate theatres, probably will be extended today to New York's remaining playhouses if the managers do not capitulate. In addition, another strike call was issued which will hold up all "regular dramatic productions" now in rehearsal.

The calling out of the players followed a strike meeting of the Actors' Equity Association, 1,400 strong, in the afternoon, and was the reply of the association to the refusal of the managers to treat with it.

The strike astounded the managers, who were in most cases utterly unprepared. In one or two instances attempts were made to give the shows with understudies, but in only one case was the attempt successful.

Audiences were bewildered. In most cases crowded houses had assembled before the announcement of a strike was made to the managers and, in turn, communicated to the audiences. At nearly all houses long lines of patrons stood at the box offices until 10 o'clock and later to have their money refunded, and there were hurried calls for cash from many theatre treasurers.

Despite the warnings of a strike which the actors have sounded, all concerned last night were so surprised by the turn of events that it was impossible to say what would happen next. The only thing certain is that the actors have chosen the most prosperous summer in the history of the theatre for their strike, and that huge sums of money will be lost by managers and actors alike if an adjustment is not quickly forthcoming. The amount of money turned back at twelve theatres last night was in the neighborhood of $25,000.

May Be Extended.

Although the theatrical managers allied themselves on Wednesday with the vaudeville, burlesque, and screen interests, only the players in legitimate houses were called out last night. Possible extension of the strike to these houses is a matter yet to be determined, as is the question of participation in the strike by stagehands, musicians, and billposters.

Performances of the following scheduled attractions were not given last night:

"Nightie Night," which was to have had its première at the Princess Theatre;

"The Challenge," at the Selwyn;

"A Voice in the Dark, at the Republic;

"Listen, Lester," at the Knickerbocker;

"The Royal Vagabond," at the Cohan & Harris;

"The Crimson Alibi," at the Broadhurst;

"At 9:45," at the Playhouse;

"The Five Million," at the Lyric,

"Lightnin'," at the Gaiety.

"East Is West," at the Astor.

A strike was also called at the Booth, where "The Better 'Ole" is playing, but understudies were placed in two important rôles, and the play was given as usual.

The most dramatic happening of the evening took place at the Cohan and Harris Theatre, where the attraction was "The Royal Vagabond." This house is under the management of Cohan and Harris, and the fact that Sam H. Harris is President of the Producing Managers' Association made it a practical certainty that his theatre would be among those affected.

Sympathetic for the Chorus.

Here the audience was kept in its seats until 9 o'clock before an announcement was made. The curtain was then raised to disclose the thirty-five or more members of the chorus, both boys and girls, grouped on the stage in their street clothes. Sam Forrest, general stage director for the firm, then informed the audience that the strike had

Judge Mayer Announces He Upholds Garrison

BUFFALO, N. Y., Aug. 7.—Federal Judge Julius M. Mayer, in answer to a telegram from Corporation Counsel Burr of New York City asking him to instruct Receiver Garrison of the Brooklyn Rapid Transit Company to deal with union officials, telegraphed tonight to Mr. Burr:

"It is impracticable in this telegram to dwell at length upon what seems to be misapprehension of the questions involved as conveyed by your telegram. I am telegraphing you promptly in the hope of making clear my answer to the request urged by you, by direction of the Mayor.

"First—Receiver Garrison is dealing only with the Brooklyn Rapid Transit situation and none other.

"Second—His recent letter to the committee was sound in principle and practice and has my full approval.

"Third—I am glad to learn that the appropriate officials will preserve order. Such is their duty, which I must assume they will fully perform.

"Fourth—If violence or unlawful acts occur, it must be presumed that the lawbreakers will be brought to justice and relentlessly prosecuted.

"Fifth—Receiver Garrison is adhering to the principles stated by him in March, which I also comprehensively stated officially in open court when a strike was then threatened."

LAHEY TO CHECK STRIKE VIOLENCE

Deputy Police Commissioner Assumes Charge and Promises Stern Measures.

DISORDERS HALT SUDDENLY

Motor Trucks Ready to Quell Riots—100 Manhattan Detectives Will Aid.

The acts of violence which marked every few minutes of the attempt to operate cars in Brooklyn yesterday seemed to come to a sudden halt last night when Deputy Commissioner William J. Lahey, who had been called back from his vacation, took charge of the police in Brooklyn and announced that a vigorous policy would be pursued for the protection of property and men, and it was hoped that the rioting and shooting and beating of B. R. T. workers would be put down summarily.

Simultaneously with his arrival extreme activity became noticeable on the part of the police. Borough Inspector Thomas Murphy, the six district Inspectors and a host of police Captains and Lieutenants met in conference with Lahey and began to outline plans for handling the situation today.

Deputy Police Commissioner Lahey told the B. R. T. officials that he would give them police protection. When he was called up on the telephone by General Manager William S. Menden of the B. R. T. and asked at what time the company should shut down the lines Lahey replied:

"We don't want you to shut them down at all. We will give you protection for twenty-four hours of the day for all the cars you want to run. Run all the cars you can, and we will promise you the protection."

Large motor cars and trucks began to pull up in front of Police Headquarters, indicating that the police proposed to form flying squadrons for strong-arm work on rioters. An army truck from Governors Island backed up to the station and began to unload cases marked "steel helmets." There were 500 helmets in all.

It was reported that the police on guard on cars would wear them, as several patrolmen were painfully hurt during the day by missiles thrown by strikers at passing cars. Borough Inspector Murphy later declared that an error had been made and that the helmets would be returned to Governors Island. He said the Brooklyn police had not ordered them.

Boy Hit by Shot.

The first shots of the strike were fired yesterday morning at 2:30 o'clock, when men opened fire from a doorway on a street car at Schenectady Avenue and Bergen Street. In a desperate battle at the platform of the Livonia Avenue Station of the Canarsie-Broadway Line later in the morning, Police Corporal Wubnick fired to bring a fugitive to halt, and the bullet hit Max Kaufman, 12 years old, of 436 Snediker Avenue in the back, injuring him seriously.

Threats with drawn revolvers were reported numerous times during the day, and actual shootings occurred frequently, though the shots were directed in the air or went wild.

A fusillade of shots marked one of the worst riots of the day, which occurred in an attack by strikers, aided by sympathizers among shipyard workers in South Brooklyn, in which the motormen, conductor and two policemen on a car were mobbed and injured at Third Avenue between Twenty-sixth and

CAR STRIKERS DEFY POLICE

MAYOR APPEALS TO COURTS

But Federal Judge Refuses to Compel Receiver to Deal with Leaders.

ASSERT 9,000 MEN ARE OUT

Company Again Abandons Service at Night, but Promises to Resume This Morning.

Virtually all loyal surface car employes of the Brooklyn Rapid Transit Company and a large proportion of the subway and elevated men were driven from their cars by violence and threats against their lives yesterday, so that surface car operation in the afternoon was at a standstill, and elevated and subway lines were able to carry only about 10 per cent. of the normal traffic.

At 9 o'clock last night the company again announced that it had abandoned all its service, but that it would attempt to resume operation this morning with as many cars as there are policemen to act as guards on them.

In spite of this, Mayor Hylan insisted that the police were keeping order and that the heart of the difficulty was the refusal of Lindley M. Garrison, receiver for the B. R. T., to deal with the strikers. At the Mayor's direction, Corporation Counsel William P. Burr applied to Federal Judge Julius M. Mayer, who has jurisdiction over the road and who appointed Mr. Garrison, for an order directing the receiver to confer with the strike chiefs.

Late last night, Judge Mayer, who is in Buffalo, telegraphed in reply that he approved the stand taken by Mr. Garrison. He urged the city officials to see that there was no violence, or in case of any unlawful acts, that the violators be punished.

Disorder Unrestrained.

In disorder which continued all day in many parts of Brooklyn, while the police were apparently helpless, employes who remained at their posts were shot at, and in several cases injured by flying horseshoes and bricks. Nearly every man who started out with a car was beaten or threatened until he gave up the attempt to operate.

Rails were greased, switches were tampered with, blocks of heated iron were put on the tracks, wagons were stolen and wrecked on the tracks. Scores of train crews were hauled off the cars and the fares were stolen by the strikers.

Crowds of hundreds gathered without police interference and beat or overawed conductors and motormen. Big loads of strikers in motor vehicles dashed from point to point, showering cars which were supposed to be guarded by policemen, with stones, chunks of asphalt, eggs and other missiles.

In no case was it reported yesterday that the police stopped or interfered with one of the motor loads of terrorists who prevented operation of the cars, although in many cases individual policemen made bold stands against superior numbers and fought bravely with nightsticks, sometimes being successful and sometimes overpowered and beaten.

Mr. Garrison asserted last night that some of the policemen had been half hearted in their effort to combat mob rule in Brooklyn. He pointed out that they had not attempted to nip violence in the bud by dispersing crowds when they began to congregate or by stopping the motor-truck pickets who kept charging cars at various points.

Motor Vehicle Service.

In the meantime, the number of motor trucks, vans, automobiles, carry-alls, and vehicles of all sorts in Brooklyn multiplied. Men came with machines from Newark, Montclair, Patchogue, and various other points in New Jersey and on Long Island to increase the New York and Brooklyn supply of vehicles, which sought, at high prices, to do the work of the paralyzed traction system of Brooklyn.

Hay wagons and ancient picnic carryalls, with motor lorries attached, were among the array of vehicles which operated over fixed routes, covering virtually every section of Brooklyn. At the rush hour men and women were packed in them, standing up, like cattle. Firms in Manhattan and Brooklyn which employ large forces in many cases operated their own services.

Many strikers took charge of motor vehicles, advertising in placards that they were on strike but wanted to help the public. Prices ranged from 10 cents to $1 a ride, according to the kind of vehicle and the length of the trip. Streets in Brooklyn ordinarily little used by automobiles looked like Fifth Avenue on a busy afternoon. This added another problem to the many confronting the police, because accidents and tremendous traffic tangles resulted at congested points.

Receiver Garrison made a trip in an automobile over all the B. R. T. lines, addressing words of praise to loyal employes, and watching the aggressive pickets in action. On his return late in the day he heard for the first time that Mayor Hylan, after conferring with the strike leaders, had sought an order from Judge Mayer, compelling him to deal with the strikers.

Garrison Will Not Meet Leaders.

Mr. Garrison said he would not deal with them, if they succeeded in preventing every wheel on the B. R. T. from moving. He said that if such an order was made he would resign.

"I do not believe the police are acting whole-heartedly in giving protection to B. R. T. employes," he said. "I believe they have misconstrued their orders. They are acting passively, when they should be active. Policemen on cars are not preventing crowds from organizing. Instead of dispersing them as they start to gather, the policy has been to let them congregate, without interference, until acts of violence are committed. There would be less violence if the police acted more promptly."

Asked if he would deal with the leaders of the Amalgamated Association of Street and Electric Railway Employes, as suggested by the Mayor, he said:

"Absolutely no. I am convinced that I cannot deal with these men as a union. These men are outsiders. I don't care if they tie up every wheel in Brooklyn. I will not receive them as a union.

"There were enough men in the car barns to operate many of the cars today, but they were prevented from working by a small minority. I believe it is against all principles of Americanism for men to be permitted to prevent other men from working, and to prevent a public service corporation from doing its duty to the public."

Complains of Police to Mayor.

After returning from his tour Mr. Garrison addressed the following letter to Mayor Hylan, with a detailed list of acts of violence:

Aug. 7, 1919.

Hon. John F. Hylan, Mayor City of New York, City Hall, Manhattan:

My Dear Mr. Mayor—I have just returned from an all-day tour over the system, and I find conditions practically similar at each point. Yesterday each depot had enough crews on hand to operate the road substantially on a normal basis, but as I previously informed you, the lack of any protection to the men operating the cars made it impossible to send them out the second time after a crew had gone out and had been assaulted and intimidated and returned to the barn, nor could other crews be induced to go out under the circumstances.

Last evening you informed me that you would see that policemen were placed upon the cars, and stated to me that Chief Inspector Daly would get in touch with me concerning the matter. He did so, and it turned out that all the policemen had come from such distances that they could not be gathered and distributed in time to do any good, so that operation under their protection was not attempted until this morning. Owing to circumstances that were probably unavoidable and nobody's fault, many policemen were gathered at some depots where a few were needed, and a few appeared at some depots where many were needed.

The happenings at each depot were substantially the same. I visited all the important ones and am informed that similar conditions existed at those I did not visit. Policemen went out on the cars, and, so far as we know, would have prevented any direct physical assault upon a motorman or a conductor or a passenger. They did not prevent stones, and in one instance which I saw, a cannon ball and horseshoes and other dangerous missiles were hurled through windows, seriously cutting the operatives.

Neither did they prevent crowds gathering and impeding the progress of the cars, during which the men in charge of the cars were insulted and were threatened with bodily harm if they again appeared upon the streets on cars. In one instance, a truck load of strike sympathizers barred the passage of a string of cars, and the policemen refused to require the truck to move off the track, and all the cars on the line were backed up against the obstruction, with the result that a large crowd gathered and conditions such as I have recited ensued.

In addition thereto, while the cars were at a standstill owing to the obstruction, various parts of the cars were tampered with, interfering with their successful and safe operation.

In other words, while it is true that policemen have been furnished and have been placed upon the cars, it is not true that they have acted in a way to prevent intimidation of the crews and the placing of obstructions to the progress of the cars or actual physical damage to the operatives.

In each depot I visited I found many crews which were competent to take cars out, and said that they were willing to take them out as soon as they were convinced similar experiences to those previously experienced would not be repeated.

They feel that while the policemen would be bodily present they would not exert themselves to prevent intimidation or tampering with the cars or injury to the operatives. They believe that the policemen either had no instructions to prevent intimidation, or, if they had such instructions, refrained from acting on them.

The condition of the road at this time is that we can operate a very great number of cars and render a very large part of our service if order were maintained, and the men operating the cars were free from intimidation and the cars themselves were free from physical interference. We cannot do this while the men are subject, as at present, to intimidation, and while the property is subject, as at present, to being tampered with.

I am enclosing herewith a partial list which has been hastily noted of the occurrences today, a glance at which will indicate the general character of the conduct of the strikers and their sympathizers and will indicate why it is that we cannot get the loyal men to continue at work while such happenings are constantly occurring.

I feel assured that upon your being advised of the facts you will issue such instructions to the police as will indicate your own vigorous, firm and unqualified determination that law and order must prevail, and that men who desire to labor may do so in peace, and that the community must have the benefit of the service that we are ready to render if conditions permit. Sincerely yours,

LINDLEY M. GARRISON,
Receiver.

P. S.—While dictating the above I am just advised that at about 6 P. M. seven cars were started from Fresh Pond Depot, with fourteen policemen, two to each car, accompanied by four mounted policemen. Two of the cars got as far as Silver Street and Fresh Pond Road, and five of the cars got as far as Fresh Pond and Myrtle Avenue, when the cars were attacked by a mob of 1,000 people, strikers and sympathizers.

A motorman acting as a conductor, in trying to replace the pole on the wire, which had been pulled off, was struck with a blackjack. An inspector acting in the capacity of conductor had his eye blackened.

No assistance was given them by the police on the cars, and at the last report, when the cars were moved back to the depot, the full number of policemen was still trying to disperse the mob at this point.

Gives List of Attacks.

The list of occurrences sent to the Mayor by Mr. Garrison follows:

Conductor Goldstein assaulted by one man while two other men held door of car open; conductor called upon Officer 8530 to make arrest, but officer replied, "Oh, let him go."

Conductor Mitchell—Car held up by gang, who broke windows and threw stones; conductor injured; strikers pulled at conductor; conductor pointed out man who threw rock to Officer 2845, who did nothing.

Conductor O'Connor—Car stopped by crowd; pole pulled off; crew ordered by strikers to take car back to barn; passengers chased off car; police officers present on car; two officers on street made no effort to prevent.

Passengers Hiss Car Crews.

The police have not only the striking B. R. T. men to contend with, but sympathizers numbering many thousands. Some of the worst trouble yesterday was caused by shipyard workers, who responded to the appeal of the strikers for help. Other men made idle by the 124 other strikes in Brooklyn joined in the disturbances on general principles.

In some cases it was reported that the passengers themselves shouted "scab" at conductors and motormen and jostled them. At terminals, crowds which seemed to be without any mixture of the striking element, hissed loyal employes.

Even if more cars had been provided, it is doubtful if the general public would have ridden in much larger numbers, because of the attacks on the cars. Where acts of violence occurred in various part of the city, crowds of onlookers assembled and watched at a distance. They saw bonfires built on rails, mounds of rock placed on the tracks, conductors and motormen dragged from their cars and beaten, trolley lines cut, car windows systematically smashed, and car furniture broken.

These things occurred too frequently to give the public a taste for riding, and many cars that did go out had few passengers on them.

Mayor Hylan, in his limousine, late yesterday drove on his way home to Borough Hall in Brooklyn, and stopped to survey the hundreds of motor and horse-drawn vehicles from which barkers were shouting: "Bushwick Avenue line," "get aboard," "the Gates' Avenue express," and so on. Among these were strikers driving trucks, with the slogan: "We give better service than the B. R. T."

The Mayor, who previously had said the tieup corroborated his theory that the true solution of the traffic problem was bus lines, studied the scene carefully.

The Mayor, who is a member of the Brotherhood of Locomotive Engineers, and who was called into consultation by the leaders of the B. R. T. strike last November, before officials of the line had heard that a strike was threatened, announced his plan to coerce Receiver Garrison by legal action into a conciliatory attitude, after he had consulted at the City Hall with strike leaders who called on him on their own initiative. The Mayor wrote as follows to Corporation Counsel Burr:

Mayor Orders Appeal to Court.

City of New York.
Office of the Mayor.
Aug. 7, 1919.

Dear Mr. Burr—This morning a committee representing the strikers on the Brooklyn Rapid Transit visited the Mayor's office and requested that I, as Mayor of the city, should use every endeavor in my power to bring about a meeting of a committee representing the strikers and Receiver Garrison of the Brooklyn Rapid Transit, in order that the questions at issue between the employes and the Brooklyn Rapid Transit be discussed and, if necessary, referred to the committee for arbitration.

Due to the strike on the Brooklyn transit system, the general public, employers of labor and their help have been greatly discommoded and subjected to great financial loss. Receiver Garrison has demanded from the City of New York police protection. That demand has been fully met by the police of the city; and let me say as Mayor that property and life in the City of New York will be fully protected, no matter what the cost may be. I have every confidence in our police. Should they be unable to cope with the existing situation other means will be sought.

You are the head of the legal branch of the City Government. Mr. Garrison, as Receiver, appointed as such by the Federal courts, which courts denied the City of New York the right of a co-receiver, declined to meet a committee of the strikers previous to the declaring of the strike. As Mayor of the city, I have suggested to him that in the public interest he should meet such committee. I have received no reply to that suggestion up to this hour.

As the legal representative of the city, I now suggest to you that you make application to Justice Mayer of the Federal Court, who appointed Receiver Garrison, that Receiver Garrison be directed to meet a committee and discuss their grievances and submit, if necessary, the questions at issue for arbitration, so that the business public of the City of New York can peacefully resume their respective daily occupations.

Very truly yours,
JOHN F. HYLAN, Mayor.

Burr Fears Strike Will Spread.

Corporation Counsel Burr then sent this telegram to Federal Judge Mayer:

Aug. 7, 1919.

Hon. Julius M. Mayer.
Hotel Iroquois, Buffalo, N. Y.

By direction of Mayor Hylan, I hereby respectfully but most urgently request that you immediately instruct Lindley M. Garrison, receiver of the B. R. T. system, appointed by the Federal Court, to confer at once—in the public interests and in order to prevent the spread of riot and disorder—with the representatives of the labor unions acting on behalf of the employes of the B. R. T. system now on strike, in order that the questions at issue between such employes and the B. R. T. may be discussed, and, if necessary, be referred to a committee for arbitration.

Everything that can be done by the city administration is being done to preserve law and order and to protect life and property to the fullest extent. In spite of this the strike is spreading and, it is feared, will embrace the whole City of New York.

The sole obstacle to a fair presentation of the grievances of the strikers and a possible agreement is stated to be the absolute refusal of the receiver appointed by the Federal Court to in any way recognize the existence of the labor unions in fact or in principle.

The situation is grave and demands immediate action. Throughout the country the right of employes to combine for mutual advantage and for the purpose of collective bargaining has been generally recognized. The denial of that right by the Federal receiver may be the means of causing great and immediate harm, and will undoubtedly add seriously to the difficulties confronting the country.

For the protection of the railroad property, and in the interests of the traveling public, and for the promotion of the general safety and welfare, I earnestly request that you at once instruct the receiver to confer with a committee representing the strikers to ascertain their grievances, and to arrange if possible for a proper and fair adjustment of such grievances by arbitration.

The Federal Government has to good advantage recognized the labor unions in the past, and what the Federal Government has done the Federal receiver, it seems to me, may well afford to do in the public interests.

WILLIAM P. BURR,
Corporation Counsel.

Garrison Replies to Mayor.

Although the Mayor said he had received no reply from Receiver Garrison, the latter previously had sent this letter to the Mayor's communication of Wednesday suggesting conciliation:

Hon. John F. Hylan, Mayor, New York City, City Hall, Manhattan, N. Y.

My Dear Mr. Mayor—I received your letter of yesterday evening this morning.

I note that you confirm our telephone conversation, and have directed the Commissioner to see that we receive adequate police protection, including placing of policemen on cars. I desire to thank you for this action, as in no other way would it be possible to prevent the disorders and violence which paralyzed operation of the road yesterday. I hope the employes of the road will overcome the fear instilled in them yesterday and will, in increasing numbers, return to their duties today. As they do so we will be able to restore normal operation.

In pursuance of your orders, the police authorities today are furnishing policemen as rapidly as they say it is possible, and I assume this is the fact. They are not, however, as yet furnishing us sufficient policemen to take out cars for which we have crews.

The last paragraph of your letter states: "The newspapers this morning reported that you declined to meet a committee of your employes, and the present situation is a result of such refusal. May I suggest to you that it would be better to take a more conciliatory attitude and meet a committee, and see if the points in controversy could not be settled by arbitration in the interest of the general public."

In response to this suggestion I beg leave to bring to your attention just what the situation is. On Monday last a committee called at my office and left there a series of demands. In such statement it was set forth that a mass meeting had been held on the previous Friday and that these demands had been adopted at such mass meeting.

The second one of such demands, and the one which the committee stated was the principal demand, was the recognition of the Amalgamated Association of Street and Electric Railway Employes of America. In reply to the communication of the committee I in substance informed them that I could not recognize the right of their organization to deal for our men; that I was entirely willing to deal with the employes in respect of their working conditions, but that I was not willing to deal with such outside organization in respect of the working conditions of our employes.

This organization, at the time that the communication was delivered to me, had as members only a small minority of our employes. They sought to have me recognize their association and deal with it as if it represented all of our employes. I believe that you will see that this was an impracticable and impossible situation. I could not properly deal with this outside organization as if it represented our men, because in fact it only represented a very small proportion.

In respect to all matters concerning the working conditions of our men, my attitude has not only been conciliatory but has been entirely sympathetic. I have always met such committees of our men, and have always reached an agreement.

The difficulty in the present situation is that there is no opening for conciliation. I was told on Monday that if I did not recognize their organization by Tuesday night they would strike Wednesday morning. The only conciliation would have been surrender on my part of the principle that I feel it very necessary to maintain unless turbulent minorities are, by force and violence, to obtain control of any situation which they seek to control.

The conduct of this association since the declaration of the strike is sufficient vindication of my position. As you know, their call for a strike resulted in a response on behalf of our men amounting to a very small minority. Our service was not crippled in the least by their defection, and it was only by assault and threats of physical violence that they scared loyal men and prevented them from taking their cars out.

All day yesterday they kept up this kind of intimidation until they finally succeeded in preventing the loyal men from operating the system. Without such intimidation the system would have operated practically on a normal basis.

I can assure you that I am taking no arbitrary position; that I am entirely willing, as I always have been, to deal with our employes concerning any of their working conditions, but I cannot permit an outside organization to force itself by violence into the situation and control it.

I am sure that you can understand the facts and that you will realize the propriety of the position I have taken and shall maintain.

Sincerely yours,
LINDLEY M. GARRISON, Receiver.

Say 9,000 Men Are Out.

The strike leaders were elated with the progress of the strike. They asserted that the strikers had increased until they included 9,000 of the 13,000 employes, including shopmen, on the B. R. T. lines. They declared 2,000 men had joined the strikers overnight, and that men who had quit work were streaming in during the day to sign the membership rolls.

In all public meetings, the strikers deprecated violence, although the organization of the pickets and the systematic plan on which acts of violence were committed indicated that the program of terrorism was being skillfully directed by some one.

Edward Smith, Chairman of the Executive Committee of Local No. 876 of the trolleymen's union, said that the employes of the Long Island traction trolleys, which included lines to Mineola, Hempstead, Valley Stream, Garden City and nearly all the towns on Long Island, had voted to strike in sympathy with the Brooklyn men. The order, it was said, would take effect at 5 o'clock this morning.

"If the police man the cars," he said, "it will be an outrage. The functions of the police are strictly defined by law, to protect life and property. Officials of the Amalgamated are discouraging acts of violence.

"Since the strike is being conducted in a peaceable and law-abiding manner, if it is true that the police are being placed on cars, we consider that the citizens and tax-payers' money is being illegally spent to hire official strikebreakers. Such action would seem to show a desire by police officials to help the B. R. T. to break a successful strike.

"We have the confidence and respect of the public, which is an asset in a situation of this kind, and the appearance of police on the cars could not but help to destroy the confidence the public has in us. This is undoubtedly what the B. R. T. is seeking to accomplish. They realize what public opinion is."

Strike leaders telephoned to the police yesterday asserting that inexperienced conductors and motormen were being employed by the B. R. T. Borough Inspector Murphy said he had investigated the reports and could not confirm them. Superintendent Siebert of Surface Car Operation for the B. R. T. said none but thoroughly experienced men were being employed, and that no other class would be employed. No accidents were reported yesterday as the result of mistakes by car crews.

At no place did the police arrive in the numbers assigned. At some places none reported until late in the morning; at others only a few were on hand. Reports at 8 o'clock showed there were 236 cars in operation on the surface lines and 178 on the elevated and subways. This number steadily diminished until virtually no service at all was being given late in the afternoon. The report, dated 5:10 o'clock A. M., showed the following situation at the depots:

CONGESTION CLEARS EARLY.

Steady Flow of Jitneys Carries Host Home Over Bridges.

When the home-going hour came yesterday there was the same congestion at the bridge entrances, in the Interborough subway stations, and at the ferries as there was on Wednesday. There was this difference, however: Every worker had apparently planned the method by which he or she was to return home, and so every one moved with a definite object in view. The result was that there was a minimum of confusion in Park Row, where thousands pass on their way to the Brooklyn, Manhattan, and Williamsburg Bridges.

It was estimated that more than 10,000 persons walked over the Brooklyn Bridge in the early evening. They were those who live within a mile of the other end of the bridge and who had determined that the quickest way home was to walk. The great majority went home in auto trucks, in automobiles of every description, and in horse-drawn vehicles. There was very little apparent attempt at extortion.

The vehicles that made their appearance were in the most part plainly marked, with the destination, and the price charged. "Last stop Utica Avenue, 50c."; "To Coney Island and Sea Gate, 50c."; "Across the Bridge, 25c.," and "To East New York, 35c.," were some of the signs that were displayed. These vehicles cruised slowly up and down in streets or were stationed at convenient points, and they had no trouble in filling to capacity.

Because of the fact that nearly every worker had decided not to use the lines of the B. R. T. as a means of getting home there was no crowding in the station in the Municipal Building, which was the scene of such confusion and congestion on Wednesday evening that the sale of tickets had to be stopped. Very few persons seemed to be anxious to use these lines. The Jamaica line was apparently the only one doing any business and the trains came in at about thirty-minute intervals. They left the terminal only about half filled. Between 7 and 8 o'clock the four policemen on duty on the platforms were taken for other duty leaving only those stationed upstairs on the job.

Upstairs on the bridge elevated platforms trains of two, three and four cars at periods of half an hour came in with scarcely any passengers from Brooklyn, and went out half empty, so few were waiting to be taken to Brooklyn. At half past seven four trains came in, one after the other. The first was a Myrtle Avenue train, followed by a Jamaica, a Lexington Avenue, and a Brighton Beach train. They carried away but few passengers and after that no train arrived until 8 o'clock. Even the bridge promenade bore a comparatively deserted appearance after 7 o'clock.

Vehicular traffic carried more than 125,000 persons to Brooklyn across the Manhattan Bridge between 4 and 8 o'clock and there was at no time any extraordinary halt in this stream of travel. The peak of the rush hour traffic on Manhattan Bridge was reached at 6:30 o'clock, when for several minutes an average of thirty-five vehicles a minute passed into the bridge approach. Even then, however, there was no slacking up in the speed with which the pedestrians at Bowery and Canal Street moved across the streets. There was no congestion at any time. At this point Sergeant Peter McEntee of Traffic A was in charge. It kept the traffic patrolmen working constantly to maintain this condition, but they did it and kept smiling all the time.

From 6:30 until 7 o'clock the traffic gradually grew lighter and at 7:30 o'clock practically all of those bound for Brooklyn had crossed the bridge. From 6:30 o'clock on some of the improvised jitneys were going back with seats vacant. A little later, returning from Brooklyn, their drivers were hawking for fares in vain.

INDEPENDENT LINES RUN.

Surface trolley lines in Queens, operated by the New York & Queens County Railway Company, a subsidiary of the Interborough, and the Manhattan & Queens Traction Company, an independent line, were unaffected by the strike up to last evening.

These lines run from the Manhattan end of the Queensborough Bridge to Astoria, Steinway, North Beach, Corona, Flushing, and College Point, and from the latter point to Jamaica. The Manhattan & Queens Traction Company operates a shuttle line on the Queensborough Bridge, and from Fifty-ninth Street, Manhattan, to Jamaica.

Thousands of residents of the Greenpoint section of Brooklyn were inconvenienced by the tieup of the crosstown lines of the Brooklyn Rapid Transit Company that comes over the Vernon Avenue viaduct to Third Street, Long Island City.

DELANEY DENIES REPORTS OF RIOTS

FINDS SERVICE CRIPPLED

In a statement yesterday Transit Commissioner John H. Delaney said that he had made a careful survey of the situation on the rapid transit lines operated by the Brooklyn Rapid Transit Company and had found the service inadequate. He characterized the statements emanating from the office of the company about violence and rioting as untrue. These reports were issued by authority of Lindley M. Garrison, receiver of the company, and Mr. Delaney's denial of their truthfulness brings him into direct conflict with the receiver.

Mr. Delaney's statement was made at the hearing called by Public Service Commissioner Lewis Nixon to inquire into the condition of Brooklyn's transportation lines, and to lend whatever aid was possible to adjust the trouble so that traffic might be speedily resumed. Although the public had been invited to attend the hearing the meeting room of the commission held only a score when Mr. Nixon opened the proceedings. Mr. Delaney had been invited to occupy a seat on the dais with Mr. Nixon, but he declined and sat at the counsel table with the representatives of the company, the city and the commission.

Counsel for the company suggested that the hearing be postponed until this morning because of the unavoidable absence of Mr. Garrison, and Mr. Nixon appeared to think favorably of the suggestion when Mr. Delaney interposed a vigorous objection. His remarks, taken from the minutes of the stenographer, follow:

"I desire to protest against any delay in this hearing or any adjournment of the appearance of the Receiver and managers of the Brooklyn Rapid Transit Company. I have made a personal investigation of this situation and a personal tour of all the lines. I started at 10 o'clock yesterday morning and continued in this work for five hours, returning to the office at 3:30 o'clock.

"I found that the service was wholly inadequate, and I found that the reports which had emanated from the office of the railroad company, and which I had received in my office, to the effect that operation was prevented by violence and rioting, and that there was inadequate police protection, were untruthful, to say the least.

"During the entire five hours I was out I visited practically all important railroad points in the borough and found ample police protection at every point. There was no disorder, no rioting, no violence anywhere. It is my belief that the reports regarding the number of men who went on strike were inaccurate if not untruthful.

"At 9 o'clock in the morning it was reported from the B. R. T. office that approximately 1,000 men were out and that others were leaving their cars and trains on account of intimidation. When I went out I found that the service on the lines had decreased to less than one-half the former number of trains and that this was obviously caused by the failure of the men to report to work.

"The fact is that less than one-half the usual number of trains were running. Whether that be because the men had left their employment in larger numbers than the receiver had stated, or whether no effort was being made to operate trains, of course, I cannot say. From all appearances, however, two-thirds of the men had voluntarily left the service or were being detained in car headquarters.

"Now, in connection with the first consideration that, perhaps, two-thirds had voluntarily left, I am considering the statements made in the newspapers that the receiver had refused to meet a committee of the men to discuss the matters in controversy. I think that if such an arbitrary and unreasonable action has been taken, the receiver ought to come here this afternoon, and he certainly ought to be here at the earliest possible moment to make explanation why he has inflicted this hardship on the public for the purpose of exercising some arbitrary power which he thinks he possesses.

"This is much greater than the mere matter of the opinion of Receiver Garrison—as to whether unions ought to exist or not. It is a matter that affects every one of the million and a half population of Brooklyn. Therefore, I enter my protest against any adjournment until tomorrow afternoon.

"It appears to me that the railroad officials underestimated the number of men that would be involved, and when they find that the majority of their employes have really responded to the strike call they undertake to pass the responsibility to the police without any warrant in the situation for so doing."

When Mr. Delaney resumed his seat there was a slight pause and an evident air of embarrassment, but Mr. Nixon responded cordially and decided that the hearing should proceed, to be followed with another hearing today at which those who decided to attend might have an opportunity to be heard. Then employes of the commission were called, and their evidence sustained in a measure the reports from Brooklyn of violence and rioting, although there was no testimony indicating that disorder was rampant or beyond police control.

George F. Daggett, chief of the commission's transit bureau, read a table showing the effect of the strike upon service. The table was made up from reports received from inspectors stationed at the various points. It was as follows:

Comparative Table.

Depot.	Normal Operation: Rush No. Cars	Normal Operation: Non-rush No. Cars	Operation: Aug. 7, 8 A. M. P.C.	Operation: Aug. 7, 10:30 AM P.C.	Strike Conditions: Aug. 7, 12 Noon. P.C.

R. H. Nexsen, the commission's electrical engineer in charge of equipment, submitted a table prepared from reports of inspectors which showed the number of men employed normally in the various depots, the number working at the time, the number of cars assigned to be taken out, and the number actually operated. The time, depot, number of men normally employed in operating cars, and the men who remained at work during the period, are shown in this table. The time is yesterday morning during the rush period:

Other reports from inspectors were read by the witnesses. In the main they disclosed no united action for creating disorder, but only sporadic attempts to injure motormen and conductors.

UNION MEN DECLARE VICTORY IS IN SIGHT

By far the largest meeting of the striking B. R. T. carmen since the walkout, according to police estimates, was held last night in the Brooklyn Labor Lyceum. Between 5,000 and 6,000 jammed into the auditorium of the Lyceum while more than 500 others were compelled to wait on the outside for reports of the meeting.

The meeting last night was marked by the appearance, for the first time, of placards voicing the feelings of the carmen. The most noticeable of the many signs seen read, "Keep Off the Cars. Remember the Malbone Wreck," "We Licked the Kaiser of Berlin and We'll Lick the Kaiser of the B. R. T.," "The Czar was Overthrown and So Will Be Garrison," and "Lincoln Freed the Slaves but Forgot the Trolley Men."

The enthusiasm of the crowd was aroused to a high pitch by the announcement of William Reilly, Secretary and Treasurer of the newly organized union, the first speaker, who said that 2,884 carmen had enrolled in the union since yesterday morning. He declared that the newcomers were the older men of the company's employes who feared to leave their posts because of the possibility of losing their pension status.

Reilly charged that the B. R. T. officials had brought forty strikebreakers from Philadelphia to the Fresh Pond car barns during the day. He also asserted that Superintendent Hardberger of the East New York trolley lines had offered the men "$25 a day and two cops to a car" if they would remain at work. He said that all of the men turned down the offer with jeers.

P. J. Shea, Chairman of the National Executive Committee of the Amalgamated Association of Street and Electrical Railway Employes, who is directing the strike, told of taking up the grievances of the men yesterday with Mayor Hylan. He said that the Mayor had agreed to bring about a conference between the company officials and the strikers.

Goes to Hylan for Advice.

Mayor Hylan suggested that I get in touch with him at 4 o'clock in the afternoon by telephone, which I did," Mr. Shea said. "He advised us to ignore Garrison and to deal with Garrison's superior, Judge Mayer. The Mayor said: 'Mr. Garrison is trying to blame me for the appalling condition when he is at fault himself. He has ample police protection, but there is no necessity, as he himself knows he hasn't the men to run the cars.'"

Shea told the strikers that he had received information that Receiver Garrison was preparing to offer them 65 cents an hour to return to work without recognition of the union. Shouts of "Never" greeted this. The speaker urged the men not to accept any terms that did not include recognition of the union and the men shouted back "No union, no work."

Hugh Frayne, general organizer of the American Federation of Labor, congratulated the strikers on what he termed the splendid showing that they had made in their walkout. He warned them to conduct themselves in an orderly manner.

Louis Fridiger, attorney for the union, who was one of the delegation which went to confer with the Mayor but was barred by the latter, said that he did not know why Mr. Hylan had snubbed him. He devoted much of his talk to the explanation of the law to the strikers.

Charges that the police had severely beaten up a picketing striker who had been given permission by them to enter the Jamaica depot, at 165th Street and Jamaica Avenue, with twenty other pickets to urge the guards stationed there to walk out, were made by Samuel Bass, a striker, at the meeting. He said the injured man was Joseph Yuni, a former guard on the Lexington Avenue line, whose right leg he said was fractured and his body badly bruised by the clubbing received at the hands of the police. He denied that he or his fellow pickets had been disorderly.

HYLAN, IN POLICEMAN'S ROLE, DIRECTS TRAFFIC

Mayor Hylan became his own traffic policeman for an hour last night when, on his way uptown in his auto, he took charge of a jam at Delancey street and the Bowery and straightened out the tangle in a manner that made the spectators gasp. Owing to the B. R. T. strike, vehicles trying to get to and from Brooklyn over the Manhattan and Williamsburg Bridges became hopelessly tangled and the congestion extended into the side streets along the Bowery between the two bridges.

The Mayor, with his secretary, John F. Sinnott, reached the jam at Delancey Street and the Bowery shortly after 6 o'clock. One lone policeman was trying to straighten out the jam and keep things moving. The Mayor's machine was caught in the vortex. After a few minutes' wait the Mayor left his car and walked over to the lone policeman.

"Are you the only man here?" he asked.

"I am," replied the traffic officer, yelling at a truck driver at the same time.

"Then I guess I'll take charge," said the Mayor. He first sent for two mounted men, and when they appeared he stationed them at nearby corners. The Mayor then closed Delancey Street to east-bound traffic and sent all vehicles Brooklyn bound down to Manhattan Bridge. Soon a steady stream of vehicles that had tried to cross the Williamsburg Bridge was diverted down the Bowery, Kenmore, Mott, Mulberry, and Lafayette Streets.

Before reaching Delancey Street the Mayor had alighted for a few minutes at the Manhattan bridge entrance at Canal Street. He inquired of the traffic policeman at this point how things were going.

"All right, sir," replied the policeman, who recognized the Mayor. "They're going one way, sir, over the bridge to Brooklyn."

"Keep up the good work," replied the Mayor as he climbed back in his car.

SEND EMPLOYES TO HOTELS.

Demand for Rooms Began Two Days Ago—Guests Sleep on Cots.

The hotels were hard pressed to supply the demand for rooms yesterday because of the strike on the Brooklyn Rapid Transit lines.

The New York Telephone Company was the chief applicant for rooms, as a great majority of its personnel lives in Brooklyn. Foreseeing the trouble, they began making reservations day before yesterday, and last night every one was taken care of and the Telephone Company announced that the service was in no danger of being crippled.

Four hundred girls were housed in ten of the centrally-located hotels. The Martha Washington Hotel was the first to be appealed to, and fifty were located there. The Park Avenue Hotel cared for 150. Forty were at the Holland House, and about an equal number at the McAlpin, Pennsylvania, Imperial, Prince George, Wolcott and other hotels in that district.

The National Aniline and Chemical Company had considerable difficulty in finding accommodations for its employes, but was finally able to establish them at the Park Avenue Hotel, where four parlors on the first floor were equipped with cots.

Twenty-seventh Streets. Policeman Nessel had his right hand broken. Martin Walsh, one of the train crew, suffered fractured ribs. Henry Dornheimer, conductor of the car, living at 341 Fifty-first Street, had his skull fractured, being beaten over the head with a large iron bolt. His injuries may be fatal. Policeman Menicci suffered severe cuts on the head. In spite of their severe injuries the policemen finally scattered the mob.

Traffic on the Fifth Avenue surface line in South Brooklyn was halted during the rush hours in the afternoon when rock, lumber and other building material was piled on the tracks at Seventy-eighth Street and Fifth Avenue. Twenty-five cars in all left the Fifth Avenue depot between 4 and 6 o'clock, the largest number since the strike was called, but within a short time they began to return. Five in a row came at one time. They reported the obstruction on the tracks. The building materials had been obtained from the scene of some construction work at Seventy-eighth Street and Fifth Avenue. Strikers from a flying squadron of motor trucks carted the big rocks to the tracks.

A woman giving the name of Esther Zdana, 25 years old, of 174 Thirty-first Street, was arrested on a charge of malicious mischief, the police charging she placed several cobblestones on the tracks at Fifth Avenue and Thirty-first Street. Luke Hayren, 22 years old, a mechanic, of 5,404 Fifth Avenue, was arrested on a charge of disorderly conduct. He was charged with cutting the trolley rope of a Fifth Avenue car.

List of Disorders.

Fresh reports of violence were received every few minutes by telephone from different parts of Brooklyn at the B. R. T. offices in Brooklyn. The following is the chronological order in which the incidents were reported at the B. R. T. offices:

7:20 A. M.—Rioting by shipyard workers reported at Twenty-third Street and Third Avenue.

8 A. M.—A crowd stoning cars at Third Avenue and Sixty-fourth Street.

8:15 A. M.—Missile thrown at Franklin Avenue car at Franklin Avenue and Prospect Place strikes man in the eye.

8:20 A. M.—Order sent to crosstown, Maspeth and Park Row to divert cars away from Flushing Avenue between 12 and 1 P. M. to avoid trouble during the lunch hour near the Navy Yard.

8:20 A. M.—B. R. T. employe at Halsey Street sends word to B. R. T. offices that a crowd was preparing to pull crews off cars between Broadway and Wyckoff Avenue. Twenty crews in the Halsey Street depot refuse to go out unless there are two policemen on each car. Only one policeman at the depot.

8:25 A. M.—Crews at Maspeth say that passengers there are calling them "scabs" and other names and jostling them on the cars.

9:10 A. M.—Myrtle Avenue cars all in barns, because police are not giving proper protection. The police are insulting the men, calling them "scabs" and making insulting gestures at them.

9:12 A. M.—Large crowd at Reid and Van Buren causing considerable trouble.

9:23 A. M.—Four Fifth Avenue cars pulled in, Superintendent Gilchrist reports. The crews were afraid to go out. Gilchrist persuaded them to go out again. He has four crews out on the Fifth Avenue line and five on the Third Avenue, two on Bay Ridge, and the Court Street line is running normal. Large crowd at 157th Street and Fifth Avenue. Conductor on Third Avenue line had a man arrested for calling him a "scab" and attempting to assault him.

9:55 A. M.—Crowd boarded car at De Kalb Avenue and St. James's Place.

Crew badly beaten up and car damaged by stones, &c. Shortly after another car was stoned at this point.

10:15 A. M.—Men refused to leave Halsey Street depot with only one man on a car. Police Sergeant refuses to put more than one man on a car. Borough Inspector Murphy notified and promised ot straighten out the matter immediately.

10:25 A. M.—Graham Avenue cars all in. Only two crosstown cars on the line and they are on their way in. Crowd going over to Maspeth to pull crews off their cars.

10:32 A. M.—Truck load of about 100 going from Halsey Street to East New York. East New York notified.

11 A. M.—Culver elevated ceased operation.

11:35 A. M.—Men refused to take cars out at Halsey Street. Three large motor trucks labelled "Canarsie-East New York" unloaded men in front of the depot here. Thirty crews in the depot absolutely refused to go out while the crowd is around the depot.

11:25—Superintendent Hogberg states all cars are pulling in. Men were badly beaten, their clothes torn, badges taken away, controller handles, punches and money stolen. Men report that persons in the crowd threatening them drew revolvers on them. The men are absolutely afraid to take the cars and police protection is not sufficient.

1:25 P. M.—Supt. Gilcrist stated that a Court Street car was attacked at Twenty-seventh Street and Third Avenue by a crowd. The crew was pulled off the car and the car damaged. Starter Dorheim was badly beaten and is at the Fifty-eighth Street depot waiting for an ambulance. These acts of violence took the heart out of the men at the depot. Auto trucks with 150 men operating in Fifth Avenue. They attempted to pull a peddler's wagon in front of a car to stop it.

1:27 P. M.—Whitney at Borough Hall stated that several strikers at the Long Island Depot are intimidating crews as they come along.

2:00 P. M.—Men reported greasing rails, building bon-fires between the rails and throwing red-hot bars over the tracks, so that the motormen will get burned if they attempt to remove them.

2:10 P. M.—Eight crews held up by mobs at Myrtle Avenue and Fresh Pond Road. Badges and controller handles were taken from crews. No aid from the police. Cars were taken back to the depot.

2:30 P. M.—Seventy men in a motor truck drove up to a Sixteenth Avenue car at Union Street and Prospect Park West and demanded that motormen leave their cars. The motormen promised not to take the cars out on another trip and were not molested. Two policemen on the car looked on and did nothing.

2:30 P. M.—Mr. Thomas of the claims department telephoned that a crowd of 100 men were tampering with the electric switch at Gates and Franklin Avenues.

2:50 P. M.—Three truck loads of men crossed the Williamsburg Bridge, saying that they would "get employes" at the Delancey Street terminal.

3:00 P. M.—Three or four truckloads of men arrived at Ninth Avenue depot and paraded around it five or six times.

3:30 P. M.—Strikers dumped a load of dirt and stones on rails at Bergen Street, between Franklin and Vanderbilt Avenues.

ARCHDUKE SEIZES POWER IN HUNGARY

APPOINTS NEW MINISTRY

Is Said to Have Reached Agreement in Conference with Entente Mission.

ALLIES APPEAL TO RUMANIA

PARIS, Aug. 7.—The Peace Conference was advised today that the Hungarian Cabinet, headed by Jules Peidll, had been overthrown by a coup d'état effected without disorder, and that Archduke Joseph had established a Ministry in Budapest.

An official statement regarding the change was made by the French Government this afternoon. The statement read:

"Hungarian gendarmes surrounded the palace in Budapest and arrested the Government at 6 o'clock yesterday evening. Archduke Joseph assumed power, with the title of Governor of the State, and announced that he would organize a coalition cabinet."

A later statement reported the announcement of Herr Friedrich as Premier and of two Generals, Schnitzer and Tanezos, respectively as Minister of War and of Foreign Affairs. Professor Bleyer was made Minister of Nationalities and Dr. C. Sillery Minister of Health. Portfolios have been offered Agrarians and Social Democrats and also members of the Szegedin Government.

The Social Democrats of Hungary, it was said, still hoped that the allied and associated governments would not tolerate either Rumanian control of the country or that of a Government by the reactionary Grand Dukes.

Allies Sent Another Note.

The Supreme Council of the Peace Conference held a meeting today to consider the Hungarian situation, which is giving the conference great uneasiness, as mandates from that body to the Rumanians seem useless. It is declared in Budapest advices that the Rumanian General in command refused to permit the publication in the Rumanian press of Premier Clemenceau's telegram of Aug. 5 to the Hungarian Government. The Supreme Council, following the meeting, sent a note to the Rumanian authorities begging them to conform to the decisions of the Entente and not to embarrass by previous decisions the work of the Inter-Allied Investigating Commission sent to Budapest.

Herbert Hoover, head of the Inter-Allied Relief Commission, has stopped all relief supplies on the way to Budapest, taking the position that he would be unwarranted in letting supplies reach Hungary while the Rumanians are now depriving the people of foodstuffs.

Members of the American peace delegation said this evening that there were no American troops now in Budapest and that none would be sent there. It was added that the only Americans in the Hungarian capital were officers and possibly a few soldiers engaged in relief work.

Accounts of the Rumanian proceedings report that they notified the Hungarians yesterday that because the terms of the armistice laid down in the Rumanian ultimatum had not been accepted, the Rumanians would cross the Danube immediately. This they did, entering the business section of Buda and seizing supplies preparatory to shipping them to Rumania.

Other acts charged against the Rumanians are assaults upon inoffensive persons and forced entrances into houses everywhere under the pretext of searching for arms.

The Rumanian Army is reported living on the country, seizing the food it wants, while live stock, farming implements, rolling stock, and food are being sent to Rumania, although Budapest is on the verge of starvation.

The Rumanians, the advices add, have instituted a blockade, one feature of which has been the destruction of portions of the railways between Budapest and Vienna. The entire communications system of Central Europe has been upset, making it impossible to forward supplies for the feeding of the starving populations.

Brig. Gen. Harry H. Bandholtz, the American representative on the Inter-Allied Military Commission, appointed by the Allies to arrange a settlement at Budapest, will leave here tonight for Hungary. General Bandholtz formerly was Chief of the Philippine Constabulary. The Military Commission will include also General Granziani for France, General Gordon for Great Britain, and General Monbelli for Italy.

Archduke Appeals to People.

BUDAPEST, Aug. 6, (Associated Press.)—Archduke Joseph took over control of the Hungarian Government today and has been invested temporarily with supreme powers in the Government. The Entente mission delegated governmental authority to him when the Peidl Government was deposed, and he appointed Stephen Friederic, former chief of a department in the War Ministry, to be Premier. The Foreign Ministry was transferred to General Tanezos, and the War Ministry to General Schnitzer-Wolkenbers.

The Entente mission conferred this evening with Archduke Joseph and Premier Friedrich. It was stated that after consulting upon various matters a full agreement was reached, and that Premier Clemenceau, President of the Peace Conference, and the various foreign Governments were informed of the results of the conference.

Subsequently the Archduke issued a proclamation appealing to all classes to help him in his fight to completely put down anarchy and to establish order with a strong hand. The proclamation follows:

"Impelled by the imperishable love which binds me to the Hungarian people, and looking back over the common suffering of the past five years, as well as responding to the wishes which have reached me from all sides, I have taken a hand in the solution of a situation which already seemed impossible.

"I cannot look on while politicians and various interests and party groups quarrel over the fate of our poor, broken fatherland. Everywhere there is complete anarchy—risings in trans-Danubia, a ministry in office that has recognized no one, and a complete stoppage of the food supply threatening a catastrophe unless the Hungarian educated classes and the agricultural population establish order with a strong hand.

In addition to the Rumanian troops in Budapest, French, British, American, and Czech troops have also reached here. The British forces are under the command of General Gordon. The Americans are commanded by Captain Nyss. Upon the arrival of General Gordon during the day the Peidl Government set before him the Rumanian demands, with the statement that the Hungarian Government was not prepared to accept the terms.

All railroad traffic in and out of Budapest has been suspended.

Budapest remains quiet in the face of the change in Government, which was effected at 7 o'clock this evening, when General Schnitzer-Wolkenbers, the Chief of Police; Dr. Fritz, former Secretary of the Police Department, and M. Szellery, former Departmental Chief in the War Ministry, went to the Ministry Building, where the Cabinet was in session. The deputation called on the Ministers to resign, and after a short conference the Cabinet decided to comply with the demand.

Reported American Ultimatum.

LONDON, Aug. 7.—A dispatch from Vienna, by way of Copenhagen, to the Exchange Telegraph Company says that the United States has sent an ultimatum to Rumania demanding withdrawal of the severe armistice terms presented to Hungary on pain of a cessation of the shipment of food to Rumania.

WASHINGTON, Aug. 7.—Archduke Joseph's assumption of authority in Hungary was regarded with something akin to satisfaction today by some officials at the State Department. Secretary Lansing was without information regarding the change in Government, other than that contained in Associated Press dispatches.

It was pointed out that the official statement issued by the French Government appeared to indicate no intention to restore the monarchy, since the new ruler had styled himself "Governor of the State."

Unless it becomes apparent that his plan includes the re-establishment of the old Government, it seemed probable today that the new rule would receive sympathetic consideration from America. It was explained, however, that no steps had been taken by the Peace Conference to prevent the Hungarians from setting up another monarchy, should they desire.

JOSEPH RENOUNCED ROYALTY.

Most Popular Member of Hapsburg Family Lived in Budapest.

Archduke Joseph, who has assumed direction of affairs in Hungary, was a commander of Austro-Hungarian forces on the southern section of the eastern battlefront during the first two years of the Great War, with the rank of Field Marshal of Austria.

In 1918 he headed a movement looking to the securing of independence for Hungary from Austria, and when the collapse of the Dual Monarchy came, in November, 1918, he was asked by Emperor Charles of Austria to take charge of the situation and find a solution of the political crisis before the country. With his son, Archduke Joseph Francis, he renounced all rights as a member of the royal house and took the oath to submit unconditionally to the orders of the Hungarian National Council. Later both took the oath of fealty to the new Government.

Last April it was reported that he had been executed by the Communists at Budapest, but this report was promptly denied.

Archduke Joseph was born at Alosuth on Aug. 9, 1872. On Nov. 15, 1893, he married in Munich Princess Augustine of Bavaria. In addition to Joseph Francis they have three children, Archduke Ladislas and the Archduchesses Sophie and Madeleine. Their home was in Budapest.

Archduke Joseph frequently has been referred to as the most popular member of the Hapsburg family. He did much work among the poor and unfortunate, particularly in the Hungarian capital. He is a doctor of law and doctor of technical sciences of the University of Budapest and doctor of medicine of the University of Kolozsvar. Among the decorations given him under the old Empire were that of Chevalier of the Austrian Order of the Golden Fleece, the Order of the Black Eagle, the Order of St. Hubert, and the Order of Saints Cyrille and Methode.

VIENNA, Aug. 5.—Terrible acts of retaliation are reported from all parts of the Hungarian country where many representatives of the Communist reign have been mistreated and killed by the infuriated people. In numerous villages Bolsheviki were clubbed and stoned to death. All the Bolsheviki are in hiding, and are afraid of showing themselves.

The so-called Lenin Boys, Bela Kun's former bodyguard, who committed innumerable atrocities, have all been arrested. One of them confessed to thirty-six murders.

COPENHAGEN, Aug. 7. (Hungarian.)—A dispatch received from Vienna says that according to Die Zeit the Hungarian Ambassador fled from Vienna Wednesday night in an automobile after having burned all his secret documents.

The dispatch adds that Hungarian journalists and officers went to the Embassy Thursday morning and thrashed the staff and threw the members into the street.

COUNCIL ENRAGED BY RUMANIA'S ACT

Little State Flouts All Paris Orders and Dashes Hopes for Peace in East Europe.

PEIDL HAD ALLIES' PLEDGE

By CHARLES A. SELDEN.

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

PARIS, Aug. 7.—The Peace Conference finds itself today at the lowest point of humiliation and perplexity it has ever reached. It is in the position of having gone forfeit on a moral contract with the Hungarian Government of Peidl. It has been forced to look on helplessly while that Government, which it had approved, is pushed out of existence by an Archduke. And this discomfiture of the great Paris conference has been brought upon it by an ally—Rumania—so small and weak that America had to spend $20,000,000 last Winter to keep it from starving.

Almost any member of the conference still left in Paris to wind up the supposed small fag ends of peace-making will admit this humiliation. As one of the plenipotentiaries put it this morning:

"You cannot exaggerate the evil situation now existing in Hungary."

But there is no plan yet to remedy it. Everything is waiting on the report of the four allied Generals sent by the conference to Budapest, but three of them have not even arrived.

In the meantime the Rumanian troops, 60,000 strong, are terrorizing the Hungarian population and doing all the things the Peace Conference said absolutely must not be done.

In the first place, Paris told the Rumanian Army to keep out of Budapest and leave the Peidl Government alone. But the Rumanians invaded Budapest the next day. The Peace Conference told Rumania that its ultimatum to Hungary demanding supplies and laying down conditions for a new armistice was invalid and that Hungary should ignore it. The Rumanian Government prevented the publication of this order from Paris both at Bucharest and Budapest and went on to enforce its ultimatum. And four Generals are only just on their way to learn what it is all about!

Somebody at the Hotel Crillon this morning was moved to recall the famous remark of Elihu Root about shaking a fist first and a finger afterward.

Things move so much faster in the Balkan capitals than in Paris that the Peace Conference seems always to be just about one or two revolutions, one or two massacres, behind the procession.

Conference Gave Its Word.

As to the moral contract which has now gone by the board, it was involved in correspondence between Hungarian labor unions and the Paris Peace Conference. The unions asked if they overthrew the Bolsheviki and set up an orderly Government if Paris would support them. Paris said "Yes."

The labor unions carried out their end of the bargain in a fashion admitted to be satisfactory, but the Paris Peace Conference in its helplessness to deal with Rumania utterly failed to keep its end of the bargain by preventing the invasion by Rumanian troops.

According to dispatches received here it was 6 o'clock last night (Wednesday) when the Peidl Government was overthrown. The members were taken prisoners while attending a Cabinet meeting. For twenty-four hours before that the Rumanian troops had been enforcing the so-called ultimatum by collecting food, cattle, and supplies, and sending them off to Rumania despite the fact that this means the starvation of the people of Budapest.

Also the Rumanians have established a new blockade against Hungary, one feature in which is cutting the railroad from Budapest to Vienna. It should be remembered in this connection that one of the things the Peace Conference specifically promised the Hungarian people through the labor unions was that the blockade should end and food be sent.

News that the Archduke Joseph had set up a new Hungarian Government quickly followed that of Peidl's overthrow. The Social Democrats of Budapest managed to get their appeal through to Paris this afternoon begging the Peace Conference to save the country from both the Rumanians and the reactionary Archduke.

But the conference is helplessly asking what it can do. The only comment on Archduke Joseph by one of the peacemakers was:

"I fear he has monarchical tendencies."

But that is about the only attempt any one has made at a joke on the present Balkan mess.

Archduke Planning for Weeks.

Because of the fact that Joseph was known to be planning this coup for weeks, the sinister suggestion was made today in some French quarters that the labor unions had been used without their knowledge merely as a catspaw for getting rid of the Bela Kun Government to pave the way for Archduke Joseph, and that the Peace Conference had been made the victim of a hoax in its promise to support the Social Democratic Government.

No word was received in Paris indicating the attitude of the Rumanian troops toward the Archduke's Government.

The American and British delegates in Paris are furious over the situation, at least as furious as plenipotentiaries ever allow themselves to get. The French, although impressed by the seriousness of the situation, cannot refrain from chuckling a little over the miscarriage of the Hungarian policy, which they disapproved from the start, because it did not agree with their desire to send a large military force, chiefly American, to Hungary.

But the Italians are more frankly disturbed than anybody else by this coming to the front of Archduke Joseph. Italy's traditional fear and hatred of Austria-Hungary is associated only with the aristocracy of the old dual monarchy. Italy would go out of her way to support any form of democratic socialist Government in Hungary merely for safety and protection. For that reason Italy was heartily in accord with America and England, as against France for backing Peidl. Now she is experiencing something like a fright at the very thought that the Archduke Joseph's Government may be the beginning of the restoration of the aristocracies north of her.

But peace headquarters do not share Italy's fears in that direction. There is much more alarm that the overthrow of Peidl will soon lead to the recurrence of Bolshevism in Hungary, which the Allies thought they had got rid of with Bela Kun.

Regardless of the differences of opinion on various phases of the situation, the delegates in Paris are beginning to wonder if they would not have had an easier task restoring peace in Europe if they had left Austria-Hungary intact, as they might have done, instead of cutting it up and trying so many experiments at one time in setting up small and independent liberty-lovnig States.

POLICE WILL NOT JOIN UNION IF PAY GOES UP

Denial that the policemen of the city have joined a labor union was made yesterday by Joseph P. Moran, President of the Patrolmen's Benevolent Association, but he added that the police are expecting a salary increase from the Board of Estimate, and that if it is not forthcoming the question of the policemen affiliating with organized labor will be taken up then. President Moran said:

"The published statements that the patrolmen have joined the American Federation of Labor are untrue. The Patrolmen's Benevolent Association has a membership of close to 10,000. Its members in every emergency, in war and in peace times, have been loyal to the city. There are hundreds of men in our ranks who prior to joining the force were union men in the various trades. They still hold their union cards. These men now find that union labor men are better paid for less hours of work than the police.

"The patrolmen cannot live decently on the pay they receive after the cost of uniforms and equipment is deducted. This condition quite naturally breeds discontent among the men. There has been considerable discussion of the subject.

"The patrolmen have asked the city for a salary of at least $1,800. There is one way for the city to show the patrolmen there is no need of any labor affiliation, and that way is to pay the police wages equal to that paid to the trade union man and in keeping with the fact that the dollar given to the policeman today purchases only half what it did before the war. The patrolmen feel assured that the application they have made to the Board of Estimate through the Civil Service Forum for increased pay will be approved.

"When and if the question of any affiliation with organized labor is presented to the Patrolmen's Benevolent Association the action taken thereon will be duly announced by its officers."

When Louis Fridiger, counsel to the striking B. R. T. employes, who declared that the police had formed a labor union, called at the City Hall yesterday in company with Hugh Frayne, general representative of the American Federation of Labor, and Patrick F. Shea of the General Amalgamated Association of Street Railway Employes of America, to discuss the Brooklyn strike, the Mayor refused to see him. Mr. Fridiger insisted he was the legal representative of the policemen.

WON'T SHIRK IRISH ISSUE, PREMIER SAYS

Lloyd George Asserts He Has a Scheme in View and Will Carry It Through.

"FORCE NOT LAST WORD"

Tells the House of Commons Also That the Government Will Work to Cut Down Expenditures.

LONDON, Aug. 7, (Associated Press.)—Sir Donald MacLean, National Liberal, in the House of Commons today raised the question of the Government's Irish policy, saying he wanted a discussion of it.

David Lloyd George, the Premier, replying, expressed the belief that a discussion now would not conduce to a favorable settlement. He had an Irish policy in view, he said, but realized that there existed fresh difficulties which might induce the Government to modify or alter particular views they might hold.

"It is not a credit to the country that after hundreds of years of British rule in Ireland we have failed to succeed in reconciling Ireland to the partnership," the Premier continued. "It is the business of statesmanship to bring that condition of things to an end. The rule of force cannot be the last word."

The Premier admitted it was the business of the Government to propound their scheme after careful consideration of all the circumstances. That was the only course after the failure of all outside schemes, and the Government must therefore assume the risk of carrying through their scheme. The House, he declared, could depend upon it that the Government did not propose to shirk that responsibility.

Replying to the Laborite suggestion of withdrawal of the troops from Ireland, the Premier thought Irishmen themselves would be the first to protest such a course. Law and order must be maintained, otherwise there would be anarchy, and the Government was responsible for preserving order.

Answering criticisms of his frequent absences from Parliament, the Premier said there were so many vital problems to consider—industrial disputes, profiteering, trade policy, and coal—it would be impossible for any Prime Minister, whatever his physical resources, to give full study to these problems and at the same time be in the House. He hoped next week or the following week to submit to the House a general review of the situation and policy, because he wished to place the nation face to face with its responsibilities. The situation in many respects was abnormal and so grave that he feared it impossible to recover and re-establish things unless everybody realized his responsibility. The Premier went on:

"The situation is indeed grave, but not beyond the compass of its resources if the nation will pull itself together. All that is needed is that everybody throughout the land put forth their best exertions as they did during the war and we shall emerge triumphantly. I agree that it is the business of the Government to see that the gigantic expenditure which had to be incurred to save the national life shall be cut down at the first possible moment. Such expenditure was inevitable until we knew that Germany had accepted the peace terms."

Now that peace had been re-established with Germany and would soon be re-established with other countries, the Premier said he hoped the House and the Government would see that expenditure was cut down to the narrowest possible limits.

URGES LLOYD GEORGE TO TAKE UP IRELAND

London Times Calls for a Statement of Policy—He Replies That Its Policy Failed.

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

LONDON, Aug. 7.—The London Times in an editorial article says:

"Once again the Government will today be asked for a statement of their policy in regard to Ireland. Hitherto they have evaded this responsibility, trusting doubtless that the recess would presently save them from the importunity of seekers after knowledge where no knowledge has been. We know, indeed, the Prime Minister abhors a policy and loves tactics. By defining a policy the head of the Government binds his hands and gives hostages. But the problem of Ireland is not to be solved by ignoring it or even by practicing what has sometimes been called 'conservative expectancy.'

"If it be asking too much of this Government to examine and treat national issues in a national way without care for personal or party advantage, considerations of a lower order may possibly appeal to them. In the light of their record it is fair to assume they care for the preservation of their own Ministerial existence. In that case they may well be, for the angurs have little that is good to report. The by-elections have been ominous. The confidence which the Prime Minister enjoyed for the purpose of making peace in Paris is rapidly dwindling. That confidence was an extension of the trust placed in him as a war Premier and related to the activities for which the King has fitly bestowed on him the Order of Merit.

"As a peace Premier he has still to justify himself. The stress of war conditions and the need for national unity in the conduct of international affairs gave the centripetal force to the elements of the coalition, but in the absence of a truly national and dynamic conception of the home situation that force is becoming centrifugal. Unless the coalition is to fall asunder or to die of progressive paralysis, it is essential that it and the Administration which it supports should give proof of effective continuance of that larger spirit in the conduct of national affairs which it showed during the war and which is, indeed, the only raison d'être of the coalition.

"The closing days of the Summer session offer it and the Government a fleeting opportunity. At a time when public feeling is running strong, who can say whither things will drift during the recess? With the uncertain labor situation, with difficulties unparalleled in national finance, with a Winter of discontent approaching, there is yet one question on which the Prime Minister might claim and regain public confidence. It is the question of Ireland."

In the course of his statement in the House of Commons on the Irish problem, Premier Lloyd George made a special reference to the London Times' campaign. He said a great journal not particularly friendly to him, and he was not sure he was very friendly to it, had joined the ranks of those who said that something must be done. It had proposed a great scheme which every party in Ireland had joined in condemning. That was the experience of every one.

It was very easy to say "You must do something and do it at once," but the moment it was done the experience this great journal had was the experience of every one who came forward and proposed any scheme.

made, but there is every reason for believing that one of the principal recommendations will be that the principle of the Food Control act, under which hoarders and profiteers may be reached, be broadened so as to make it effective even after the proclamation of peace and applicable to other commodities besides foodstuffs.

It was stated in a well informed quarter that the message would not contain any recommendation for a national licensing system for legislation to limit the margin of profits. The message will deal exclusively with the question of the high cost of living.

There was an intimation tonight that Representative Blanton, Democrat, of Texas would raise a point of no quorum when the House meets tomorrow and might force that body to adjourn. There has been no quorum in Congress since Saturday. Each day Mr. Blanton has raised his point and forced the House to adjourn.

Mr. Mondell, the Republican floor leader, said tonight, however, that he felt certain that a quorum would be present tomorrow, basing his statement on telegraphic and personal advices he had received.

said that "traffic will be discontinued in three days."

R. H. Aishton, Regional Director of Railroads for the Northwest, issued the following statement regarding the conditions governing freight:

> Beginning immediately and continuing until further notice, all freight of every description in carload lots will be accepted only as subject to delay on account of the strike. All bills of lading must be indorsed: "This freight accepted subject to delay on account of strike."

Railway freight traffic on the Chicago & Northwestern Railroad was suspended today on the Iowa & Minnesota Division because of the shopmen's strike, according to a statement made at the division offices of the company. Passenger trains on the Northwestern are running with irregularity.

Reports from St. Louis and Kansas City said railroads there are refusing to accept live stock shipments for Chicago. Word was received from Milwaukee that all the roads entering that city had declared an embargo on wheat shipments. Union leaders predicted that an embargo would be declared on wheat at St. Louis, Kansas City and other points within forty-eight hours. Thousands of locomotives and cars in bad repair and unfit for service are reported to be accumulating in a number of railroad centres.

M. L. Hawver, President of the Chicago Council of the Federated Railway Shopmen's Union, said today that there are 300,000 men out and that this will soon tie up the traffic on every road in the country.

DETROIT, Aug. 7.—Freight service on the Detroit division of the Wabash Railroad was sharply curtailed today because of the strike of shop employes. About 700 Michigan Central shop and roundhouse employes are out on the Detroit division, but service on this division thus far has not been affected.

CINCINNATI, Aug. 7.—Reduction of passenger service due to strike conditions among the shop and yard mechanics was announced today by the Chesapeake & Ohio Railroad. A freight embargo already is in force throughout that system. Altogether thirty-four passenger trains will be discontinued until further orders.

A freight embargo to Columbus, Ohio, and all points east was announced by the Pennsylvania Railroad today. The only exception is food for human consumption to Columbus proper. Embargoes also are in effect on the Louisville & Nashville and the Cincinnati, Indianapolis & Western Railroads.

DULUTH, Minn., Aug. 7.—As result of the situation growing out of strike conditions here, E. D. Brigham, manager for the United States Railway Administration, head of lakes district, announces that effective at once and until further notice freight of every description will be accepted only subject to delay. Loading of iron ore at mines for all docks ceased at noon today. Work at all docks will be discontinued with close of business this afternoon.

BALTIMORE, Aug. 7.—Approximately 2,500 shopmen employed at the Mount Clare and Riverside shops of the Baltimore & Ohio Railroad went on strike today. The strike virtually tied up work at the shops.

CHATTANOOGA, Tenn., Aug. 7.—Freight traffic on the Southern Railway between here and Atlanta was suspended today because of the shopmen's strike. The Nashville, Chattanooga & St. Louis Railway announced an embargo on all freight, except that for human consumption, for points beyond Atlanta.

RICHMOND, Va., Aug. 7.—Curtailment of freight and passenger service on railroads entering this city was announced today, the Seaboard Air Line putting embargoes on all freight, except food for human consumption, and the Chesapeake & Ohio discontinuing two of its passenger trains to Old Point. Further curtailment is expected.

ATLANTA, Ga., Aug. 7.—The first break in the strike of railroad shopmen in the Southeast came late today, when 1,500 employes of the Norfolk & Western Railroad shops at Roanoke, Va., voted to return to work tomorrow and await results of the vote on a general strike order. In the meantime, railroads generally in the Southeast were working under a suspension of freight traffic except in perishable goods and foodstuffs. Passenger trains generally were running on schedule, but Pullman sleeping cars had been eliminated from several trains.

tiations with the railway employes if they would go back to work.

How the money to meet the wage increase, which Mr. Hines says he has not got, is to be raised in the event that the demands of the employes are met, President Wilson does not say in his communication. The general opinion here was that two courses were open. One would be an increase in freight rates; the other a request upon Congress for an appropriation, thus putting squarely up to Congress the question whether it was willing to supply the money necessary to carry out the decisions made by Mr. Hines in the event that Mr. Hines considered that to be the only manner in which a strike could be averted.

It was noted that there was no mention in President Wilson's communication to Mr. Hines of the agitation which has been started by some branches of the railway employes for the adoption of the Plumb plan for the nationalization of the railway systems as the cure for wage troubles. Mr. Jewell has stated that there was no thought on the part of the men to strike in an effort to force the Plumb plan on the Government, and that the only question which would bring on a general strike would be refusal of the Government to grant wage demands which were considered legitimate to meet present economic standards.

In a letter to Senator Cummins, Chairman of the Interstate Commerce Commission, today, Mr. Hines agrees with the view expressed in the Senator's letter of yesterday to President Wilson that the Railroad Administration has ample authority under existing laws to regulate the wages of railroad employes, along with railroad freight and passenger rates.

Mr. Hines wrote that he had regarded the issue involved in the demands of the railroad brotherhood for increased wages, as an alternative to a reduction of the cost of living, as so vital that he had felt Congress ought to be consulted in framing a policy upon which to act.

Mr. Hines's letter reached Senator Cummins shortly after that of the Senator to the President was made public. In his letter to the President Senator Cummins stated that the Interstate Commerce Commission had voted not to take up the railroad wage problem, as suggested by the President, because of existing power vested in the hands of the executive and the railroad director. His letter follows:

"The committee recognizes the gravity of the situation and earnestly desires to co-operate with you in bringing about the proper solution of the difficult problems which confront the country. It feels, however, that Congress has already given you complete and plenary authority to deal with the existing situation, and that additional legislation at this time can add nothing whatever to your power in the premises.

"The Director General can fix the wages of all men employed in the transportation service, and it seems to be clear that it is for him to say whether the compensation of these men should or should not be increased. He has all the available information which can possibly be secured, and it is the view of the committee that he should act in accordance with the public interest and his own judgment. He can be advised upon the subject by any board or tribunal which you may select for that purpose.

"The Director General has also the absolute right to initiate rates for transportation and can advance or lower them, as he may think necessary or wise, to meet the requirements of the transportation systems in his charge, and, moreover, he can put the new rates into effect whenever, in his judgment, they should become effective. At the present time the Interstate Commerce Commission has not the authority to suspend for examination or approval the rates initiated by the Director General.

Prepare Railroad Bill.

"The committee is now diligently engaged in the preparation of a bill for the general reorganization of our system of regulation and control. One common phase of the many plans which have been submitted relates to the further direction which ought to be given to the Interstate Commerce Commission for its guidance in determining the reasonableness of rates. Upon that phase of the subject diverse opinions have been developed, and it is thought to be unwise to bring forward for action by Congress any further legislation in that respect until it can be associated with the general plan of reorganization.

"If the committee felt that there was any lack of power on your part or on the part of the Director General it would be quick to act; but, inasmuch as it can perceive no want of authority, it has reached the conclusion that no additional legislation is required to meet the particular emergency which you have pointed out."

Here is the letter which Director General Hines sent to Mr. Jewell in communicating to him the President's letter:

> Dear Sir: I inclose a letter which I have just received from the President relative to the wage matter.
> It is obvious that it is of the highest importance, not only in the interest of the public, but in the interest of the employes themselves, that they shall immediately return to work. The situation having been clarified by the definite indication that Congress does not wish to take action in the premises, the Railroad Administration stands ready to take up the wage question on its merits with the duly accredited international officers and their authorized committee as soon as the employes return to work. Sincerely yours,
> WALKER D. HINES.

The railroad situation was the subject of prolonged and grave conferences at the White House today. Director General Hines took the matter up with the President, first, placing before him, it is said, the communication received from the four brotherhoods and the railway shopmen, setting forth that they must have cash relief at once, and that in their opinion the adoption of the Plumb plan was the only ultimate solution.

To add to this came the news that the association of railway clerks and affiliated employes was taking a strike vote and that it probably would result in 450,000 of their number going on strike within a month in the event wage increases were not granted.

After talking with the President for a considerable time, Mr. Hines summoned a number of his experts to the White House, where they held a separate conference at which a complete analysis of the situation was drawn up and the opinion of the Railroad Administration as the best course to be pursued prepared. These data were submitted to the President prior to the preparation of his letter to Mr. Hines.

Clerks Take Strike Vote.

WASHINGTON, Aug. 7, (Associated Press.)—The 450,000 members of the Brotherhood of Railway Clerks, Freight Handlers, Station, Express, and Steamship Employes will begin voting tomorrow as to whether they will strike immediately for increased wages or await a solution of the wage question along the lines of the proposal made to Congress by Director General Hines.

In announcing the issuing of the strike ballot, J. J. Forrester, President of the brotherhood, said his conference yesterday with Mr. Hines had not resulted in any change in the situation.

"The situation with our men," said Mr. Forrester, "is that we must have immediate relief, or our members will commence seeking employment in occupations where they can make a living for themselves and their families. They have been so loyal in numberless cases now that they have even sold their Liberty bonds to live on during the last few months. Our hope is that Congress can take some action at once to relieve them."

Increases sought by the men, Mr. Forrester said, approximate 20 cents an hour over present scales, with time and a half for overtime.

PLUMB PLAN OR REVOLUTION

morrow and will probably continue on Saturday. Next week A. B. Garretson, former head of the Order of Railway Conductors and one of the spectacular figures in the passage of the Adamson law, will testify. Mr. Stone and Mr. Morrison, who have apppeared, will, with Mr. Plumb and Mr. Garretson, be the only four champions of the plan labor has designated to give testimony.

The members of the committee asked searching questions today, but the atmosphere was not as tense as during Mr. Morrison's appearance yesterday. One committee member, Mr. Rayburn of Texas, Democrat, made a statement after the meeting that the committee would never approve the Plumb plan as it stands.

Says Committee Is Hostile.

"The labor union plan allowing the brotherhoods to share profits while other workers are forced to shoulder the possible losses and pay for the original investment will never be reported by the committee," said Mr. Rayburn. "The committee will never agree to the plan, in the face of the evidence thus far submitted. The members feel that the people want the roads returned to private ownership. But, unless something unforeseen develops and reasons unknown now are advanced to prove that the United States should take this plunge into socialism, the Plumb plan bill will remain in the committee."

Another Texas Representative, Mr. Black, while not a member of the committee, also expressed his ideas today in no uncertain terms. He said:

"The Plumb plan is socialism pure and simple. The brotherhoods may as well understand that if this country has Government ownership—and God forbid that it does—that it will not be the Soviet kind suggested by the Plumb plan. The American people will not buy bonds and then turn them over to Warren S. Stone, W. G. Lee, L. E. Sheppard, and Timothy Shea to be operated in the 'interest' of the public. The brotherhoods got a taste of power in September, 1916, when the Adamson law was passed under their whip and spur, and they have been intoxicated by it ever since. The thirst for power is an appetite which grows by what it feeds upon. The American people cannot afford to have any group of its citizens, I do not care who they are and how large their number, defy the Government and assert they will force legislation, whether the people want it or not."

When Mr. Plumb took the stand today he read a long prepared statement.

Mr. Plumb's Statement.

Mr. Plumb's statement, in part, was as follows:

"Twenty-two million citizens, out of patriotism, contributed, not only from past savings but frequently by mortgaging their future earnings, $20,000,000,000 to aid in the prosecution of the war. On this contribution they are assured a return of only 3¼ to 4½ per cent. If they now see the Government of that country which they love guaranteeing 6 per cent. returns on $20,000,000,000 of railroad securities, of which at least half is fictitious, if the Interstate Commerce Commission's figures on five small roads are to be taken as characteristic of the entire industry, representing no service to the public, thereby depreciating their securities, for which they paid par value, by 50 per cent., can you expect them to maintain that patriotic belief in their country which moved them to such sacrifice in time of its need?

"The representatives of railway securities, the railway security holders, and the United States Chamber of Commerce appearing before you have ascertained that they speak for half of the citizens of the United States as being interested in the value, in maintaining the credit of railway securities. By what basis they reach this conclusion I cannot tell. But they assert that savings banks, trust companies, and life insurance companies have large investments in railway securities, that every depositor in such a bank, every holder of a life insurance policy, and every one in any way affected by the net assets of such institutions are represented by them.

"If 50,000,000 people are indirectly affected by the market value of $20,000,000,000 of railway securities held by 200,000 individuals, how many people are affected by the market value of $20,000,000,000 of Government bonds held by 22,000,000 individual subscribers? And to what extent are the holders of life insurance policies and depositors in savings banks interested in seeing that the assets of those institutions are not damaged by shrinkage in the market of Government bonds which they hold?

"The constantly rising cost of commodities to the consumer has far outstripped the purchasing power of the consumer's wage. To avoid the deprivations which loss of purchasing power necessarily inflicts, the first natural reaction is the demand for increased purchasing power through demanded raises in wages, yet this demand is acknowledged to be futile, because such increase in cost of production is immediately more than reflected in the increased cost of commodities.

Claims 6,000,000 Supporters.

"In answer to this first reaction—demand for increased wages—we now find a hundred thousand railway employes refusing longer to render their services for these constantly diminishing returns. This manifestation of revolt is but symptomatic of the entire industrial situation. It is not unrest that confronts us; it is revolt because of industrial conditions no longer to be borne.

"We already number in the supporters of labor's plan approximately 6,000,000 adult producers—about one-sixth of the productive man-power of the United States. Perhaps the same proportion of the political power of the nation, and a financial power which few comprehend. Those employed on the railways alone, represented in this movement, receive as their annual compensation for the investment of their life and labor upward of two and a half billion dollars a year—two and a half times the amount of compensation paid for the use of the money invested in railways.

"It is claimed by those who represent the financial interests before this committee that they have investments of approximately $20,000,000,000 in this industry. It is not with the interest of capital with which we have to do, but with the human interests involved in the ownership of capital by human beings.

"Organized labor now realizes that further advances in wages at the expense of a cost of living exceeding that of values are wholly futile. Equally, organized labor realizes that to correct this vicious system the interests of both producers and consumers must be protected, that the great increase in the productive power of human effort should be reflected equally in increased earning power of those who produce and the decreased cost of the commodity so reduced.

"But with transportation the situation is quite otherwise. The cost in transportation is reflected in the price of all commodities, whether transported or not. The consumer pays the freight on everything that he consumes, although it may be produced next door and may never have passed over any line of transportation. Heretofore railroad rates have not been advanced universally. A commodity rate is advanced here, a classification rate advanced there, and only those commodities affected by such local advances reflect the increased cost in their price. But with the coming of the war a 15-per-cent. advance was allowed by the Interstate Commerce Commission, covering all ratesa nd alll commodities, and reflected the next day in the purchase price of everything by which we live. Later the Director General again advanced these rates 25 per cent. This advance was again immediately reflected in the price of commodities and the cost of living.

"The wages earned by those who produce constitutes the great bulk of the purchasing fund of this nation. When the price of all commodities is advanced due to an increased cost of transportation and the wage fund is not correspondingly increased, the difference is exactly reflected by a restriction in the amount of commodities consumed. This soon reacts on the producing agencies. They provide a restricted output to correspond with the restricted demand. This, again, restricts the wage or purchasing fund, and the cycle of restriction endlessly repeats itself until we find production stifled, industry in stagnation, unemployment, and inevitable political and social revolution.

"Reverse this vicious system. Reduce rates. The costs of all commodities are then reduced accordingly. The purchasing power of the wage fund is then correspondingly expanded. A greater volume of commodities is consumed. The demand on industry is increased. There follows a wider field of employment, which, in turn, increases the wage or purchasing fund of the community. This must inevitably follow, unless the savings of the cost of transportation, instead of being reflected in the price of commodities, are appropriated to swell the volume of profits of those who control capital. Insure the savings effected by a reduction in rates to the consumer, and you will have turned the tide that now threatens to overwhelm us."

He then took up the bill embodying the plan as introduced by Representative Sims of Tennessee, former Chairman of the committee, who again explained that he had not "written a line of the bill," had put it in by request, and was not committed to it.

Explains Bill's Provisions.

Explaining one provision, allowing the "Appraisement Board" to build extensions and tax the locality at a rate commensurate with the increase in land value in the territory, Plumb said that if a railroad was run through ten miles of virgin territory, with an assessment of twenty-five cents per acre annually for twenty years, this would produce $36,000 per mile, and that the land would increase beyond the assessed value. Asked what right Congress would have to place a tax burden on people who did not wish it, Plumb said the Government had a right to build railways where it pleased.

Other questions developed that he held that under the bill Government arsenals could turn out equipment for the railways and the Quartermaster's Department furnish food.

While the roads were said to have some $19,000,000,000 invested, they were worth actually only from $10,000,000,000 to $12,000,000,000, said the witness.

"What would become of the extra $7,000,000,000 now represented," asked Mr. Barclay.

"It is not represented now; it's not on the market," was one answer.

"Then you contend that the holders could only recover 60 per cent.?"

"Yes, that's more than they ever received in all railroad history. They would receive just about what they receive today."

In the bill, five directors are elected by the "classified" employes and five by the "official" employes, while five are appointed by the President. Mr. Barclay thought this would give "two to one," in favor of railway employes. The witness contended that the line between "classified" employes, of which there are now 2,000,000, and "official" employes, of which there are now 20,000, was clearly drawn. Subsidiary boards would be made up in the same way.

"If we wish a reasonable period of time to consider this plan and some railway employes showed impatience, you would not advocate a strike, would you?" asked Chairman Esch. The witness evaded the question.

Chairman Esch recalled that in February the witness said he did not think a solution of the railway problem could be reached within twenty-one months, the time then urged for the end of Federal control.

"The course of events has changed," replied Plumb. "I did not think two years too long then. I do now. We may accelerate the day. I would not be surprised at almost any social development in this country within sixty or ninety days if I have correct information on the temper of the working men."

He said he felt "much as members of Congress do," when he came here in May, but he had been "overwhelmed and amazed by the sentiment of the men out in the country."

When Mr. Barclay asked Plumb to define his intimations of great industrial disturbances within sixty or ninety days, the witness said:

"When the plan spreads so like wildfire without effort on my part, I would not be surprised to see the people expressing their demand for it by any means within their power."

"Do you think it possible that this bill will solve the problem for all the people in the immediate future?" asked Mr. Barclay.

"It will do more than anything else can. You face a demand for $700,000,000. If you grant it, you add an increase to the burden of living. If the plan is adopted we can assure immediately that there will be no increase in rates, wipe out the deficit and operate at a surplus. There may be a five per cent. rate reduction immediately, and perhaps it would be necessary to forego the dividends."

It was shown that State-owned roads would be taken over under the plan. Mr. Esch said the States received $214,000,000 annually from their railroad taxes, and that in some this revenue constituted half the tax receipts.

"Yes," said Plumb. "We propose that this should be reduced 10 per cent. annually, until absorbed, and the ten years would allow the States time to adjust their taxation."

CAREER OF ORIGINATOR OF PLUMB LINE PLAN

Lawyer Active in Anti-Corporation Movements in the Middle West.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, Aug. 7.—Glenn E. Plumb, who appeared before the House Interstate Commerce Committee today in advocacy of the plan he prepared for the railroad brotherhoods for the nationalization of the railway systems, has taken an active part in anti-corporation movements in the Middle West, but was not widely known here until his plan was sprung upon an unsuspecting Congress.

Mr. Plumb is about 50 years old. He was graduated from Oberlin College in 1891 and from the Harvard Law School. Soon after being admitted to the bar he became a member of the Chicago law firm of which Merritt Starr was head, and there obtained his first extensive and practical introduction to corporation laws.

Mr. Plumb devoted several years to an exhaustive study of railway legislation and operation, including charter law, from the time of the organization of the first American railway system. He was retained by States Attorney Hoyne of Chicago in the action against the street railway systems there as far back as 1906.

Four years ago he first was employed by the railroad brotherhoods to present an argument before the Interstate Commerce Commission, and his work attracted much attention. He is now general counsel for the organized railway employes of America, which includes the four brotherhoods and ten affiliated railway organizations.

Mr. Plumb did not take any part in the fight of the brotherhoods in 1916 in forcing the Adamson law through Congress. He has, however, been studying the railway situation as it applied to the principles he has incorporated in the Plumb plan for Government ownership and nationalization for fifteen years.

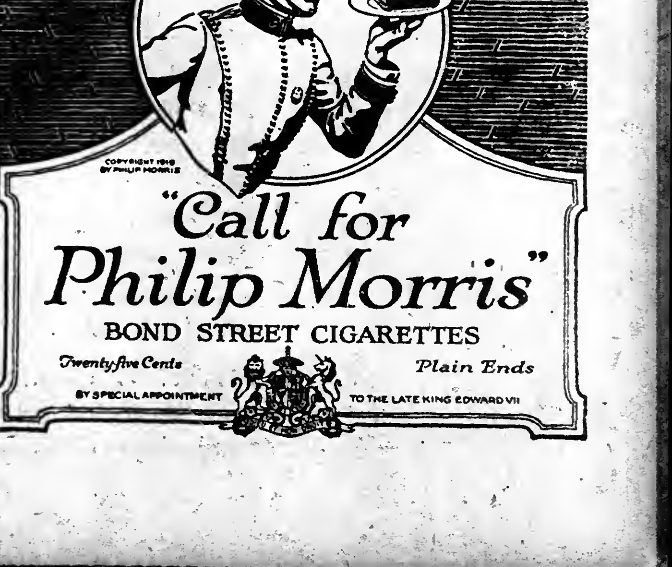
Mr. Plumb is five feet eight inches in height, and weighs about 180 pounds. He has gray hair and blue eyes. His personality is engaging. Mr. Plumb now lives at Chevy Chase, having moved here from Chicago when the plans were completed to stage the fight for the Plumb plan for railroads. He has a son, who is a Corporal in Battery B of the 83d Field Artillery.

POSTAL EMPLOYES WANT RISE.

Delegation Presents Letter to President at White House.

WASHINGTON, Aug. 7.—President Wilson was asked in a letter presented at the White House today to recommend to Congress an increase of 50 per cent. in the wages of Post Office and Postal employes over the country to meet the high cost of living.

The letter, presented by a delegation headed by Frank Morrison, Secretary of the American Federation of Labor, stated that the postal wage problem was as pressing as the railroad wage problem.



REPUBLICANS ASSAIL UCHIDA STATEMENT

INSIST ON TREATY CHANGE

To Accept the Arrangement Would Be Knowingly to Connive in a Great Wrong, Says Borah.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, Aug. 7.—Their opposition to the award to Japan of the former German rights in Shantung was not lessened, Republican Senators said today, by Viscount Uchida's statement of the purpose of the Mikado's Government to return the peninsula sovereignty to China, which was coupled with the statement issued yesterday by President Wilson. In the view of some of the opposition Senators, the situation has not been cleared up in any satisfactory way by the announcement of the Japanese statesman.

Republican Senators who commented on the Japanese statement declared that Japan had not gone any further in outlining her intention as to when she would relinquish the Shantung rights. Senator Borah of Idaho, Senator Norris of Nebraska, Senator Poindexter of Washington, and Senator Moses of New Hampshire, all Republicans, who have vigorously opposed the Shantung award, said it looked as though Japan was inclined to keep the peninsula as long as it saw fit.

"The President is, of course, diplomatic, but no less severe," said Mr. Borah. "It is a complete sermon upon Japanese methods, and conclusive as to the course which the Government should pursue in regard to Shantung. In view of the violation of treaty obligations and of oral agreements with reference to the independence of Korea, in view of the disregarding of her oral promises made at Portsmouth with reference to the restoration of certain rights to China in Manchuria, in view of her twenty-one demands, designed to reduce China to vassalage, demands which she at first denied; in view of the secret treaty of 1917, which incident it seems she kept secret from the United States when she was negotiating the Lansing-Ishii agreement, and now in view of the 'omission' in the statement of Uchida, will the Senate ratify the treaty until the Shantung matter is settled and the settlement executed? If we do, we will do so with the full knowledge that we are conniving at a great wrong to a friendly power. We will not be able to plead ignorance of the fact, and we will not be able to say in the future that we were the victims of bad faith.

"I said the President was severe with Uchida. Perhaps I should have said in view of the facts that he was unusually mild.

Senator Moses said:

"It must be kept in mind that there have been two statements of the Japanese position, one by Baron Uchida, the other by the leader of the parliamentary opposition in Japan. The opposition leader's statement, as I read it, indicates that the Shantung question may be an issue in the next Japanese election, and that the result may overturn the present Government's policy.

"The opposition, as I construe it, is protesting against the relinquishment of any of the Japanese privileges in China, or the surrender of what it regards as the fruits of Japan's victorious war. To put it euphemistically, there is apparent a mild contradiction among the Japanese elements themselves. There is nothing to indicate that the Japanese intend to relinquish their imperialistic policy."

Senator Morris said:

"It is apparent that Japan is not acting in good faith or she would have consented in the beginning that the treaty of peace should provide for the return of Chinese territory to China. She is not acting in good faith in this official statement, because it shows clearly she does not intend to return Shantung to China except at the end of arrangements and negotiations which she does not even outline, and which everybody knows will, in reality, surrender nothing to China that Japan desires to retain."

Senator Poindexter said:

"There is an absence of definiteness in the Japanese guarantee as to Shantung. Nothing is said as to what arrangements the Japanese have in mind other than the inference that they must be based upon the twenty-one points imposed by Japan upon China in the secret treaty of 1915. It has also been pointed out that the control of the economic rights which Germany had acquired in Shantung to all intents and purposes would give Japan control of the entire peninsula."

CHINA DENIES CHANGE IN SHANTUNG VIEWS

Demands That Japan Make Restoration of What She Intends to Restore.

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

PEKING, Aug. 7.—The Chinese are considerably perturbed over a telegram from Washington appearing in the Tientsin press suggesting that China is weakening in her attitude on the Shantung question because the Chinese representative attended the reception to Premier Hara in Tokio.

THE NEW YORK TIMES correspondent is requested to affirm that the Chinese Government's attitude and the sentiment of the Chinese people in respect to the Shantung issue is absolutely unchanged. There is no weakening and no abatement of the demand for just treatment and no modification in the universally held opinion that the Shantung settlement as embodied in the Peace Treaty is a monumental injustice; that it cannot be justified on any principles of right; that it is inconsistent even with the highest expediency. China looks to America as the champion of this view. The Japanese reports of a definite promise to restore Kiao-Chau, it is said here, merely represents Japanese propaganda, and it is added that the only thing Japan can do to remove suspicion is actually to make the restoration of such things as she intends to restore.

SAN DIEGO WELCOMES NEW PACIFIC FLEET

SAN DIEGO, Cal., Aug. 7.—This city witnessed the greatest naval pageant in its history this morning when Secretary of the Navy Daniels reviewed Admiral Hugh Rodman's mighty Pacific armada. Thousands of visitors from cities and states far inland came here to witness the event.

Every available water craft in San Diego harbor bore capacity loads of sightseers. Every point of vantage in and about the city was thronged as were also the roofs and windows of downtown buildings that gave a view of the naval parade.

Secretary Daniels and an official welcoming party left the municipal wharf here at 7:30 A. M., aboard the destroyer Chauncey, from which they were transferred to the cruiser Montana. The Secretary's ship at 9 o'clock had taken its station off the port for the review.

It required one hour for the vast fleet of dreadnoughts, battleships of lesser type and twenty-one sleek and speedy destroyers to pass the welcoming party.

Secretary of the Navy Daniels, turning from the bridge of the Montana after the last destroyer had passed, said:

"This is realization of a dream I kept constantly in view for six years since I first came to the Pacific Coast shortly after induction into office to study naval conditions here. I conceived of an American fleet that was truly an American fleet, equally at home and equal in strength on both coasts. This organization into two powerful fleets is an epoch-making event in naval history and presages the day when the whole fleet, now composed of more than 1,000,000 tons, with 5,000,000 more tons building, will make the magnitude of this review seem small in comparison."

LODGE HAS NEW RESERVATION PLAN

Suggests That Senate Require Reservations Be Accepted by Four Other Powers.

TREATY NOT VALID TILL THEN

KELLOGG FOR QUICK ACTION

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, Aug. 7.—During a spirited debate in the Senate today on the League of Nations Senator Lodge, the majority leader, voiced the opinion that all reservations to the Peace Treaty should specifically require acceptance by at least four other nations to make them binding, and the treaty as well.

He stated that while in actual practice reservations might become valid if not opposed by other signatories, in this case there should be a definite declaration by the Senate that, to make the treaty binding, the other powers must agree to the reservations the United States suggested.

This idea was promptly indorsed by Senator Brandegee, and later Senator Borah indicated that the radical opponents of the League would insist upon such a course as Senator Lodge suggested.

Senator Lodge's suggestion came during debate over a speech of Senator Kellogg, Republican of Minnesota, in which the latter advocated four reservations, along the lines suggested by the seven "mild" reservationists as necessary to clarify the language of the league covenant in assuring "American sovereignty."

Kellogg Urges Quick Action.

Senator Kellogg, in opening his speech, expressed the hope that the Senate would soon have the treaty out of committee, so that it could devote itself to working out pressing economic problems. He said the people were impatient for speedy action on the treaty, and an effort, after that, to readjust unsettled affairs at home.

He outlined these reservations for the resolution of ratification, they being the four agreed upon by the seven "mild" reservationists and favored by a large number of other Senators:

1. On Article X., the United States reserving the right of Congress to determine whether its naval and military forces shall be used, if called upon by the League Council.

2. On the Monroe Dictrine, the Senate declaring that this is specifically outside the interpretation or jurisdiction of the League.

3. On domestic matters, such as tariff, coastwise trade, immigration, and racial equality, which are to be left for America's interpretation.

4. On the withdrawal clause, the Senate declaring that the United States, at the expiration of the stipulated two years' notice, shall be the sole judge whether its obligations to the League have been fulfilled.

Mr. Kellogg in his address held that provisions of the covenant, imposing obligations on Congress, did not violate the American Constitution, so the covenant could be ratified with interpretative reservations without requiring resubmission to other nations. He indicated that he was "willing to try" the League, although he did not think it would permanently prevent war.

The Minnesota Senator set forth precedents for various guarantees in the covenant that have been opposed as constitutional.

"Every treaty we negotiate to a certain extent," he said, "destroys certain freedom of sovereign action. A treaty, of which we have many, conferring certain privileges of trade, is binding, and it we perform our agreement, it limits legislative action. A treaty does not violate the Constitution because a violation of a treaty may cause war.

"It is claimed that we cannot enter into a treaty limiting armament, because Congress alone can raise and support armies and provide for a navy. By a treaty with Great Britain, negotiated in 1817, we agreed to limit armament on the Great Lakes and no question has ever arisen as to its validity."

Sees No Harm in Reservations.

"The proponents of the league claim that the Monroe Doctrine is excepted from the jurisdiction of the council and the assembly of the League. If this is true, there can be no harm and it would seem to be entirely proper for the Senate, in ratifying the treaty, to declare its interpretation of this clause.

"My own personal opinion is that the Monroe Doctrine is sufficiently designated to be excepted from the jurisdiction of the League.

"Article XV. would seem to confer upon the Council jurisdiction to determine whether a particular question which may arise is or is not by international law, solely within the jurisdiction of a party to a dispute, as, for example, questions relating to immigration, coastwise traffic, tariff, and other matters. It would seem, therefore, not only proper, but the duty of the Senate in ratifying a treaty, to declare its understanding that these questions are solely within the jurisdiction of the United States.

"Respecting Article X. the question is somewhat different. I am not in favor of striking this article out of the League entirely, but there are some grave objections to this guaranty as it stands. I believe there should be some reservation construing this clause in such a way that it shall be absolutely clear and certain that the function of the Council is simply to serve in an advisory capacity, so that the other signatory powers will thoroughly understand that the Congress of the United States has the sole and exclusive power to declare war."

Pittman Raises a Point.

Senator Pittman, who followed Senator Kellogg, said that he was "unqualifiedly in favor of every one of the reservations" suggested by the Minnesota Senator. He went on:

"But I think it is important to determine what the effect would be if they were included in a separate resolution or if included in the resolution of ratification. I am satisfied in my own mind that if included in a separate resolution it serves as notice to those with whom we are dealing of the position we will take if construction of the treaty comes in question later on.

"I am satisfied, also, that the powers that might be construing the treaty at the time of the question would take into consideration that resolution, but that they would only consider it as interpreting the language already in the treaty. The only way you could make the reservations or interpretations binding on all parties would be by substituting other language in the treaty, and this is done in the ratification."

"A resolution passed after the treaty has been ratified would, of course, serve notice upon them of our position," said Senator Kellogg. "It might be considered, and probably would, as indicating our objection, or rather our construction of the language, but it should be contained in a resolution for ratification, because of the language is what some Senators claim, it ought to be changed, and it would then be changed."

Senator Pittman insisted that a reservation would not be binding, unless agreed to by the other signatories to the treaty. He said that whether he would vote for reservations or not depended upon whether the reservations presented might endanger the whole treaty.

"Is it not true," interrupted Senator Lodge, "under the general practice, as distinguishing a reservation from an amendment, that the amendment, being a change in the text, has to receive the assent of every signatory, but a reservation under the usual practice does not? If the other parties to the treaty make no objection, the reservation stands as accepted."

Senator Kellogg agreed that this was the general practice.

"Well, I hope when we put these reservations in," declared Mr. Lodge, "that we shall provide that they shall be accepted by at least the other four of the five principal allied and associated powers before we become members of the League, and that we shall have their acceptance of our reservations. There will be no question about it. They will accept them."

Senator Williams, Democrat, of Mississippi, wanted to know why, if it had been the general practice that reservations were accepted, if not protested against, by the other signatories, it would be necessary to secure the acceptance of four other nations to the treaty reservations.

"Undoubtedly, if a foreign country should put the treaty into force with a reservation upon it, it would be accepted the same as any man who puts a contract into force with a reservation upon it," replied Senator Kellogg.

Senator Borah remarked:

"I want to tell the Senate that no reservations, based on the silence of other nations signatory to the treaty, will be adopted unless they are put through by the advocates of the League of Nations. When this treaty is ratified, if it is ratified, it will be done with explicit reservations or amendments that the other nations will have to recognize."

Senator Brandegee said:

"It has been the universal custom in the ratification of interests that silence has been considered as giving consent to reservations; the exchange and deposit of ratifications of the other nations has been considered an assent.

"But I thoroughly agree with the statement of the Senator from Massachusetts and what I consider to be the view of Senator Poindexter and Senator Borah, that this matter is of such overwhelming and far-reaching importance that if the Senate adds any reservations to this treaty, the resolution of ratification, itself, should provide that we shall not be considered as ratifying the treaty unless and until the other signatories, or at least the four or five principal signatories, affirmatively consent to our reservations, because I want to put the nails in and clinch them on the other side."

For Plain Reservations.

He held that the suggestion of Senator Pittman that after the treaty had been ratified the Senate might pass a "declaratory or interpretative resolution," as to its understanding of it, was futile.

"Once the Senate has approved and ratified the treaty and the ratifications have been exchanged, nothing that the Senate could say or do would have the slightest effect on it.

"If, however, at the time of the resolution of ratification the Senate puts on reservations that we will ratify the treaty with reservations, that we understand 'thus and so,' then that does not become a part of the treaty; it does not alter the treaty; the treaty stands as it is between the nations which have accepted it, but it leaves us unbound by those things which we have reserved."

"Any extraneous statement that we may make after we have signed the treaty," said Senator Poindexter of Washington, "in which we put any sort of construction on it or say that we are not bound except to such and such an extent, will be perfectly futile and without any effect, except such as the other parties to the contract would choose to give it."

"I agree with the position of the Senator from Washington," said Senator Borah, "that if a contract is sent for me to sign which has been signed by another party, and I sign it, but I accompany it with what I consider to be an interpretation or construction of the contract, it does not bind the other party at all. I can say further to the Senator that no such interpretation will be put through in this Senate unless the Democrats put it through."

"Then it will not be put through," remarked Senator Williams.

Senator Walsh of Montana maintained that any reservations would have the effect of altering the compact so that it would have to be submitted again to the Peace Conference.

"And in that event, with the United States making reservations, Germany, too, would want to make some of her own," argued Mr. Walsh. "I would throw the gates wide open."

"What would we lose?" asked Senator Poindexter. "What does the United States get out of this treaty?"

"What does the Senator think the United Sates ought to get out of it?" retorted Senator Walsh. "I think we get all the American people ever expected to get."

"Suppose we assert in the form of a reservation, at the time we ratify the treaty," said Senator McCumber, "that we ratify it with certain reservations, which may in effect modify the treaty as it now stands. The nations, saying nothing in regard to such reservations, would go ahead and appoint their thirty or forty commissions which are provided for in the treaty itself. Would they not by a silent acquiescence practically have ratified the treaty with our amendments and would they not be bound by it without any further affirmative action upon their part?"

Senator Nelson expressed the opinion that if the other nations put the treaty into effect after the Senate had made reservation, formal acceptance of the reservations would not be necessary.

Senator Brandegee held that the Senate should insist on formal acceptance of the reservations "to make assurance doubly sure."

"So there may not be an unnecessary waste of time in the discussion of interpretation or amendments which are going to be based upon the silence of some other nation," said Senator Borah. "I desire to say that if any such thing passes through the Senate the votes will have to be furnished by those who are in favor of this League. We, to a certain number, are not going to consent to any amendment or reservation which rests for its vitality upon the mere silence of another power."

"I thoroughly agree with the Senator as far as my intention and efforts are concerned," said Senator Brandegee. "I will join with him."

Inquiry on French Treaty.

The Senate adopted a resolution by Senator Walsh asking the Judiciary Committee whether there were any constitutional obstacles to the ratification of the treaty with France. Some Senators have argued that because it obligated the United States to help repel any unprovoked attack by Germany on France the treaty curtailed the constitutional power of Congress to decide when the nation should go to war.

They were Benjamin Scheinholtz of 1,233 Forty-fourth Street, Brooklyn, feather maker; Maxwell Baron of 153 Stanton Street, Manhattan, a furrier, and Jack Horadnor of 158 Rivington Street, Manhattan, a painter.

The men were arrested by Detectives Ryan, Blake, and Callanan of the Coney Island station. Scheinholtz, who is known as Ben Sugar, is represented by former Assistant District Attorney Francis X. McCaffry. Harry Korman, who was with Cohen at the time of the shooting, was unable to appear, being confined to the Coney Island Hospital suffering from bullet wounds inflicted at the same time.

CHAMBERLAIN WARNS OF BRITISH SPENDING

Rejects Projects of Nationalization as a Means of Raising Revenue.

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

LONDON, Aug. 7.—Chancellor of the Exchequer Chamberlain in the House of Commons tonight sounded a grave note of warning concerning the position of the exchequer.

He declared that if the country continued spending at the present rate it would lead straight to national bankruptcy. Neither increased production nor reduced expenditure alone would be sufficient. Both would be necessary in order to pull the country through. He promised that subsidies such as those on the railways and bread should be ended as soon as possible.

The Government, he said, was giving very serious and anxious attention to the financial position and was determined that reckless waste should be stopped and rigid economy exercised.

Referring to the prevalent fear that the Government would resort to nationalising everything in the hope of getting revenue, Mr. Chamberlain said that was the last course that would ever enter his mind.

THE ADVENTURES OF A NOVEL [THREE]

¶ The day "The Choice" was published I gave a copy to an old friend who has been very ill, and is still in charge of his nurse. He stopped me on the street a few days later in a button-hole manner:

"I want to tell you," he said, "about 'The Choice.' The other night I took my nurse to the movies round the corner. She is a quaint, quiet woman who talks very little. As we came out she said 'That girl is like Assy.' I didn't know what she meant and said so. 'Assy, you know,' she said, 'the girl in the book you left on the table. I read it.' Of course then I knew, but it's a good book that will take hold of a simple mind like that. I thought it a good book myself, natural and simple in an astonishing degree. I am going to read it again."

SUICIDE IS BLAMED FOR LAWLER BOMB

INTERESTED IN WILL CASE

Mechanical Engineer Was Unsuccessful in Breaking Testament Which Lawler Upheld.

LOS ANGELES, Cal., Aug. 7.—Charles H. McGwire, assistant engineer of the Municipal Department of Public Works, who committed suicide here late last night by leaping from the office of District Attorney Thomas L. Woolwine on the eleventh floor of the Hall of Records, was held responsible today by public officials for the dynamiting last Sunday of the home of Oscar Lawler, a prominent attorney. McGwire had been told that he was to be indicted for the offense.

McGwire's death came as a dramatic climax to a lengthy questioning by District Attorney Woolwine. Confronted with evidence that officials said pointed directly to him as being responsible for the dynamiting, which nearly cost the lives of Mr. and Mrs. Lawler, McGwire rushed to a window in the room, eluded officers who tried to restrain him, and hurled himself to the pavement. He was dead when picked up.

It was learned after the suicide that McGwire had been in custody twenty-four hours. Revenge for having been unsuccessful recently in an attempt to break the will of William Kafitz, a capitalist of Los Angeles, in which Lawler represented a nephew and niece, was said to have been McGwire's motive in seeking the death of the attorney.

Kafitz, an elderly man of German birth, died in November, 1918. A few years before he had married a young woman. In January preceding his death he made his will, dividing the greater part of his estate between his nephew, F. William Kafitz, and his sister, Mrs. Elizabeth Migeot. The wife was cut off. She went into court and declared that there was no will and had McGwire, her personal friend, appointed administrator.

The nephew and niece retained Mr. Lawler, who found the will, fought the case on the grounds that McGwire was "violently, energetically, and deliberately partisan" and the conduct of the widow had justified her being cut off in the will, and won the suit.

A month after the verdict a little church was destroyed by fire. Neighbors said they heard a bomb explosion preceding the fire. The pastor, the Rev. J. M. Schaefle, had been a witness in the court action, testifying to the alleged misconduct of Mrs. Kafitz. Whether the destruction of the church, whose pastor had received a $500 bequest under the will of Mr. Kafitz was the first step in McGwire's vengeance is not known.

A few days after the church was destroyed, Mrs. Kafitz and McGwire went to a lonely suburban district for a test of a bomb that McGwire had made. The woman told in detail of this trip in an inquiry shortly after the Lawler crime. Her description of the bomb used in that test tallies exactly with the fragments of the missile found in the ruins of the Lawler home. Mrs. Kafitz told the Chief of Police that the test was satisfactory, and that McGwire had two bombs exactly like the bomb he tested in the suburbs.

She said that on the ride to the test field McGwire carried a rifle and had threatened her life. He told her, she alleged, that he intended to kill her after the test bomb had exploded, but said he deferred it because he was nervous and was afraid he "would not make a clean job of it."

When the Lawler house was burned and Mr. Lawler and his wife taken to the hospital in a precarious condition Mrs. Kafitz said she fled to the home of a friend in the suburbs. There she was found by the police and finally told her story. F. William Kafitz, the heir whose fortune was won for him by Lawler, was married at noon today. The officiating clergyman was the Rev. Mr. Schaefle, whose testimony helped to win the will case.

It was Mrs. Kafitz, the police said, who gave them the information involving McGwire.

What McGwire's financial interest in the Kafitz will case was to have been had the property gone to Mrs. Kafitz has not been disclosed.

The domestic relations of Kafitz and his wife were disturbed by quarrels, and after a dispute one day she shot and wounded her husband. He recovered, made a will and then died. This will, officials asserted, disinherited Mrs. Kafitz.

ENTENTE TO OUST VON DER GOLTZ'S ARMY

Plan to Establish Germanic Centre on Eastern Flank of Poland to be Exposed.

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

LONDON, Aug. 7.—Strong measures are being taken by the Peace Conference to foil the German attempt to establish a Germanic centre on the eastern flank of Poland in Litvia or Lithuania on the Baltic.

This is one of the old provinces of Russia which had been particularly subject to "peaceful penetration." Large tracts of land had been bought up by Germans, who naturally acquired great influence among the native population, almost entirely of the peasant class. Berlin regarded these settlers as a German garrison, and made considerable use of them in the last days of the war as bona fide representatives of legal opinion, although they formed only 6 per cent. of the population.

Since the armistice the Junkers have looked on this out-of-the-way corner of Europe as a convenient spot in which to concentrate their diminishing forces. General von der Goltz has been in command of the German forces in this region and his activities attracted the attention of Marshal Foch some months ago, and brought down on him a stern order to get out. Nevertheless he stayed and employed his time in getting for his men from the German land barons land and other economic concessions which showed he had ideas of establishing a regular German colony.

Now General Sir Hubert Gough has been sent to see von der Goltz and has had a stormy interview with him. He told him to leave at once. Von der Goltz replied that it would take him seventy-four days to move his troops by rail. Gough bade him take them away by sea. Von der Goltz flatly refused. Gough referred the matter to Paris, and the Peace Conference drafted a scheme by which all Germans could be evacuated from Litvia by sea by Aug. 26. This was to be handed to von der Goltz today.

The British Government is about to publish a complete account of this particular German intrigue.

The Housing Problem

The lack of houses is so great that it becomes a matter of public policy to relieve it and the simplest and most immediately effective method of doing this is to exempt everyone from paying income taxes on the interest on a moderate line of mortgages.

It simply means restoring the minimum exemption to the old figure of $3,000 or $4,000, and that only for those who will stand by the mortgage market and to the extent only that they do stand by it.

The method was used successfully in selling Liberty Bonds.

It would be just as successful in drawing money into the mortgage market, and unless it is drawn into the mortgage market, building cannot go on in sufficient volume.

ELECTRIC SERVICE ALSO HELPS

WHEN the amendment to the Tenement House Law made permissible the alteration of four story and basement houses to hold four families instead of one, electric service was the most important improvement which owners installed.

Without electricity the high class of tenants attracted to these altered residences would not have been obtained, for these people were attracted to the comforts and conveniences of wired buildings.

As if by magic electric service brings to the interior of the most venerable dwelling an atmosphere at once modern, cheerful and attractive. It puts the building in a different class, on a par with the most modern of houses. And then it costs so little to install.

That is how electric service is helping to relieve the housing situation, by attracting the high class of tenants which the owners of these altered dwellings must obtain.

A postal card or telephone request (Stuyvesant 4980) will bring our representative to you. He will tell you how inexpensively and easily your property can be electrified. And if the investment involves a greater immediate expenditure than is convenient, we may be able to arrange terms.

HAS SANCTION OF HYLAN

Declares That Criminals Will Not Be Sent There and Tubercular Patients Will Not Be Disturbed.

Notwithstanding the disapproval of Charities Commissioner Coler, the work of fitting up the Sea View Hospital on Staten Island as a hospital for drug addicts will go forward immediately, Health Commissioner Copeland said yesterday, and within a few days the Department of Health will take over the actual management of the institution from the Department of Charities.

The project, Dr. Copeland said, has the sanction of the Mayor, and in announcing that he would take over Sea View the Commissioner took occasion yesterday to deny a statement by Commissioner Coler that if a transfer of the hospital were forced by the Health Commissioner hundreds of tubercular patients would die as a result.

It was apparent yesterday that Dr. Copeland, acting with the approval of Mayor Hylan, does not intend to wait for the consent of Commissioner Coler, but intends to take over its management through the power vested in his office.

According to Dr. Copeland, the Sea View Hospital is intended for the receipt of patients who are in the third stage of tuberculosis. Others should be sent to Otisville, to Manhattan Hospital, and to Riverside Hospital. He said he had found out that this had not been done, and in consequence there are hundreds of patients on Staten Island who could be sent to other institutions without danger to their health. Critical cases are not to be moved, but will be kept at Sea View for, he said, the accommodations there are ample for their keeping and for the care of addicts as well.

It is the intention of Dr. Copeland not to change the present medical and nursing staff at Sea View, but to place the institution in the general care of Dr. Robert J. Wilson, Director of the Bureau of Hospitals.

"I wish to make it clear that no criminal addicts will be sent to Sea View Hospital. Ample police protection has been promised and the citizens of Staten Island will be no more conscious of the new use of Sea View Hospital than they are of the present."

In a letter written to Dr. Copeland by President Noonan of the American Association of Pharmaceutical Chemists the sympathy and co-operation of that body are pledged to the Commissioner in the effort he is making to control the habit-forming drug situation.

MORGENTHAU DENIES POLISH STATEMENT

Has Not Said Pogrom Stories Are Exaggerated—Is Still Investigating.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, Aug. 7.—Henry Morgenthau, head of the American commission sent to Poland to investigate the situation, has sent this cablegram to the State Department from Warsaw:

"Mr. Morgenthau, having just read a statement issued by the Polish Telegraph Agency on July 28 that he stated in an interview with newspaper correspondents that 'in the short time he had been in Poland he had convinced himself that all the so-called pogroms of the Jews are incredibly exaggerated,' desires to state that he never made such a statement.

"We had not on July 28 commenced investigation of the pogroms. We, General Jadwin and myself, had devoted most of our time in Warsaw to obtaining general impressions of people of the existing differences regarding economic boycott and the general economic conditions, and worked toward creating a better feeling among the parties.

"We left Warsaw on the night of July 27 to investigate at first hand and by direct examination witnesses and inspection of places where crimes were alleged to have been committed and the documentary evidence collected by the various committees at these places so as to enable us to form an opinion on the subject. We shall not be able to give even an intimation as to what our opinion will be until we have completed the visits we intend to make. We have already visited Sokolke, Grodno, and Lida, and are now at Vilna, where we expect to spend three or four more days. We shall visit Baronovitch, Brest-Litovsk, Pinsk, Lodz, Cracow, Lemburg, and Chenitokhovo.

"We believe that we have heard less than one-third of the testimony that we intend to listen to before submitting it all to the Polish Government for their answer, and shall not begin to form an opinion until the Polish Government has had an opportunity to answer. Then General Jadwin, Mr. Homer Johnson, and myself will calmly sit as long as it is necessary and weigh the facts obtained before arriving at final conclusions. As one of the most important questions involved is that of whether any exaggeration has been indulged in by the Jews, Mr. Morgenthau says that this would be the very last question that he should express an opinion upon until the case has been properly heard.

"The published statement also says, he admitted that the Jews sometimes forget that equality of right called for equality of duties.' Mr. Morgenthau would like to know how he could admit the Jews, meaning the Polish Jews, sometimes forgot that equality of rights called for equality of duties when the Polish Jews have not as yet had equality of rights. He admits that he said that the Jews should remember that equality of rights called for equality of duties.'"

Wife Leaves All to Justice Wagner.

An estate of more than $50,000 is disposed of in the will of Mrs. Margaret M. Wagner, who died on July 28 last and was the wife of Supreme Court Justice Robert F. Wagner. He inherited the entire estate.

WHERE DOES MR. GOMPERS STAND?

In his testimony before the House Committee on Interstate Commerce, Mr. FRANK MORRISON, Secretary of the American Federation of Labor, describing what he conceived to be an "ideal democracy," said that he did not see "any reason why wealth should pass from father to son." This theory or doctrine, that wealth accumulated during a man's lifetime should not pass to his children, but should revert to the State or the community, does violence to one of the most powerful of all the impulses of the human heart. The solicitude of parents for the safety, welfare, and happiness of their children is universal, natural, and instinctive. Every father, if he be a natural, normal man, is moved by the desire to make provision for his children. The doctrine enunciated by Mr. MORRISON, therefore, flies in the face of nature. What can be its origin, how did it arise, why is it believed in? Search the records of human thought, of economics, of sociology and of socialism from the invention of writing until the present day and you are guided inevitably, unerringly, to one source. It is the sentiment proclaimed by PROUDHON when he declared that "property is theft."

This chance utterance of Mr. MORRISON not only shows what is going on in his own mind, but throws a revealing light upon the motives that prompted the manifesto put forth by the Chiefs of the Railroad Brotherhoods demanding that the railroads be purchased by the Government and operated "democratically" by a board in which labor, the railroad officials, and the Government would have equal representation. To students of socialism that manifesto had a very familiar ring. It is stamped all over with the ideas of KARL MARX. "No fundamental changes are being advanced to save workers from continual defeat in the economic struggle of life"; furthermore, "we realize that in the strife for wage increases we cannot win any permanent victory"; also, "a few grow wealthy and the multitude is impoverished." That is MARX'S theory of increasing misery for the proletariat as set forth in the "Communist Manifesto." The theory of MARX and ENGELS was that the modern laborer "instead of rising with the progress of industry sinks deeper and deeper below the conditions of existence of his own class. He becomes a pauper, and pauperism develops more rapidly than population and wealth." Experience was disproving this dictum at the time it was written; the theory has been altogether refuted, torn to tatters, and intelligent Socialists long ago rejected it. It appears to have been accepted as gospel truth by the men who wrote the Brotherhood manifesto.

The destruction of the capitalistic system was MARX'S remedy; that is the remedy the Brotherhood Chiefs now prescribe to prevent the impoverishment of the multitude. They would make a beginning by expropriating the owners of railroad property. But some of them openly avow the belief that other great industries should be taken out of the hands of private owners and operated democratically.

A pamphlet has been issued by the "Press Bureau of the Plumb Plan League" at Washington setting forth the outline of that plan "to secure public ownership and democracy in the operation of the railroads." The pamphlet contains a list of the officers of the League. This is the first name on the list: "Honorary President, SAMUEL GOMPERS, President of the American Federation of Labor." This is an occasion for no small wonderment. Does Mr. GOMPERS approve the Plumb Plan? Was he consulted in the preparation of the statement put forth by the Chiefs of the Railroad Brotherhoods? The plan in what it immediately proposes and in what it hints at is Marxian socialism; the statement of the Brotherhood Chiefs embodies the Marxian doctrines, almost phrases of KARL MARX'S "Communist Manifesto" and other writings. For many years SAMUEL GOMPERS has been sturdily combating the efforts of the Socialists to get control of the American Federation of Labor, to spread their doctrines among workingmen. He has fought the Socialists tooth and nail. He has denounced their doctrines as false, he has himself understood and has clearly pointed out the perils to labor involved in socialistic leadership, the certain disasters to which the acceptance of socialistic doctrines would lead.

Socialism is a product of the German mind; in all countries, and notably in the United States, the socialistic organizations worked in the interests of Germany during the war. SAMUEL GOMPERS was in every fibre of his being loyal to the cause of the Allies and of the United States. He detested the Socialists for their efforts in behalf of Germany. We cannot believe that Mr. GOMPERS has given up his fight against the Socialists who are seeking the control of his Federation; least of all can we believe that he has become a convert to doctrines the falsity of which he has so often and so eloquently demonstrated. His acceptance of the Brotherhood plan of "democratic" operation of the railroads would, of course, prove that we were mistaken, that we had misjudged the firmness of the conviction he has so long held.

THE SECOND DIVISION.

The trump of Fame sounded so vibrantly the Marine Brigade's glory at Belleau Wood that the achievements of other units of the 2d Division were for a time obscured. It is no reflection upon the valor of the marines to say that the 9th and 23d Infantry Regiments fought as magnificently on every field in France where duty called them; in fact, their officers and men believe that as effectives they were superior to the marines, but this may be set down to service pride, for the 9th and 23d are regular army regiments and the marines are amphibious, sea soldiers who belong to the navy, but who in our small wars have been the first to be summoned to fight on land. The 2d Division contains, besides the 9th and 23d Regiments of Infantry and the Marine Brigade, the 12th, 15th, and 17th Regiments of Field Artillery, the 2d Regiment of Engineers, the 4th and 5th Machine Gun Battalions, the 2d Mortar Battery, the 1st Field Signal Battalion, and the 2d Supply and 2d Ammunition Trains. All these units distinguished themselves in France, and they must never be forgotten when admirers of the 2d Division discuss the merits of the infantry regiments and the marines.

Today these splendid troops march through the streets of New York with their honors thick upon them; they will march just as well as they fought, for they want to show this city the material a fighting division of regular army men and marines is made of, and how it looks in review formation, company after company filing past behind the colors with bands playing airs that stir the blood. Before the war New York never saw all the units of a division of regulars in such brave show; in fact, it did not know what the complete organization was like. It is now to see one of the two best divisions that vanquished the flower of the German Army; the other, according to expert opinion, being the 1st, of the regular army. Even General PERSHING would not venture to decide between them.

If men ever fought better than the 2d Division in France, with more dash and spirit and fortitude, with more indifference to death, where shall the record be found? Originally the complement was 28,243, but the replacements amounted to 35,343; so, as General A. W. GREELY has pointed out, "the number who passed under its colors" was 63,586. The 2d Division's casualties were, according to "the final report of the Central Records Office," 22,230, of whom 4,478 were killed and 17,752 were wounded. The 1st Division suffered losses of 21,612, and its battle deaths were less than those of the 2d by only 67. These two organizations headed the casualty list, the 3d, a regular army division, having 16,117 killed and wounded. It is a heroic division, a glorious company of gallant, invincible men, that New York will see this afternoon. The sun shines on none finer. This is the day of the regular army and the marines. They cannot be too highly honored for their deeds.

LET NO GUILTY PROFITEER ESCAPE.

It is good news that the Meat Trust is to be prosecuted by the Department of Justice at the direction of the President. It is also good news that the procedure will be criminal, so that there will be findings of fact by common men rather than a balance of opinion between lawyers or Judges. We have had too many decisions by a divided bench and too many reversals of lower courts by higher courts on the questions raised anew. Criminal cases are likelier to be pressed to a decision than civil cases, and they have the advantage usually of being convincing to "the man in the street," in the specific case at least. But that is not true of the Beef Trust. It has been tried before upon the indictment of the Federal Trade Commission, and at its acquittal the Federal District Attorney wept, so confident was he that he had made a case.

There are several reasons for recalling this precedent. One is the similarity of the complaints. In both cases they are based on the sort of reasoning from the marshaling of figures that convicted TWEED. There was not a doubt in the Tweed case, because they proved divisions of stolen money. There was no possible doubt that the money was stolen and that those who divided it had no right to it. But the lawfulness of the conduct of the packers lies at the threshold of the case against them. The Supreme Court has reproached prosecutors of trusts for trying their cases on innuendoes. There are allegations enough in the Federal Trade Commission's report to convict a pirate, but the facts are of the same sort as the jury refused to consider before. They said that the people had not suffered, and they could not see that the defendants ought to be convicted on such evidence. It may be that the case against the trust has been strengthened. Also, perhaps the defendants then were emboldened by their acquittal and have committed offenses calling for punishment. If so, their wealth will not protect them, and the size of their business will rather increase their offense. The situation is serious for them, but opinion on the merits must await the event.

While the statements of the Federal Trade Commission will be heard in court, so also will facts not presented by it. The grievance against the men of the trust has been said to be that they bought their live stock so cheap as to discourage the producers and sold their meat so dear as to oppress consumers. They would be foolish to do so, and it has been said in debate in Congress as matter of fact they have not done so. In 1914 we had little beef to spare for export, but in 1918, for the first time since the public lands were closed to cattle grazing, there was a gain in cattle in proportion to population. Last year we exported nearly 600,000,000 pounds of beef and beef products, equal to the exports of 1901, when the population was 35,000,000 smaller. Cattle are more numerous now than before the enormous war business, but lighter. That does not indicate discouragement of the producers by the trust's reduction of its buying price. The growth of hogs has been in proportion to the price inducement, which was more marked than in the case of beef. It is true that the wholesale price of beef has fallen since the war ended, and there has been a reduction of war exports. The retail prices have not fallen equally, but that is no fault of the wholesalers.

The Federal Trade Commission has recommended that the Government should take over large fractions of the trust's business plant, having no doubt that Government management could and would improve upon that of the trust. During the war there could be no doubt of the efficiency of the trust. In fact, it is difficult to see how the war could have been won without the food it provided. But if the Federal Trade Commission is to oversee its activities hereafter, there is likely to arise the question as to how the home market is to be supplied. Nevertheless, if the trust profiteers, practices extortion, it ought to go to jail if proved guilty, and the prosecution is to be welcomed.

THE POLICE IN THE STRIKE.

With the causes or exterior impulsions of the strike, which the Mayor and the Police Department have allowed virtually to close the lines of the Brooklyn Rapid Transit system, to inconvenience hundreds of thousands of persons, and to produce repeated acts of intimidation and violence on the part of strikers or hooligans, the public has at present a secondary concern. True, when a strike owes such success as it has to acts of violence, it creates a presumption against it in the public mind. That violence was used with malice prepense is evident from the preparations of the imported leaders of the strike to give bail for persons charged with disorder in imposing the strike on the employés willing to remain, men and women willing to take the strikers' places, and the public.

How ironical sounds the advice of National Committeeman SHEA of the Amalgamated Association of Street and Electric Railway Employés to the men on Tuesday: "Be orderly and show the people that you are law-abiding citizens." The strike began in an orderly manner on Wednesday morning. Had adequate police protection been provided, the subsequent disorder would have been prevented. At 10 o'clock on Wednesday night the entire system was closed after a conference between its officials and the police. The shameful admission had to be virtually made that disorder had beaten order in Brooklyn. Protection had been twice asked in the course of the day. In his answer to the first letter of Receiver GARRISON asking that a policeman be placed on each car, the Mayor indulged in virtuous words. "We are determined to preserve law and order in this strike and we will carry out this determination without shewing the slightest favoritism to either side in the controversy." "The general public may rest assured that ample and proper police protection will be enforced. No one need have any fear that the police will not be able to cope with any situation that may arise."

Meanwhile a situation with which the police were unable or unwilling to cope had arisen, and was growing worse every minute. "The police," Mayor HYLAN had written, "will take no side in this strike, but will simply do their duty of preserving peace." Of course, the only side that the police can properly take is the side of public order. Mayor HYLAN did not take that side. The police did not take that side. The Commissioner of Police did not take that side, or else he did not know the fundamental necessity of suppressing disorder in its beginning. And to deny or not to afford adequate protection was to take the strikers' side. Mr. GARRISON had an interview with Deputy Police Commissioner PORTER, and was again put off with vague assurances of "adequate police protection to prevent disorder and protect the operation of the cars."

Meanwhile, the cars were being attacked, their operation was prevented, the trolley-pole ropes cut, the operators threatened with assault or assaulted. Every attack on a car was a nucleus of riot. The snowball of disorder grew fast. What good could a few policemen stationed here and there or police reserves in police stations do? The instant placing of policemen on the cars, the detail of sufficient force to every centre of violence, would have ended this Brooklyn anarchy in quick time. This same sort of imported strike, to be spread with brickbats and stones and bludgeons and revolvers, was attempted on the New York surface railway lines in 1916. New York had a competent municipal government then. The motormen were protected. The police did their duty.

The company had sufficient men to operate its cars if they were protected. Mr. GARRISON wrote the Mayor another letter, telling him that unless a policeman was placed on every car the company would have to discontinue service by nightfall. He asked for 1,300 policemen. The Mayor at last granted the request. His Police Commissioner had reported to him on Wednesday that "there has been no disorder today and the situation has been well in hand at all times." As a matter of fact, disorder has been growing worse and worse every hour. The police never had the situation in hand, a situation created by their own failure to repress violence at the first. And so at 10 o'clock the city had to confess itself powerless to maintain order, and the B. R. T. system was shut up; and yesterday the same shameful state of violence continued. Property and persons were not safe. The Mayor and the Commissioner of Police had lacked the courage to put out the fire when it was first started.

REORGANIZING HUNGARY.

It was not to be expected that the millennium would immediately follow the deposition of BELA KUN, but we might have looked for something better than what has occurred. The interphediary Government which followed KUN'S downfall seems to have been a heterogeneous group which might not have held together, but perhaps it offered better prospects in times such as these than a Hapsburg Archduke. But the Archduke, at last accounts, was in charge, and was reported to have allied support. Tomorrow he may have given place to some one else; at any rate, it is hard to see that the Allies will gain any profit by supporting a Hapsburg.

True, this is a special sort of Hapsburg. For years past Archduke JOSEPH has been what might be termed a "professional Magyar," adopting this race to the exclusion of all others, even the German, in the old empire. There were those who said that he was preparing himself against the day when Hungary might break away from the union, and that the family approved of his course as likely to save a valuable crown for the family interest. After KAROLYI'S revolution last Fall he and his family proclaimed themselves as hereafter no more than simple Magyar citizens, and from the gentleman's record there is good reason to suppose that a simple desire to be of service to his country may be the motive behind his present advance to the supreme power. But the Hapsburgs are somewhat out of fashion at present; they may come back, but just now they hardly seem the leaders to command most popular support.

It appears that the behavior of the Rumanian army of occupation is responsible for some of the trouble in Budapest, but the criticism of the Rumanians which is heard in many quarters is by no means justified. Hungary, for Rumania, is a condition and not a theory. The old dispute over the three or four million Rumanians kept in subjection to Hungary has poisoned feeling for years. Less than a year ago Magyar troops were still in the Rumanian capital, and Magyars participated in the plundering of Rumania of almost everything worth taking away. The Magyars proclaimed that they would not submit to the liberation of their subject races, and so long as they felt thus they were a standing danger to Rumania.

BELA KUN came to power because the people thought he could keep the old frontiers. This was one direct menace to Rumania; another lay in KUN'S alliance with LENIN, who threatened Rumania from the other side. With Bolshevism in the east and north and an unrepentant Bulgaria to the south, Rumania was in deadly danger. The Conference did nothing but talk to BELA KUN, and eventually the Rumanian Army threw him out. In that they served Rumanian interests and those of the world, and they are working for us no less than for themselves when they insist on disarming Hungary.

The objection to the demands made in the Rumanian ultimatum is practical, not sentimental. In theory they are just; Rumania does no more than demand the return of what was stolen from her, or its equivalent; she merely takes precautions to see that a dangerous neighbor is made incapable of harm. In practice, however, the disarming seems to have been done rather harshly, and the demands call for properly which Hungary, in all probability, actually does not have. Much of what was taken out of Rumania was shot away in the war, and much of the rest was stolen by the Bolsheviki. For both of these things the Magyars are directly responsible, and it is expediency, not justice, which recommends that we leave them at least something on which to make a new start. But with all this we ought to remember that the Rumanians did the world's work when nobody else was doing it. A policeman is blamed, and rightly, when he uses needless violence on a prisoner whom he is taking to the station, and that is what the Rumanians seem to be doing; but it is not good sense to blame him for making the arrest.

TOPICS OF THE TIMES.

More Than Truth Is Involved.

If one chose—and presumably a good many Germans of the unreconstructed sort will choose—one could see a mere issue of veracity in the controversy that has arisen between ex-Ambassador GERARD and ex-Admiral VON TIRPITZ. The latter in his recently published book writes that Mr. GERARD, addressing the Bremen Chamber of Commerce befor the United States went into the war, assured his hearers that "strong opposition to a declaration of submarine warfare need not be expected from America." To this Mr. GERARD replies that he never spoke before the Bremen Chamber of Commerce, one reason, among others, being that he was never in that city, and that never, either in public or in private, did he make, anywhere, a statement in the slightest degree resembling the one ascribed to him, whereas, at many times and in many places, he made exactly opposite statements as clearly and explicitly as his command of several languages enabled him to do it.

There is the issue of veracity as it stands, and, if nothing more were known regarding the two men, it would be necessary to admit that their assertions balance and nullify each other. That is always the case when men of equal repute, or men concerning whom no general information as to record and motive is available, give contradictory testimony on any subject. But that is not the case in this instance.

No Doubt About the Facts.

When our former Ambassador to Germany and the builder of the Kaiser's navy contradict each other as to what the former said about submarine warfare and its influence on American opinion, the issue of veracity is not beyond settlement, for a great deal is known about both men—quite enough to make inevitable the conclusion that Mr. GERARD is telling the truth and that Admiral VON TIRPITZ is not.

It is not necessary to conclude that the once great and more or less powerful sea lord is knowingly untruthful, for he may have been misinformed as to the Bremen speech, and only be repeating what he heard and believed. It strains charity hard, indeed, to be as kind as that, but misinformation did abound in Germany all through the war, and it was held a patriotic duty for everybody there to believe everything calculated to reassure and encourage the German public as to the successful course and favorable outcome of the war.

The possibilities of credulity, therefore, were very great—how amazingly great being well illustrated by the fact that even now a man as highly placed as Prince HENRY of Prussia can say with what sounds like sincerity, and hardly can be anything else, that England is responsible for the war and all its horrors.

But though there is a possibility that Admiral VON TIRPITZ wrote what he thought was the truth about a speech delivered in Bremen by the American Ambassador, it is nothing less than certain that never in any part of Germany did the American Ambassador say that submarine warfare, no matter how ruthless, would not excite strong opposition in this country. In the first place, Mr. GERARD knew better, and therefore simple common sense would have prevented him from making a statement the inevitable consequence of which would have been immediate discredit at home and discredit not long delayed in Germany. In the second place, Mr. GERARD again and again warned the Germans of what would happen if they did not abandon their submarine policy—and the event proved him to be an able prophet.

Naturally he did not say one thing in Berlin and its opposite in Bremen.

Again the Retailer Took Most.

Representative IGOE could not ask better warrant for his persistent efforts to interest his colleagues in the price of shoes than is provided by the report of the Federal Trade Commission on what its investigation of that subject has disclosed. The Commission's conclusion is that, while the war really did make impossible the maintenance of the prices that prevailed before the war began, the increases in selling prices to the consumer—in this case the wearer—have been greater than the higher cost of manufacture justified.

Everybody with any part in the shoe industry seems to have joined in demanding—and getting—more than prewar profits, but again it was revealed that at the end, not at the beginning, of the process that turns hides into shoes was the harsh charge of profiteering best deserved. The wholesalers, it seems, were satisfied with making a comfortable profit of 20 per cent. over what was cost to them. The retailer was not so easily content; he wanted a profit approaching 50 per cent., and the prices he charged gave him that—almost.

Perhaps, even probably, it is not entirely fair to present these figures as measuring the relative rapacity of wholesaler and retailer. The latter, especially if his business is a small one, really must have a higher percentage of profit than the former, if he is to live and be even decently prosperous. But that his profits must, for that innocent and amiable purpose, be so much more than those of the man trading on a larger scale, the retailer of shoes, as of many other wares, will find it difficult to prove, the more difficult as the facts become better known to a deeply interested public.

RAILROAD PROFIT SHARING.

Mr. Willcox Proposes Compromise to Meet Claims of Both Sides.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

The significant demand of labor leaders for nationalization of the railroads cannot be lightly brushed aside. It is a sincere proposal, seriously advocated by a large group of intelligent citizens, and any fair-minded opponent should at least give impartial consideration to its underlying causes. No permanent solution of the controversy can be expected without frank recognition and appreciation of the other fellow's point of view.

In the first place, it is important to note that the railroad employes do not question the right of capital to a fair return. There is no suggestion of confiscation in their demand. On the contrary, it includes a definite proposal that holders of railroad securities shall receive Government bonds for every honest dollar invested in railroad property. Rightly or wrongly, however, railroad employes do believe that capital has appropriated an unfair share of railroad earnings in the past and will continue to do so in the future unless the Government takes permanent control. This, in their opinion, overshadows every other issue. The relative economy and efficiency of private operation and Government operation are not even considered. The wide departure from the traditional policy of our democratic government is ignored. Capital has lost the confidence of labor, and Government operation is advocated as the only possible means of protecting the employes and the public from its avaricious grasp.

It is too late for argument on the merits of this contention. Any attempt to debate the issue and defend capital merely arouses increased irritation. So long as the present relations continue and capital receives all of the surplus earnings of the roads, it is absolutely inevitable that the employes and a large part of the general public will believe that the owners of railroad securities are getting more than a fair share. There is, however, one obvious answer to the labor leaders, and that is a counterproposal for private operation with a limited return on the invested capital.

If the stockholders who advocate private operation of the railroads, under Government supervision and control, were to seriously propose that all earnings in excess of a fair return on the invested capital should be divided between the employes and the Government, this would be an effective answer to the demand of the labor leaders for Government operation. Moreover, such an arrangement would not only provide an incentive and reward for efficiency of employes, but would go far to reconcile the public to adequate rates for passengers and freight, and thus give the holders of railroad securities an assured return upon their investment amounting almost to a Government guarantee.

The psychological effect of such an arrangement would be incalculable. Nothing could do more to allay the suspicion and antagonism of labor and to restore public confidence in the fair attitude of capital. Moreover, such a proposal would be an effective test of the real purpose of both capital and labor. If the employes are sincere in advocating Government ownership and operation merely to avoid excessive payments to stockholders, they cannot reasonably object to this proposal, while if they are advocating Government ownership and operation as a means of control through political influence, in their own interest and for their own benefit, they will, of course, oppose the return of the roads to private control on any terms. On the other hand, if the present owners of the roads are sincere in recognizing the interest and rights of the public and in not desiring to take advantage of their control to exact unreasonable profits, they will welcome an arrangement under which their capital is assured a fair return and surplus earnings are divided between the employes and the public, while if the stockholders are not content with a fair return on their investment, they can hardly avoid a suspicion that they desire to exploit railroad operation and development for private profit.

Disfranchise Public Employes.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

It seems to me that Congress should pass a law automatically disfranchising all Federal employes during the time of their engagements, and that the States and municipalities should enact similar laws in order that the ever increasingly vast army of such employes, who enjoy numerous exemptions and other preferences, may not become a direct political threat to our system of government.

If Government employes are to be considered the servants of the people, it is obvious that they should not, as a direct result of their employment, become placed in positions where they may conspire to obstruct or defeat the purposes of the people.

LO, THE POOR CAPITALIST!

Hearing a note of ominous warning—
"Call a taxi! Breakfast down town!
The chauffeur and cook have struck this morning!"

Dives reaches his desk at nine;
Wonders, seeing few signs of action,
"Bookkeepers, typists walked out just now!
A sympathy strike, with the eight-hour faction!"

Dives is called. "Yes! Hello, hello!"
"Say to the Boss that there's trouble brewin'!
The foremen decide for a union shop.
Orders pile up—but there's nothin' doin'!"

Dives is peeved, as he goes to lunch;
Looks in vain for his favorite waiter.
Worried, the manager brings the card:
"Pedro has struck with the rest, young traitor!"

Dives thinks golf may calm his nerves;
Starts for the links in a tramcar stuffy:
"Caddies—left; don't want—a—flat—rate —per—hour!"
Cheerfully anarls the head steward puffy.

Dives dines at the Magnates' Club,
Finding the meal is both crude and scrappy.
"Club chefs all over the town have quit!"
Announces the clerk, who looks far from happy.

Dives enters the hall at night,
"Gadzooks!" he groans. "But it's in the air!
Even the grandfather's clock is striking!"

SENATORS WASTING TIME IN INQUIRY.

Observer Thinks They Are Busying Themselves Over Wilson's Course in Paris When Action Is Needed.

By CHARLES H. GRASTY.
Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, Aug. 7.—There are in Washington scores of men who were connected in one way or another with the American delegation at the Peace Conference and are familiar with the conditions and proceedings in Paris. I have talked with many of them today regarding the points raised in the examination of Secretary Lansing before the Senate Foreign Relations Committee yesterday, and it will be useful to give the consensus in these quarters.

The contention among these men is that the drafting of the treaty was strictly, and if in his judgment desirable, exclusively the President's business. He could call for the aid of the commissioners or not just as he deemed best. He is the sole treaty-making power, just as the Senate is the sole treaty-ratifying power under the Constitution.

The effort to create sentiment against the treaty by proving that Secretary Lansing and the other commissioners were ignored is regarded as frivolous. It was clearly understood in Paris that they were there to assist the President. To what extent he should use them or not use them rested entirely with him.

Any power with which a Commissioner is clothed must be specifically conferred by the President, who is the sole treaty-making power. When the President of the United States is present and acting in treaty-making he is the United States from ocean to ocean and from Canada to the Gulf, every State, every county, every township.

Senators know with what jealousy and thoroughness the Constitution safeguards the sole power of the President to make a treaty as it does the Senate's to ratify one. Some here ask, Was not McKinley criticised for putting Senators on the commission to make peace with Spain? Some persons regard it as an effort to bribe the Senate.

In the matter of Shantung, in which it was attempted to bring out the opinion of the Commissioners, as expressed in a letter written to the President by General Bliss in April, persons connected with the conference recall the general understanding of the facts at the time.

Nature of Shantung Situation.

No one doubted the President's reluctance to accept the position taken by his colleagues in the Council of Four. It was a crisis in the conference. Clemenceau and Lloyd George were irrevocably committed. They felt that they were bound in honor by the agreements which their countries had entered into. Nor would they have answered for the consequences if the promises to Japan were broken. An agreement on the treaty and covenant might have been rendered impossible. With Japan, Germany and Russia out the discard would have been about as big as the deck.

For Mr. Wilson to persist in repudiating the Anglo-French-Japanese agreements would have been to take a huge responsibility. Japan might have submitted, but she might not.

In this troubled situation the President consulted the Commissioners. After hearing their views he asked them to put them in writing. As he then knew what they were, this could not have been for the purpose of informing himself. It is reasonable to suppose that he wished to use General Bliss's strong statement with his colleagues in the council and with the Japanese delegates in the effort to win them—a very proper diplomatic use.

It is a fair inference that he brought in his advisers in the strongest possible way—not by a plan of town meeting but by using General Bliss's power of statement in a letter. He must have tried to show Clemenceau and Lloyd George and Makino that America would be antagonized, that the interest of Japan herself would ultimately suffer by her pressing matters and that perhaps American ratifications would be imperilled.

There was no obligation in the President to take these steps. But the President is a good negotiator; he puts his case at its strongest, and he used his advisers in precisely the way the Constitution contemplated and common sense suggested, although the matter of talking with them or having them write was entirely within his own judgment.

There is no doubt that the President moved with great energy and did his utmost, short of taking the gambler's chance. When finally it came to the point of accepting or rejecting the position which France, England, and Japan unyieldingly maintained, he turned to an effort to reduce Japan's demands to a minimum, and, having done this, he came to an agreement and passed on to other momentous questions before the conference.

It was a matter of judgment, and the Senate is perfectly right to consider whether the Shantung agreement is of such importance as to negative the desirability of the treaty. But no fault can properly be found with the President's method, either on constitutional grounds or from the viewpoint of efficient procedure. Every business man or interest wishing to have a thing accomplished adopts a similar method.

President Worked for Unity.

The Allies very nearly lost the war for lack of unity. Wilson knew the value of unity and insisted on the appointment of Foch as General. He had the same notion about the conference. He went in with the same ideas that his country behind him had—to be disinterested; (the opposition are abusing him because he did not trade one, to the associate Governments out of a West Indian island,) to put an end to the war—to try to make future wars less easy and to do all these things promptly, so that the world could be got back to work, production could become normal, and such a crisis as the one now prevailing in America, and the still more terrible ones that Europe at the very best must soon face, might be prevented, these conditions in America and Europe being mainly due to collapse in production.

The Senate is entitled to pass on the treaty and the covenant. It is its duty to do so. The Senate is the sole treaty-ratifying power. But the President is the sole treaty-making power.

Every one who watched the President at work in Paris is disposed to concede that he made a conclusion possible by avoiding town meeting methods. If the actual executive work had not been concentrated in a small council of Government heads the conference would probably now be at the stage of preparing to get ready to begin proceedings.

All the bodies in Paris were fact-giving or fact-finding bodies. They got the material ready and laid it before the body of Government heads. Each of these four called on his delegation for information and advice as he needed it.

Any other system would have resulted in a confusion and delay that would have swamped the Conference and jeopardized the world. The President was the particular champion of promptness. His special function was to keep the council on a one-way road, leading to results.

Those who know what went on in Paris think his Senate opponents are taking up time with irrelevances. They are trying to discredit the President. They appear to think it their duty to prevent a treaty, not to complete one. The eagerness with which they hunt mares' nests while the world is burning up shows how far they are away from the actual situation that has existed and still exists everywhere.

The world is drifting to ruin through lack of production. Authorities say that less work is being done and the aggregate production has been actually smaller since the armistice. In other words, in the four and a half years of war, while things to make war with were being manufactured on a huge scale, production for normal human needs also was at a larger rate than it has been in the past nine months.

It is in such condition that Wilson's opponents are holding up everything, while they pry into the President's relations with men who were there simply to give advice and assistance if and when he called for either, and who except for that had no connection with the treaty making.

But then it is not treaty ratifying that the opposing Senators are concerned about. They want to smash a President, if even they smash a world in doing it.

LEGAL FIGHT ON DRY LAW.

Wine Manufacturers File Injunction Suit to Prevent Enforcement.

An injunction suit to restrain Federal officials in this district from attempting to enforce the war-time prohibition law was instituted in the Federal District Court yesterday by Sylvester Scatena, William H. Lawson, and A. Julius Perelli-Minetti, co-partners of the firm of Scatena, Lawson & Perelli, owners of wineries in California and with an office here.

The plaintiffs say that they own a vineyard of eighty acres in California, and at the close of business on June 30 they had in stock upward of 500,000 gallons of "marketable and readily salable wine," produced from grapes of their own growing, and worth about $550,000. This wine, they say, they can not sell or dispose of in less than one year. Taxes amounting to $250,000 have been paid to the Government by the plaintiffs during the past year, the complaint says. The product has been sold to upward of 100 large wholesale customers, and the financial return has aggregated upward of $1,500,000.

The complaint further says that if the prohibition law is enforced the valuable business and good-will of the plaintiffs will be destroyed, future profits therefrom will be rendered impossible, the value of the firm as a going concern will be dissipated, its business and staff disorganized, and the value of its plant and physical assets will be at once depreciated to its junk or salvage value only.

Reference is made to alleged threats of Federal officials to carry out the law to the letter and to punish violators of it to the fullest extent. The statement is also made that the act which the officials intend to enforce to the injury of the complainants is unconstitutional and void "because unauthorized by any power delegated to or vested in Congress or any department or officer thereof under and by virtue of the Constitution of the United States and, further, because there is no present war emergency."

The complaint also says: "Upon the signing of the armistice treaty and the treaty of peace on June 28 last, all war activities ceased and thereby the need of conserving man power for war purposes and the conserving of food for war purposes ceased, and have never since that time existed and are not now existent."

As soon as the complaint was filed Judge A. N. Hand signed an order requiring the defendants, United States District Attorney Caffey and William H. Edwards, Collector of Internal Revenue, to show cause before him at 2 P. M. on Aug. 12, why they should not be enjoined from enforcing the law. Samuel Seabury is the attorney for the plaintiffs.

TRAVEL SHIPS CONGESTED.

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

LONDON, Aug. 7.—Embassy and steamship officials here heard with a good deal of apprehension rumors that the United States would before long rescind passport regulations. They hope Americans intending to cross the Atlantic will understand fully the conditions of travel before they book their passages. If they come they must be prepared for a long and weary stay before they can get a berth to return home. Few of those who landed from the Aquitania on Saturday can hope to get back before October, and if travel from New York gets heavier the situation will get worse.

The lack of steamships is the main cause. The White Star has only one August sailing, the Baltic may succeed in getting away next week if the dock laborers are well disposed, but the steamship company has not a free hand in the allotment of berths. The British Government still retains half the passenger accommodation for returning soldiers and munitions workers and so on, and it also expects the companies to look kindly on the importance to British commercial interests abroad.

The Olympic and Aquitania are both now withdrawn temporarily from service to undergo refitting after five strenuous years of war, and there is also a great pressure on the steamship lines to the Far East. As a result of this, Atlantic liners are asked to carry many more people wanting to get to Australia and China than they do under normal conditions, and this makes them more congested than ever.

TO ABANDON TRANSIT LINES.

Three Concerns Seek Permission to End Profitless Service.

A hearing on applications to cease operating traction lines will be held today by the Public Service Commission. The lines are the Pelham Park and City Island Railway Company, which wants to cease running a trolley line from City Island station through Pelham Park; the Mid-Crosstown Railway Company, which wants to stop the operation of the Twenty-eighth and Twenty-ninth Street Crosstown Line, and the Third Avenue Bridge Company, which asks permission to cease operating a line across the Queensboro bridge. The reasons alleged in the application are the same in each case, lacking of sufficient revenue to pay operating expenses, and with no hope of betterment because the patronage is decreasing.

All of the lines have been recognized for some time as of small service and it has been known that they have proved a burden upon the companies obliged to pay for their maintenance.

NEWBURGER TO RUN AS AN INDEPENDENT

Supreme Court Justice Tells Committees He Will Not Seek Democratic Nomination.

TO SELECT A PARTY NAME

All efforts to induce Supreme Court Justice Joseph E. Newburger to run in the Democratic primaries for a renomination were abandoned yesterday by the committee representing the four Bar Associations of the city who took up the Justice's fight after he was refused a redesignation by Tammany Hall.

It was said that the Justice had written his friends to the effect that he did not care to make the fight for the Democratic nomination against Irwin Untermyer, the regular Tammany candidate, but preferred to make an independent contest.

The committee, acting upon this request, will continue its work of getting up an independent petition for the Justice so that he will be a candidate of the independents at the election. The committee will select a party name and an emblem and pay little attention to the primary contest. Only 3,000 signatures are needed to a petition placing a candidate in the field for the election in November, and it was said that no difficulty was expected to be encountered in getting this number of signers.

William M. Bennett, who has entered the Republican primaries for the nomination for President of the Board of Aldermen against the organization candidate, Major Fiorello H. La Guardia, yesterday challenged the latter to debate with him the issues of the campaign every night until primary day. Mr. Bennett said:

"In the present serious situation in the city's affairs, when members of the police force and Fire Department are resigning because their pay is not sufficient to enable them to support their families decently, when the families of civil service employes whose salaries are under $1,200 or $1,300 a year are suffering because of the high cost of living, when clerks, bookkeepers, and other members of the middle class have been driven by desperation by the same cause, when the transit situation is at such a crisis, in my opinion the position of President of the Board of Aldermen of the City of New York is a great office; and having been honored by the citizens who signed my petition, I expect to enter the primary race and make a vigorous campaign. The campaign will have to be short because primary day is Sept. 2.

"In view of the fact that important matters before the Board of Estimate are passed every Friday with as little consideration as is given to matters on the closing day of the Legislature, and in view of the fact that the people of this city are now possessed with a spirit of unrest, the like of which has not been seen since 1848, I consider that the voters are entitled to have the candidates present themselves in order that the voters may make an intelligent selection from the sole standpoint of fitness for the office."

3 SENATE MEASURES SEEK LIVING COST CUT

Billion Retrenchment in Expenses, Ban on Export of Necessaries, Storage Check Asked.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, Aug. 7.—Measures were offered in the Senate today aimed at helping to solve the high cost of living problem. One, sponsored by Senator McCormick, Republican of Illinois, provided for Government economy as a means of reducing taxes.

Mr. McCormick's resolution called upon the President to submit to the Senate, not later than Dec. 1 next, a statement to indicate what cuts may be made in estimates for the fiscal year ending June 30, 1921, so as to permit a reduction of $1,000,000,000 in appropriations. With this, the Senator asks for statements on Government revenues and income from all sources from June 30, 1910, to June 30, 1919, together with expenditures for the same period. The resolution went to the Committee on Appropriations.

Another resolution was offered by Senator Myers, Democrat, of Montana, calling upon the Judiciary Committee to report on the advisability of prohibiting "for a time" exports of food, clothing and other necessities in an effort to have America supplied before sending commodities abroad. The resolution was sent to the Judiciary Committee.

Senator McKellar, Democrat, of Tennessee, offered a resolution to regulate cold storage houses, putting them under Government licensing, as one means of reducing prices on meat and other commodities.

STORED FOOD UP 20%; PRICES CLIMB HIGHER

WASHINGTON, Aug. 7.—The Federal Trade Commission today issued a bulletin showing in detail how food in storage has increased as nearly all prices have risen, and that stocks on hand June 1, 1919, were fully one-fifth greater than at the same time in 1918.

"That the 'law of supply and demand' is immutable and to be blamed for high prices," the commission asserted in an authorized statement, "does not seem to be borne out by figures. Not counting the Government's surplus stocks, there was a greater supply of foodstuffs in this country on June 1 this year than the same date last year. The excess is 19 per cent. in the combined total of a number of the most important foods in dry and cold storage."

The commission listed eight staple foods which on June 1 showed an increase in stocks withheld from the market, ranging from 3 to 298 per cent. over stocks on June 1, 1918, and in each instance there was shown to have been a substantial advance in the wholesale price during that period.

Stocks of frozen fowl showed a maximum increase of 298 per cent. and the price, despite this fact, increased 3 cents a pound. Wheat stocks showed an increase of 174 per cent., with an increase in price of 31 cents; flour stocks, an increase of 21 per cent., with an increase in the price per barrel of nearly $3; egg stocks, an increase of 9.8 per cent., with an increase in price of 11 cents, and butter stocks an increase of 129 per cent., with the price soaring 12 cents above last year's figure.

All dry storage stocks, according to the commission's figures, showed an average increase of 124 per cent. Of these not listed in the above table, stocks of rye increased 346 per cent., barley 207 per cent., buckwheat flour, 327 per cent., and canned tomatoes 202 per cent.

WILL N. HARBEN DEAD.

Will N. Harben, author of many short stories and novels of life in the South, died yesterday at his home, 854 West 181st Street. Born in Dalton, Ga., on July 5, 1858, he moved to this city some years ago, but in his writings he remained faithful to the surroundings of his youth. Among his novels were "Pole Baker," "Ann Boyd," "The Desired Woman," "The Inner Law," and "Mam Linda." The last of these was written to prove that lynching and similar outbreaks did not truly represent Southern sentiment.

J. EDWARD ADDICKS, OF GAS FAME, DEAD

RUINED BY DROP IN COPPER

Spent $3,000,000 at Height of His Fortunes in Vain Effort to Become Delaware Senator.

The spectacular career of J. Edward Addicks, former Delaware politician and "frenzied financier," came to an end yesterday with his death in comparative poverty at 328 West Fifty-seventh Street, the residence of Dr. Rita Dunlevy, who treated him, at the age of 78. He will be buried on Saturday in the Laurel Hill Cemetery, Philadelphia, in which city he was born.

Back in the nineties Addicks was credited with a fortune variously estimated at from ten to twenty million dollars. He made this money by his sensational manipulation of the Bay State Gas Company between 1887 and 1892, when, according to Thomas W. Lawson, he "made Boston look like the proverbial country gawk at circus time," and in the promotion with Lawson of the Amalgamated Copper Company. The great decline in the price of this copper stock later caused the financial ruin of Addicks.

It was not his first experience of disaster, however. Early in life he had risen from errand boy to clerk and then partner and owner in a flour business. This was all swept away in the panic of 1873. He got on his feet after the first tumble, but never recovered from the second.

When at the height of his fortunes Addicks became possessed with a passion to represent the State of Delaware in the United States Senate. He went after the prize in characteristic fashion, and without success, for many years, spending on the vain project about $3,000,000. When the du Ponts formed their political organization Addicks was counted out of Delaware politics.

He introduced himself to Delaware politics first in a high silk hat and a fur overcoat, both of them curiosities, and announced to a small group of newspapermen in the State House that he was a candidate for United States Senator. He was then not known to perhaps more than a score of people personally although nearly every one had heard of his gas trust and other deals. He was defeated for the first time in 1889. Owing to the fact that no one in the State was permitted to vote at that time without exhibiting a paid tax receipt, Addicks was able to gain control of a large number of votes by going through the lower sections of the State paying the taxes for those persons who promised to vote for him.

From 1891 to 1901 he was an associate editor of The Independent, and during the two following years was an editorial writer for THE NEW YORK TIMES.

commodities alleged to be controlled by the packers.

The committee of three and other members of the President's Cabinet, including the Attorney General, held a final conference at the White House today to review the packing industry feature of the campaign against high living costs. It is stated that all of the details concerning methods to be employed have now been worked out and that definite action will be instituted as soon as the complaints have been prepared. No announcement as to the jurisdiction in which civil proceedings will be brought has been made as yet.

Thomas E. Wilson, President of Wilson & Co., and Chairman of the executive committee of the Institute of American Meat Packers, issued a statement tonight to all packers of the United States, in which he discussed the Government's action and said that the most thorough investigation would be welcomed. He entered a categorical denial of the charges made by the Federal Trade Commission, an extensive summary of which was published in THE NEW YORK TIMES today.

Assail Rendering Concerns.

The charges made by the Federal Trade Commission in connection with the "rendering" business of the packers deal exhaustively with the situation in many parts of the country. Some of the statements follow:

"Rendering is the process of cooking certain parts of slaughtered or dead animals in kettles or tanks, and recovering therefrom tallow, grease and tankage, products which are important materials for use in the manufacture of oleomargarine, lard substitutes, soap and fertilizer. It is the purpose of this chapter to make a study of the trade methods employed by the Chicago packers and others in a number of important centres in the United States in purchasing and collecting the raw materials used in the rendering business and to point out the objectionable methods which have been found. The most important of these objectionable methods have already been declared illegal either by the courts as to other industries or by the Federal Trade Commission in decisions on complaints made by competitors.

"These practices may be divided into two groups. To the first group obviously belong the following:

"1. Misrepresentation of competitors by means of false and derogatory statements against them, such as circulating reports that they are financially unsound, will not be able to meet their obligations, and must soon go out of business.

"2. Intimidation of competitors as by threats to spend large sums of money in commercial warfare against them, to institute series of costly lawsuits, &c.

"3. Enticement of competitors' employes.

"5. Espionage on the business of competitors, such as following their representatives and securing the names of their customers.

Division of Customers Charged.

"To the second group of practices belong the following:

"1. Division of customers; a form of fixing the channels of trade, the customers in a given field being divided among certain companies by agreement, each company refusing to do business with a customer assigned to another. The competitive market is thus eliminated, prices paid for raw materials cannot be unreasonably depressed, and the customer has no choice as to the disposition of his goods.

"2. Bidding up prices paid for raw materials with the intent to embarrass competitors or force them out of business, such price raising usually being practiced locally, the high prices being paid only in competitive territory, thus demonstrating that the increased price is not offered because of an increase in the value of the material for which it is paid.

"3. Bogus independents—that is, two or more separate organizations which purport to be in competition with each other, but one of which is owned by the other, or both of which are owned by the same person or company.

"4. Paying bonuses to customers for their trade, a form of price raising whereby a lump sum is given to a competitor's customers or a new concern entering business in order to secure his patronage.

"Information concerning such practices as have been enumerated was secured by representatives of the commission in more than a score of cities throughout the country from testimony given at hearings of the commission and from complaints made by aggrieved concerns to the commission. The story of the rendering situation, as gathered from these sources, shows that such methods have long been practiced and that the Chicago packing companies, especially Swift & Co., Morris & Co., and Wilson & Co., Inc., and one fertilizer company, the American Agricultural Chemical Company, have been and are the interests which use these methods, at some points separately, at others in combination.

Tell of New York Interests.

"The principal interests concerned in the rendering business in New York are four of the Chicago packers and the American Agricultural Chemical Company, the four packing companies being Wilson & Co., Inc., Armour & Co., Morris & Co., and Swift & Co. The companies through which these interests operate are as follows:

"Wilson & Co., Inc.—Central Rendering Corporation; Haberman Company, Inc.; Joseph Levy Company, Inc.

"Morris & Co.—Joseph Stern & Sons; Products Manufacturing Company; Van Iderstine Company; Levy Brothers; Bopp Brothers.

"American Agricultural Chemical Company—Herman Brand, Inc.; G. Selner Company.

"In the case of the Van Iderstine Company and the Products Manufacturing Company, 58 and 29 per cent., respectively, of the capital stock are owned by Morris & Co. Armour & Co. and Wilson & Co., Inc., are also interested in them as follows: Van Iderstine Company, 6 per cent. and 4 per cent., respectively, and Products Manufacturing Company 4 per cent. and 3 per cent., respectively.

The Products Manufacturing Company does not collect shop fats and bones, but confines its operations to the collecting of dead stock in the city, for which it has a contract with the New York Board of Health.

"In addition to the above named companies the following are engaged in the collecting or rendering of shop fats and bones: G. Weiss & Sons, the Independent Fat Company, F. Hofener, Joseph Rosenberg & Sons, and others.

"A canvass of the New York retail meat men by representatives of the commission gave evidences of the usual division of customers among the renderers and collectors, retail butchers stating that for years they had been selling to the same concern and that no other renderers tried to get their trade.

"This was also brought out in an interview which a representative of the commission had with Herman Brand of Herman Brand, Inc., a subsidiary of the American Agricultural Chemical Company, in which the informant stated that his concern could afford to pay half a cent more per pound for fats, but it would not do so as that would take away customers from the subsidiaries of the packing plants.

"In 1910 the Retail Butchers' Fat Rendering Company, in which about 400 local butchers were interested as stockholders, was organized and began a rendering business in New York. It was not a success, and after an existence of about seven years without payment of dividends, it sold out to the United Dressed Beef Company, a subsidiary of Swift & Co.

"G. Weiss & Sons, Inc., have been established in Brooklyn about eight years. A member of this concern said to a representative of the commission that he experienced much difficulty in getting into the field, as the other rendering concerns persistently advanced the prices which they offered to the customers which he succeeded in getting on his list, and the result was that he lost $5,000 in the commercial strife which ensued.

"He continued, however, and eventually peace overtures were made to him and an arrangement was made by which he was apportioned 10,000 pounds of fats a week, delivered by Joseph Levy, now a subsidiary of Wilson & Co., Inc., and other collectors."

PROFITEERS HERE TO BE PROSECUTED

Government Agents to Seize Food Stocks Held to Create Higher Prices.

There is to be criminal prosecution of food profiteers in this city who hoard stocks to create artificial shortage, and stocks of such food and fuel will be seized by Government agents, it was announced yesterday at the office of the United States District Attorney, following the Government's announcement that a relentless war is to be waged on profiteering. Assistant United States District Attorneys Earl B. Barnes and Ben A. Mathews made public a statement regarding the contemplated prosecution of food hoarders in this city.

SUPPLY FOR STATE HELD UP.

Governor Trying to Have Government Order Rescinded.

ALBANY, Aug. 7.—A letter explaining the situation following the cancellation late yesterday by Federal officers of orders placed in Schenectady for surplus army foods by various State municipalities, was sent out tonight by Eugene H. Porter, State Commissioner of Foods and Markets.

The letter explained that all deliveries to municipalities were canceled because of new orders directing that the surplus stores be turned over to the Post Office Department, and that shipments would be made at once. Governor Smith immediately obtained from the Federal authorities a new order directing the holding of supplies at Schenectady pending the adjustment of obtaining them for the thirty or more New York municipalities interested in obtaining same. Mr. Porter said he expected a decision before Aug. 11.

SAYS SWIFT PROFIT IS SMALL.

WASHINGTON, Aug. 7.—Swift & Co. made a profit of only one-ninth of a cent a pound on all beef sold in Washington for the five weeks ended Aug. 2, a Senate committee investigating high living costs in Washington was told today by L. H. D. Weld, manager of the company's research department.

Mr. Weld presented figures which, he said, showed that all the expenses of packing house operation, freight and selling on this beef amounted to only 2½ cents a pound. He also testified that other figures showed that of the total amount the company received for beef and by-products, it had to pay out 90 per cent. for live cattle and more than 9 per cent. for labor, freight, and other expenses. This was proof, he said, that the packers' profits had no effect on prices.

Thomas E. Wilson, President of Wilson & Co., issued a statement today repudiating in part one concerning the suits against the packers which was issued yesterday and attributed to him.

"I made no statement to the effect that the Department of Justice would get no satisfaction from the packers," said Mr. Wilson. "Such a position is not in keeping with my disposition nor that of Wilson & Co. On the contrary, I cannot emphasize too strongly that the Department of Justice will have the fullest co-operation from us.

"I am perfectly willing to submit the entire proposition to them and am not fearful as to results when the full story is known."

RAISE PARCEL POST LIMIT.

Buyers of Army Food May Now Order 125 Pounds.

WASHINGTON, Aug. 7.—Authority to increase temporarily the parcel post weight limit to 125 pounds so that buyers of army food may take full advantage of opportunity to purchase through Postmasters and letter carriers, was granted the Postmaster General today by the Interstate Commerce Commission. It was announced also that during the sale buyers might place several orders at the same time without paying the initial postal charge of 3 cents a pound more than once.

The orders must be in writing and in duplicate and the cost plus postage will be collected with them. They will be filled in the order received.

It is with profound regret that the trustees of this organization have learned of the death of their esteemed fellow-trustee, Rose Elkeles. During the many years of her service as a trustee she gave unstintingly of herself to the poor whose welfare was her absorbing interest.

Because of her attractive personality and peculiar faculty for organization, she succeeded in securing the active co-operation of thousands of women through the Federation of Sisterhoods of which, up to her demise, she was for a number of years the honored President.

The Jewish community suffers a sad loss by her departure—the poor, a loyal and devoted friend.

YANKEES DROP FIRST GAME TO BROWNS AND THEN MAYS COMES TO THEIR RESCUE

CARL MAYS TWIRLS YANKS TO VICTORY

Browns Helpless Before Boxman Whose Suspension Was Raised by Court Order.

FANS 9 MEN, GIVES 6 HITS

Huggins's Men Drop Opening Game, 6 to 3, Then Hit Hard and Win Second, 8 to 2.

Carl Mays, completely surrounded by the protection of a blanket injunction from the Supreme Court, broke through Ban Johnson's suspension yesterday and pitched the second game of a double-header at the Polo Grounds against the St. Louis Browns. And what's more, Carl won his game, the score being 8 to 2. In the preliminary skirmish of the afternoon, the Browns got a little uppish and beat the Yanks 6 to 3. Some 16,000 people were anxious to see how the injunction would work and all hands seemed well pleased when it operated as advertised.

The injection of the legal arm of the commonwealth on the base ball diamond aroused much curiosity. Some of the fans thought when Mays appeared that the hurry-up wagon would roll out on the field with a squad of bluecoats and give Mays a ride down to the Tombs. Nothing of the kind happened. The injunction said that Ban Johnson, his umpires, Manager Jimmy Burke of the Browns, and all of the aforesaid Johnson's agents, benchmen, et cetera, must keep their well-known hands off Carl Mays and they did. The injunction ran true to form and so did Mays. He fanned nine of the Browns, held them to six hits and had his submarine shoots playing tricks with the St. Looey hats.

The only inhabitants of the park who seemed worried were the umpires, Hildebrand and Moriarty. When the coloratura soprano who does the announcing told the people that Mays would pitch, the umpires called a convention between themselves at the home plate and had a long chest-to-chest talk. They argued the case pro and con and decided that there were two sides to it. According to their boss, Ban Johnson, Mays was under suspension, while, according to the Supreme Court of the State of New York, Mays could play ball and cut up around the ball field just as he blamed pleased. The umpires had to use their noodles in deciding just what to do.

Ban Runs Second.

They concluded to string along with the Supreme Court and the game went on. They kept a close watch on Mays throughout the game. They examined the horsehide ball every time Carl rubbed it and did the old Hawkshaw examination of the cover several times to see if Mays was using beeswax, resin, emory, or any of those things. Hildebrand discovered something on one of the balls and put it in his back pocket to be submitted to Boss Ban as evidence.

Mays got the greatest reception a ball player has received in Harlem in many a day. When he fanned the three St. Louis players—Austin, Bronkie, and Jacobson—in the first inning, the crowd stood up and cheered his journey back to the bench. Then men got up in all parts of the grand stand, threw up their hats, and led cheer after cheer for Carl. "Three cheers for Mays," they cried, and the chorus of hurrahs was taken up by the fans in all parts of the spacious stands.

Allan Sothoron was pitted against Mays, and although the Yanks hit him freely they were unable to squeeze many runs across until they fairly bombarded him in the seventh. New York broke into the run business in the third when Home Run Baker hit the ball into the right field grand stand. St. Louis tied it up in the fourth when Baby Doll Jacobson punched another home run into the left field bleachers. The Yanks sneaked ahead in their half of the same inning when Bodie singled to centre and went down on Hannah's sacrifice. Mays got an infield hit to first and Fewster hoisted a fly to Jacobson. The Baby Doll in left muffed the ball and Bodie scored.

The Big Seventh Inning.

It was a see-saw session and the Browns tied it again in the fifth. Sothoron singled and was forced by Austin. After Bronkie fanned Austin stole second. Jacobson was hit by a pitched ball and Sisler crashed a single to centre, scoring Austin, Sisler going to second on Bodie's fumble.

The Yanks scampered off with the game in the seventh. After Pipp skied to Smith, Pratt singled and stole second. Bodie got a pass and Hannah hoisted one to Smith. Mays singled to centre, scoring Pratt, and Carl took second on Williams's error, Bodie going to third. Fewster was hit by a pitched ball, filling the bases.

Samuel Vick from Tennessee then made everybody happy by banging a home run into the left field bleachers, accomplishing a feat which is the ambition of every ball player—to hit a homer with the bases jammed.

Austin walked in the opening inning of the first game and Bronkie sacrificed. Jacobson passed a single to right, scoring Austin. Sisler forced Jacobson at second and Williams died at first. The Yanks got the run back in the same inning. Fewster singled to centre and Peck skied to Jacobson. Baker's single to left sent Fewster to third. On a squeeze play Lewis bunted to Shocker, who made the play at the plate, Fewster scoring.

Huggins and O'Connor Exiled.

Manager Huggins and Coach Pat O'Connor kicked so hard at this decision that Hildebrand put them out of the picture.

St. Louis went to the front in the second. Earl Smith singled to left and Gerber was safe on Baker's fumble. After Severeid popped to Baker, Schecker forced Gerber at second, Pratt to Peck, but Pipp muffed Peck's high toss when he tried for a double play and Smith scored.

Peck was injured when Severeid slid into second in the fifth and in the next inning he retired, Fewster going to short while Vick went to right field.

The Browns landed on Quinn hard in the sixth. Williams singled to right and Smith did likewise. Gerber's single to centre scored Williams. Severeid was walked purposely, filling the bases. This was a poor move, for Shocker rapped a single to Vick and Smith and Gerber scored.

Bronkie singled to centre in the seventh and went to second on Jacobson's line drive over Fewster's head. Sisler contributed a sacrifice, and when Williams rolled to Fewster he threw Bronkie out at the plate. Jacobson and Williams reeled off a double steal, Jacobson scoring.

Yanks Make a Rally.

The Yanks made a dying gasp rally in the eighth. After Lewis fouled to Austin, Pipp bounded a double off Bronkie's shins and went to third on Williams's wild toss in returning the ball. Pratt singled to centre, scoring Pipp. Bodie singled to left, sending Pratt to third. At this critical moment Muddy Ruel fanned. Even worse than that was Al Wickland, who, pinch hitting for Quinn, hoisted a measly fly to Williams.

Sam Vick caused a little excitement in the ninth. With one gone Samuel tripled to centre and scored while Baker was being tossed out at first.

Curves and Bingles.

Yesterday's games dragged along so slowly that the teams almost spent the week-end on the field. As it was they consumed five hours in playing the two games, including the dinner hour.

In his affidavit Carl Mays said that a pitcher to win games must not only have his arm in the game but also his heart and soul. All of these were working for Mays yesterday.

One reason the Browns won the first game was because it was hot, and they thought they were home in St. Louis.

The Yankees and the Giants are running a close race in home runs. The teams are now tied with 33 each.

Sisler and Jacobson of the Browns are hitting the ball at a terrific pace. Sisler has hit safely in the last sixteen games for an average of .460, while Jacobson has hit safely in the last thirteen games for an average of .543.

Manager Huggins and Coach Pat O'Connor kicked so strenuously at Hildebrand's decision on Baker at the plate in the first inning of the first games that he sent O'Connor out of the lot and exiled Huggins to the bench for the afternoon.

Urban Shocker made a loud howl against Hildebrand for calling Fewster safe in the first inning of the opening clash. Shocker made a motion as if to hit the umpire, but he changed his mind just in time.

Seven Yankees were stranded on the corners in the first four innings. Shocker got out of some deep holes and did his best pitching when runs threatened to bloom.

Peckinpaugh was injured when Sevinning of the opening battle. His knee inning o fthe opening battle. His knee was slightly wrenched and he had to retire. The injury is not serious and it is not believed that he will be out of the game very long.

GIANTS PULL GAME FROM BLAZING FIRE

ST. LOUIS, Aug. 7.—The Giants appeared to be all measured for their third straight defeat this afternoon in the early innings of their game with the Cardinals, but they put up a fine uphill battle and finally won out. After trailing from the third inning to the seventh they tied the score in this frame and put over the deciding punch in the eighth. Successive triples by Jess Barnes and Lew McCarty sent the winning run over the plate and gave the Giants the verdict, 5 to 4.

McGraw's men left here with only one victory in three games and still on the losing side as far as the Western trip is concerned. Despite the victory today the former League leaders were not impressive, except in their late rallies. Barnes and Benton, who are rated among the best of the New York hurlers, were reached by the Rickeyites for thirteen hits, an unlooked for performance by tailenders against pennant chasers. Since leaving the East the Giants have played eleven games, losing six and winning five. They open a series with the Cubs at Chicago tomorrow.

Though Barnes delivered the wallop that turned the tide in favor of his own team, the young right-hander did not last to the finish of the game. The long run from home plate around to third base evidently sapped such of Barnes's stamina as had not been sapped previously by the heat, and Jess showed signs of weakening when the Cardinals took up the cudgels in the second half of the same inning. Before a batsman had been retired McGraw decided it was expedient to supplant Barnes, so he took Jess out and sent Rube Benton in to check the impending rally. The southpaw delivered handsomely and preserved the one run lead which Barnes had manufactured, only to show signs of letting it slip away.

Giants Get Early Lead.

The Giants went to the front in their half of the first inning, but could not carry the one-run advantage through the inning. Burns drew a pass, Young struck out, and Fletcher beat out a slow roller down the third base line, sending Burns to second. After Chase popped to Leslie for the second out Kauff smashed a single to centre and Burns rode home on the hit.

The Cardinals promptly tied up the count. After Shotton had been retired on strikes Smith singled to left and stole second. Milton Stock, who has been hitting hard throughout the series with the Giants, punched a double to left field and Smith scored. Stock tried to stretch his hit to a triple and Burns's fine throw to Zim nipped him going into third. Hornsby ended the inning by striking out.

In the second the Giants pushed over another marker, and again the lead faded before the inning had been completed. Baird singled to centre and McCarty singled to left on a hit and run play, Baird racing around to third. This ended the day's work of Willie Doak. Goodwin came to the hill and started by fanning Barnes, but before he finished up this little task a passed ball by Clemons allowed Baird to score and McCarty to reach second. There was no more scoring in this inning.

After McHenry had flied out in the home half of the second Dilhoefer singled to right, advanced on a pass to Leslie, and scored on Lavan's single to centre.

After setting the Giants down in order in the third, the Cards blew themselves to two more runs, enough to keep them in front up to the seventh. The first two batsmen were easy outs in this inning, and then Hornsby beat out a slow roller to Baird. McHenry hit to left for three bases, scoring Hornsby, and when Chase made a high toss to Barnes after fielding Dilhoefer's grounder McHenry scored.

Giants Tie and Win.

Two errors helped the Giants to a run in the fifth. With one out Fletcher was safe on Lavan's fumble and reached second on a wild pitch. Chase sent the New York Captain to third with a single past Hornsby, and when Leslie fumbled Kauff's high bounder Fletcher raced home.

A pass to Young and hits by Fletcher and Chase sent over the tying run in the seventh inning, and in the eighth the Giants won the game. Zimmerman and Baird had gone out on flies to Smith when McCarty hit to right field for three bases. McGraw sent Lee King in as pinch runner for McCarty, but there was no need for any extra speed in this instance. Barnes, who had made two singles, smashed a triple to deep left and King sauntered in with the run that spelled victory.

TWO CLUBS ACCEPT YANKS' INVITATION

Boston and Chicago Owners Say They Will Come to Special Meeting on Mays Case.

The invitations of President Jacob Ruppert of the Yankees for an informal meeting of the American League club owners here next Monday had brought forth acceptances last night only from the Boston and Chicago clubs, which have taken sides with New York in the muddle over Carl Mays. The New York club received assurances last night that Chicago would accept, and President Harry Frazee stated that he would most assuredly be present.

No word has yet been received from the other clubs, but President Ruppert expects to receive replies today. The New York owners are very anxious to get the club owners together, and will make every effort to bring about an amicable settlement before the hearing is held on the Mays injunction on Tuesday.

It is suspected that the five other clubs, Philadelphia, Cleveland, Detroit, St. Louis and Washington, will get in touch with President Johnson before deciding to attend. The plan of President Ruppert is something entirely new in baseball and a meeting of the American League has never been held except at the call of President Johnson. Baseball men yesterday seemed to believe that, while all the club owners may consent to meet with President Ruppert here, President Johnson's present is still doubtful. The New York club in calling the magnates together was actuated by the friendliest motives and will make a sincere attempt to make the other club owners see the Mays case according to their point of view.

If, however, Johnson and those clubs which support him take a belligerent attitude, the two Colonels who own the Yanks, Ruppert and Huston, will carry the case to a finish and at the hearing of the case Tuesday will endeavor to obtain a permanent injunction to restrain Johnson from interfering with Mays.

The umpires who officiated at yesterday's game, George Hildebrand and George Moriarty, were both served with the injunction at their hotel on Wednesday night. The St. Louis Club was served through Bobby Quinn, the business manager. Before the second game, which Mays pitched yesterday, the umpires held a conference about the situation, but no move was made to interfere in any way with the Supreme Court's enjoining order.

President Johnson has not been heard from since he so suddenly disappeared from his hotel here on Tuesday. He was said to have gone back to Chicago on the Twentieth Century on Tuesday afternoon, but he has not given out any statement in relation to the Mays case since leaving here. Process servers were not so sure that Johnson had left the city and they made a thorough search of his favorite haunts here yesterday to serve him with the injunction. At a late hour last night, however, the whereabouts of Johnson was still a mystery.

Just why Johnson has taken this attitude is hard to explain, because the Yankee owners want to have the case settled as soon as possible. It is believed that Johnson's attorneys will be represented at the hearing here on Tuesday, and the Yankee owners hope that Johnson himself will appear as a witness in the case. If the club owners do not come to some agreement on Monday and ask Johnson to lift the suspension the lawyers for the New York club will ask to have the injunction made permanent.

While no open hostility against Johnson as President of the American League may appear during the present season, it is believed that there will be sensational doings at the annual meeting of the league in December. Last year there was opposition to Johnson, but he ruled his league, just as he has always done, and the opposition, then led by Frazee and Comiskey, was squelched.

WHITE SOX GET EVEN BREAK

Leaders Win First, 2 to 1, from Athletics, but Lose Second, 3 to 2.

PHILADELPHIA, Aug. 7.—Chicago and Philadelphia broke even in two close games today, the League leaders winning the first, 2 to 1, and the locals the second, 3 to 2.

After six scoreless innings in the first contest Risberg tripled and came home on a wild pitch, scoring Chicago's first run in the seventh. Felsch's home run in the ninth turned out to be the winning tally.

In the local's half Weaver bunched a fumble and a muff of pinch hitter Burrus's fly, which, with Witt's single, scored the Athletics' only run. Bunched hits, with bases on balls and a wild throw by Williams, gave the Athletics the winning run in the second game. Sensational catches by Kopp and Eddie Collins's all-round play were the high lights.

REDS HAND GRIMES CRUSHING DEFEAT

Cincinnati Wallops Brooklyn, 13 to 0, in Worst Disaster of the Season.

CINCINNATI, Aug. 7.—The Dodgers closed a three-game series with the Reds here this afternoon by taking the most decisive beating that has been handed out this season by one National League club to another. The tribe of Pat Moran got championship pitching, and the Easterners were as helpless from start to finish as one would expect a high school team to be against major leaguers. The score was 13 to 0.

Eller pitched his greatest game of the year, and it came on a day when Uncle Robbie's pitching was at low ebb. The result was that the Dodgers were set down in order in seven of the nine innings, got only three runners to first base and one to second, while the Reds were continually clogging up the corners with base runners. But for an error in the eighth inning by Kopf the Dodgers would not have got a man to second base during the afternoon.

Manager Robinson tried out Burleigh Grimes in the hope of taking the odd game of the series, but Burleigh could hardly have beaten an amateur team on the form that he displayed this afternoon. The Reds pounded him to a farethee-well for six innings, collecting twelve hits and ten runs before Manager Robinson decided to lead Grimes away from the slaughter. Mitchell was sent in to finish the game and the league leaders nicked him for four hits and three more runs in the last two frames.

Grimes got through the first inning safely, setting the league leaders down in order, and then the bombardment began. Roush opened the second inning with a walk, took third on Neale's single to right, and scored on Kopf's single to the same section. A passed ball advanced both runners. Magee fanned and Wingo hit a long fly to Zach Wheat, scoring Neale. Eller, who batted as well as he pitched, lined a single to centre and Kopf rode home.

These three runs were more than needed, but the Reds continued to pound Grimes. Daubert opened the third inning with a single to right, Groh walked, and Roush bunted safely, filling the bases. Neale's sacrifice fly to Wheat scored Daubert. Groh and Roush then worked a double steal and Heinie beat Johnston's throw to the plate when Kopf hit to the Brooklyn second baseman. Magee's single to right scored Roush, and sent Kopf to third, in position to score while Wingo was forcing Magee at second base.

Still another run drifted across in the fourth. Rath opened with a double past Konetchy and Daubert sacrificed him to third. Groh delivered an aerial sacrifice to Griffith and Rath registered.

In the fifth Neale's double, singles by Magee and Eller, and a poor throw by Olson produced two more runs. Grimes was not scored on in the sixth though Daubert and Groh opened with singles, and at the end of the inning Robbie gave Burleigh a vacation.

Mitchell was bumped in the seventh inning for two hits, but there was no scoring. In the eighth Daubert walked, Schreiber fanned, and a passed ball sent Jake to second. Then came singles by Roush and Neale, an infield hit and a misplay by Johnston, the combination netting four runs.

Score 4 to 3 Victory Over Senators and Make Clean Sweep of Series.

WASHINGTON, Aug. 7.—A base on balls to Bush, Young's sacrifice and Cobb's single in the tenth inning today gave Detroit a 4 to 3 victory and a clean sweep of the series of three games with Washington. As a result Detroit gained half a game on Chicago and now is only five games behind the leaders, who split even in a double header at Philadelphia.

JERSEY CITY BREAKS EVEN.

Skeeters Shut Out Bingoes, 2 to 0, but Lose Second, 6 to 1.

Bill Donovan's Skeeters made an excellent start in the beginning of their final series with Chick Hartman's Bingoes yesterday and finished on the long end of the string in the preliminary battle of the double-header by a score of 2 to 0. After annexing the first half of the bill, however, the efforts of the Jerseymen seemed to relax in the final contest, and their opponents found little difficulty in turning the tables and coming out on top by the one-sided score of 6 to 1.

AUSTRALIAN TENNIS STARS REACH PORT

Brookes, Lycett, Thomas, and Patterson Hurry to Newport—Three Others May Come.

The Australian tennis team, which arrived yesterday on board the Adriatic, will be seen in action today in the doubles of the Newport invitation tennis tournament. The players arrived too late to play in the tournament yesterday, but left on a late afternoon train for Newport, R. I., after they had spent the afternoon at the Vandrbilt Hotel.

The team is made up of Norman E. Brookes, Randolph Lycett, R. V. Thomas and G. L. Patterson. They are fresh from their successful play at Wimbledon, England, where Patterson, the protégé and student of Brookes, defeated his mentor in the challenge round.

With the Australian team comes word that they may be joined by three other Australian players who have also won honors at the Wimbledon tournament, played recently. The men who may come are O'Hara Wood, R. W. Heath and Stanley Doust. Wood and Thomas won the doubles title, with Heath and Lycott as runners-up. The three players were contemplating coming to America when the others left Liverpool. If they come they will try to arrive in time for the national singles championship, or possibly the national doubles play. With the addition of these three players, the Australian team will be composed of the same players who swept the boards at Wimbledon, carrying off first honors in every department except the covered courts singles.

The team, which is known as the Australian Imperial Force Team, was eleven days in crossing. Not being able to get accommodations on the Aquitania, which was sailing with American troops from Brest, although the American Consul at London endeavored to cut the red tape, the players were forced to wait until the Adriatic sailed. Because of the dock strike at Liverpool this boat was delayed several days, and then her course was set over the southern route for Halifax. The team was undecided about leaving the ship at Halifax and coming to New York by rail, but receiving no word from American officials decided to remain on board.

"We never felt better and more fit than now," said Norman E. Brookes, who, with the late A. F. Wilding, came to America in 1914, and won the Davis Cup. "Although we have not touched a racquet since the Wimbledon tournament, we feel that the Newport doubles will serve as excellent warming up work, and help us get acclimated."

With this remark the team acted as one man in mopping their brows, and then individually declared that it was very warm. Both Lycett and Thomas served in the Australian Imperial Force, while Brookes and Patterson fought with the British Expeditionary Force, having gone to England to join. None of the four was wounded, although they were all in the thick of the fighting.

Americans are waiting with interest to see Patterson perform on the courts. This player defeated Brookes in straight sets in the challenge singles match at Wimbledon, and only lost one set in the entire singles tournament. His play since leaving Australia has been dashing, with a brilliancy that completely dazzled his highly rated opponents. Lycett took the mixed title, playing with Miss Elizabeth Ryan.

"There is a player of whom you Americans should be rightfully proud," said Lycett, in speaking of Miss Ryan's tennis ability. "I rate her as the best mixed doubles player in the world, not excluding Mlle. Lenglen. She has excellent form, and deeply impressed the tennis experts at the tournament.

"Mlle. Lenglen is without question the greatest woman singles player in the world, and will undoubtedly improve as she grows older. You know," he added, "that she is only 20 years old, but her playing against Mrs. Chambers in the final of the woman's singles showed rare judgment and still rarer tennis ability. The match was very close and was one of the most exciting of the entire play. The set score was 1-1, the games 6-5, and the point score 40-15, favoring Mrs. Chambers. Mlle. Lenglen won the necessary points to tie and then capture the game and then went through the match winning the succeeding sets."

Each player has ten racquets with him, securely done up in waterproof wrappings. The customs official peered into the cases through a slit he made in the top, and was satisfied that there were no smuggled gems hidden in the handles. Each racquet is encased in a cloth binding, wrapped with paper, and then each player's set is bound with tarred paper to keep out the moisture which ruins the strings.

On board the Adriatic was another Australian champion. It was Jack Donaldson, known as the "Australian Blue Streak," who holds the world's professional record for the 100-yard sprint. Donaldson was recently discharged from the British Army after four years' service. He will probably join the physical training staff of some American university. Donaldson set his remarkable time for the century, 9 3-5 seconds, at Johannesburg, South Africa, on July 26, 1911.

MURRAY EXHAUSTED BOWS TO KUMAGAE

TILDEN DEFEATS WILLIAMS

S. Howard Voshell Downs Another Californian, Griffin, in Spirited Match at Newport.

NEWPORT, Aug. 7.—S. Howard Voshell of Brooklyn, W. T. Tilden 2d of Philadelphia, Ichiya Kumagae of Japan, and William M. Johnston of California are the four semi-finalists of the Newport invitation tennis tournament as the result of today's matches on the courts of the Casino, and they will meet in that order tomorrow for the honor of competing in the final round on Saturday.

The big feature of the day's play was the defeat of the national champion, R. Lindley Murray, at the hands of Ichiya Kumagae, the match going to five terrific sets, scored at 3—6, 7—5, 3—6, 6—3, 6—3. Tilden caused a mild sensation by his easy victory over R. N. Williams 2d, with set scores of 6—2, 6—1, 7—5. Voshell triumphed over C. J. Griffin in the upper quarter and Johnston over Wallace Johnson in the lower, both matches being decided in four sets.

Murray was the victim of unfortunate circumstances in that he had to defeat N. W. Niles before meeting Kumagae, the encounter with the Bostonian, which ran to four sets, having been postponed because of yesterday's rain. In order to give the champion all the time possible for recovering his strength, it was arranged to stage his second match late in the afternoon, and as a result the contest dragged on until darkness was about to fall, with Murray eventually losing purely because of physical exhaustion.

It was a thrilling struggle from start to finish, and the crowd, although obviously in sympathy with the game champion for his splendid fight against big odds, was forced also to applaud the amazing shots which came repeatedly from the looping racquet of the little Oriental.

Murray ran into a lead of 3—0 before Kumagae scored in the opening set. The Japanese had a chance to equalize, however, when he broke through service, cutting down Murray's lead to 3—2, but lost it when his own delivery was upset again, a double fault and a net cord shot doing the trick. They exchanged serves up to 5—3, when Murray put the set to his credit, 6—3, with a love game.

Game Rally by Murray.

Kumagae had a 5—3 advantage in the second set, and was within a point of winning at 40—15 on his own serve, but Murray came back in courageous style, forcing his rival into errors for the tying points, and winning the game after set point had once more been called against him.

He made it 5—all on service, but Kumagae rallied in turn, won his own delivery, and then broke through for the set, 7—5, a double fault having a share in the disaster.

The champion, however, surprised his warmest admirers by winning another set, 6—3, by the most spectacular play before succumbing to the inevitable. The seven minutes' rest was of little help, and he was practically a physical wreck throughout the last two sets. In spite of his vanished endurance, however, Murray continued to battle with astonishing gameness, fighting for the ball with desperate gasps and nearly falling to the ground as he jumped from side to side for almost impossible volleys.

There could be only one result, however, and Kumagae, gradually wearing his rival down with steady driving, captured first one set and then the rubber by the identical scores of 6—3. It was a pitiful close to a combat which was gladiatorial in its intensity.

Tilden Wears Williams Down.

Playing against ex-Champion R. N. Williams, 2d., on the Grand Stand Court this morning, William T. Tilden, 2d., again produced the brand of tennis that wins tournaments. His methods were similar to those which he employed with such success against Washburn yesterday. Speed was his chief weapon in the first two sets, and he literally overwhelmed his opponent with fast and accurate driving, fore and backhand. In the third set, he changed to an undercutting attack, slicing the ball effectively to Williams's forehand, and running him around the court until he was weary.

The loser lacked control of his strokes in the first two sets, but in the final session, he was moving at top speed and the resulting rallies were of the most brilliant description. The errors of Williams were mostly typical, due to his anxiety to make every shot travel as close to the lines as possible. He was weak overhead, but otherwise seldom guilty of flagrant mistakes. The match produced the best and fastest tennis that has yet been seen in this tournament, and there was plenty of headwork mixed with the spectacular hitting.

Tilden broke through at the very start and had a lead of 2—0 before Williams succeeded in scoring love-game on service. Proceeding to 3—1 on his own delivery, Tilden secured a second break when the former champion missed a succession of bold attempts at placements. The server trailed at 30—40 in the next game, but saved himself with a remarkable back-hand lob, and pulled out the game with well-placed chops to the corners, 5—1. Williams served a love game, but could get no further against Tilden's powerful delivery. A shot by Williams into the net ended the session, 6—2.

Tilden began the second set by winning two love games, the first coming off his rival's service with a double fault. The games reported 3—0, with another break, Williams just missing the side line with a volley, and then knocking out a net-corder, resulting from Tilden's great back-hand get. The Philadelphian's fourth game came after he was in the hole, 15—40, on four successive serves. One was a clean ace, bounding high over the receiver's head; another came so fast that it could not be returned, and the other two were netted.

Williams broke into the score when Tilden netted and drove out successively after a sensational pull up from 40—15, seeming upset by a hovering ballboy near the barrier, but he promptly closed out the set at 6—1 by serving a love game containing another of his wonderful lobs to the baseline. The set point appeared against Williams after a remarkable exchange of short shots close to the umpire's chair, Tilden volleying straight across the court while running at full speed to cover his territory. Williams saved it once with a fine smash, but netted and smashed out after all for a 6—1 decision.

Tilden Gets Into Trouble.

Tilden was in trouble at the start of the third set, serving two double faults, the second bouncing off the net cord, but pulled out of danger with accurate chops which drove Williams into errors. After winning on service the 1916 title holder got his first break with a beautiful fast drive which Tilden could not volley backhanded. Hitting brilliantly Williams advanced to 3—1, with Tilden again serving successively for a 3—2 score.

The latter then began to find the lines with uncanny regularity, and, with a very lucky net corder mixed in, got past the Williams delivery and squared the set, 3—all. Another shot, right on the chalk of the base line, gave Tilden a lead of 4—3, and he broke through again for 5—3, with a love game. Dropping two more on the lines and finishing with a fine pass, after his opponent had made a marvelous backhand pickup.

The match should have ended with the next game, but, after getting a bad bound, Tilden grew careless and eventually allowed a break with a glaring double fault, Williams promptly tying up the set, 5—all, with a splendidly angled volley. Tilden won his service with a deuce game, after his lead of 40—15 had been outdone by another wonderful backhand shot on the part of Williams, and leading at 6—5, he went right after the match. One point came easily with a net corner, which Williams could not quite lift over the net, and it was love—30 when he fell full length in reaching backhanded for a fast drive. The ex-champion smashed out to end the crucial rally and when Tilden slipped one cleanly down the side of the court it was all over at 7—5.

First Set—
Tilden	4	4	0	4	4	6	0	4—26—6
Second Set—

Johnston Wins from Johnson.

William M. Johnston, for the second time during the week, ran into an opponent of the same name, without the "t," and Wallace Johnson, like the Bostonian, H. C., succeeded in taking a set from the Californian. It had been drizzling almost up to the time the match was started, and the heavy ground was exactly suited to the chopping game of the Philadelphian. By placing a low-bounding ball continually from side to side, he had Johnston completely demoralized at the start, running five straight games and eventually taking the opening set, 6—1. But this was the limit of the chopper's real opposition, for the 1915 champion began to drive the ball faster and faster, besides crowding the net whenever possible and angling off the comparatively soft undercut shots for clean placements. He quickly squared the match with a 6—1 session, and then went to victory with two more decisive sets, both scored at 6—3.

The point score was as follows:

W. F. Johnson	2	5	5	4	4	4	4—28—6
W. M. Johnston	4	3	3	2	1	1	0—14—1

W. M. Johnston	4	4	4	4	4	3	4—27—6

THIRD SET.

W. M. Johnston	5	4	8	4	4	4	2	4	4—39—6
W. F. Johnson	3	0	6	6	1	0	4	6	1—27—3

FOURTH SET.

W. M. Johnston	4	5	1	1	4	4	4	4	4—31—6
W. F. Johnson	1	3	4	4	2	1	0	6	2—23—3

Howard Voshell followed up his spectacular elimination of McLoughlin today with an equally impressive victory over another Californian, C. J. Griffin, dropping the second set at 7—5 after being in the lead, 5—0, but capturing the others in convincing style, 6—1, 6—3, 6—4. Griffin introduced a novelty by playing in his stocking feet throughout his sensational pull-up of the second session, having found his sneakers undependable for a footing on the slippery turf, but before the match was over he was glad to adopt the conventional spikes. Voshell won chiefly by outguessing Griffin at the net, using his sharp volleys to good effect after forcing the Californian out of position with fast-breaking serves or well-placed ground strokes.

Australians Arrive in Newport.

A number of doubles matches were played during the afternoon with the New England champions, Williams and Washburn, scoring decisively over the former national titleholders, McLoughlin and Bundy, at 6—4, 6—4, while Carl Fischer and Dr. P. B. Pawk sprang something of a surprise by defeating Beals Wright and A. S. Dabney, Jr., in straight sets, 6—3, 6—3.

The four Australians, Brookes, Patterson, Lycett, and Thomas, arrived here late this evening and will play in the doubles tomorrow, the former pair against Cragin and Rosenbaum and the latter against Fischer and Hawk.

GRESS WINS TENNIS MATCH.

Youngster Defeats Ross and Qualifies for Boys' Nationals.

Val Gress will represent the Forest Hills district in the boys' singles championships to be played at the West Side Club later in the month. He won the right by defeating Frank Ross in the elimination tournament for the district at the West Side club, 1-8, 6-2, 4-6, 6-2, 6-3.

Gress, a larger fellow than Ross, won his match as much by his superior endurance as by his superior skill with his racquet. Ross took the first set in easy fashion, but fell before his opponent's onslaught in the second set. Coming back in the third set, Ross was exerted to his utmost to win by the 6-4 score, and then stubbornly yielded the succeeding sets.

The junior final for the district will be played tomorrow between Cecil Donaldson and P. Vall.

WHITNEY UNCOVERS SENSATIONAL RACER

Special to The New York Times.

SARATOGA, N. Y., Aug. 7.—Harry Payne Whitney's Vexatious, a three-year-old filly, which had been sent to the post only once before, graduated from the maiden class here today with a surprising victory. This daughter of Peter Pan galloped away with the rich Alabama Stakes, $10,000 value, defeating Commander J. K. L. Ross's far-famed filly Milkmaid, which had won the Kenner Stakes here, defeating such good ones as Cirrus and Froglown.

The victory of Vexatious was surprising because very little was known about the filly. She was brought to the races only last Tuesday when she made her début in a mile race and ran second to Huttontrope. Vexatious never raced as a two-year-old because of a bad leg which kept her out of training. Trainer James Rowe worked patiently with the filly and got her into shape for a trial, which proved so satisfactory that he was willing to let her measure strides today with the one heretofore considered the best of her sex and age.

Milkmaid had come to be regarded as the coming champion among the three-year-old fillies. She had not only raced the best of her sex into submission, but she had won against some of the best colts in training. Though it was charged that a bad ride on Cirrus gave her the victory in the Kenner, the filly nevertheless had shown remarkable speed, despite the fact that there is nothing in her appearance to recommend her as a racer.

The Ross filly was considered such a certainty today that she was quoted at 3 to 5 and at times 1 to 2, while Vexatious was offered at 3 to 1, but was played heavily for the place, most of her fanciers conceding the victory to Milkmaid.

Vexatious had an advantage of twelve pounds in the weights, carrying 114 against 126 on Milkmaid, and this difference in the poundage told heavily on the favorite as the race was run. Vexatious was sent out in front at the very start and Ambrose opened up a gap of three lengths. Polka Dot, owned by P. A. Clark, went into second position, and Sande, on Milkmaid, was content with third, waiting for a time when he could rush up in the stretch. Highland Light and Jap, the only other starters, were trailing and never were contenders.

Vexatious made every post a winning one. She led quite easily into the stretch turn when Sande brought up the favorite and attempted to take the lead. Vexatious, however, was running easily and had never been extended. Ambrose urged her when he saw Milkmaid drawing near and the Whitney entry increased her lead to win by four lengths. It was evident that the weight retarded Milkmaid, for when she made one effort to come up and failed to catch the leader she could not again offer a challenge. Polka Dot finished third, twelve lengths back, with Highland Light and Jap bringing up the rear in the order named.

The value of the race to the winner was $7,265, which no doubt repays the owner and trainer for the patience exercised with the filly.

The defeat of Milkmaid was only one of a series of six upsets which sent the backers of favorites away in an unhappy frame of mind. Not a favorite was able to get past the judges' stand first, although most of them were played for their ability to run in a heavy track. The sun had come out and the course was dried out in spots, but was still heavy.

Wilfrid Viau's Camoufleur was another of the disappointments of the day. This son of Astronomer was the choice for the Pittsfield Handicap, which was run as the third race, but Camoufleur was forced to be content with third place, being defeated by Paul Connelly's Warsaw, which won by four lengths, and Rose d'Or, which took the place in a close finish with the favorite.

Fator, who had ridden a bad race on Poacher in the opening event, made up for it by the manner in which he handled Warsaw. Camoufleur was sent to the front at the start over the mile route, and Kummer kept him there until the last turn was reached, when Warsaw, which had come up slowly through the back stretch, raced into the lead in the final eighth and won handily. Camoufleur tired so badly that Rose d'Or was able to beat him in the last few strides.

DODGE DRIVES TWO VICTORS

CLEVELAND, Aug. 7.—J. L. Dodge of the Hollyrood Farm, Lexington, Ky., had a field day at North Randall today, furnishing the winners of the two feature events of today's Grand Circuit meeting. The card provided the most spectacular finishes of the season, exceptionally fast time being made in each heat and race.

Trotting the fastest two heats of the season for 3-year-olds, Dodge drove Periscope to the front in straight heats in the Championship Stallion Stake, valued at $9,465, the first futurity this year for 3-year-old trotters. Molly Knight was second, with the odds-on favorite, Brusiloff third.

Dodge set the pace in both heats, but Periscope was forced to stand hard drives to be returned the winner. The first heat in 2:07¾ set a season's record for juveniles.

In the $3,000 Plain Dealer Purse for 2:08 trotters the first heat went to Miss Perfection under strong handling by Dodge; Hollyrood Kate captured the following two heats and the race in rather easy fashion.

EKWANOK TEAM WINS CUP.

Special to The New York Times.

BENNINGTON, Vt., Aug. 7.—A. L. Walker, Jr., intercollegiate golf champion, finished in a tie this morning in the qualifying round of the Vermont State golf championship tournament with George McKee of Montpelier Golf Club with a card of 78. Walker was playing as a representative of Ekwanok Country Club. This afternoon Walker played Dr. Clark Burnham of Brooklyn, who also plays from Ekwanok, and playing a steady game, won by 8 up and 6 to play.

The Ekwanok team won the Governor McCullough cup, which is held by the club whose team gets the lowest aggregate in the qualifying round. Senior Champion William E. Truesdell of Garden City was a member of the Ekwanok team, and scored an 83. The other Ekwanok team members were E. W. Clark, 3d., of Philadelphia, with an 88, and Dumont Clark with an 88.

MRS. GAVIN WINS EASILY.

Favorites Are Victors in Shenecossett Golf.

Special to The New York Times.

NEW LONDON, Conn., Aug. 7.—Favorites in the Shenecossett Country Club golf championship came through with flying colors today and won their matches by even wider margins than yesterday. Mrs. W. A. Gavin had no trouble in disposing of Mrs. C. J. Ahearn of Dwight, Ill., by the rather one-sided score of 7 and 5. Another one-sided victory was that of Mrs. F. Bryan of Cranford, who revenged Miss Beatrice Lounsberry by defeating Miss A. E. Stumer of Ravinslee by 8 and 6.

The summary:

Championship Flight.—Mrs. J. B. Ryan, Cranford, defeated Miss A. E. Stumer, Ravinslee, 8 and 6; Mrs. Ronald Barlow, Merion Cricket, defeated Miss Glenna Collett, Providence, 9 and 8; Mrs. W. A. Gavin, South Shore, defeated Mrs. C. J. Ahern, Dwight, Ill., 7 and 5; Miss Elaine Rosenthal, Ravenslee, defeated Mrs. Ralph Hammer, Flushing, 2 and 1.

CONLEY ELIMINATED BY JESSE SWEETSER

Medalist in Siwanoy Golf Tournament Goes Out in First Round—Anderson Loses.

Jesse Sweetser of Ardsley nicely avenged himself for the defeat he suffered at the hands of G. L. Conley, Westchester champion, at Apawamis, by defeating the Westchester champion in the first round of match play for the Victory Cup over the Siwanoy links yesterday, winning by the decisive margin of 5 and 4. Conley was foredoomed to defeat by the fact that he won the medal in the qualifying round on Wednesday. Max Marston is the only golfer who can dodge the hoodoo that persistently dogs the footsteps of a medalist. Sweetser continued his good work in the afternoon by defeating W. H. Follett of Fox Hills, ending his play on the same green that marked the finish of his morning round, with the same margin of 5 and 4.

Reggie Lewis of Wykagyl, late of the Naval Reserve, furnished somewhat of a surprise by eliminating John G. Anderson of the home club, 3 and 2. Anderson was the favorite for the cup when Travers failed to present himself and Kirkby withdrew, but Lewis was shooting around the course in a way that recalled his form of three years ago when he made the best of them hustle. Ned Sawyer of Siwanoy breezed through two rounds easily, winning from E. P. Cobb, a clubmate, 3 and 2, in the morning, and defeating M. Townsend of Shackamaxon, 7 and 5, in the afternoon round.

Make Early Start.

Due to the fact that Conley and Sweetser were drawn together in the first round a large gallery turned out before the dew was off the grass to follow the golfers. Sweetser started as if he meant business, taking the first hole when Conley was short of the green on his second. He took the short third when the Siwanoy player failed to pitch to the green, but lost the fifth with three putts. Conley played the seventh hole the way Walter Hagen played it in the big tournament in 1916, which would ordinarily mean something good for the score, but here means that he put two tee shots out of bounds and lost the hole 6—4.

A long putt by Sweetser for a birdie 3 on the ninth left Conley 4 down at the turn. Conley won the tenth, but lost the eleventh and, coming to the decisive fourteenth green 4 down, he pulled his tee shot behind some trees. His second was in a trap, his third over the green, his fourth on—but too late, and he lost, 5 and 4.

The first hole of Sweetser's afternoon round with Follett was what might have been called a "humdinger." It is usual to encourage dubs at golf by telling them that they are getting nearer the hole at every shot, but Sweetser didn't even do this; he got farther away at each swing. Both he and Follett sliced their drives to the eighth green. Sweetser played first for the green through a rift in the trees. He miscalculated on a projecting hickory branch, however, and the ball rebounded some distance behind him. He hit it again, only this time a sturdy oak bough entered an objection, and once more the Ardsley player retreated. On the fourth he was short of the green, and on in 5.

Follett played mathematically. On his second shot he got half way from his starting point to the green, on the third he got half the remaining distance, ditto on his fourth, and by this time he was so close he miscalculated and hit so hard he actually did get on in his fifth stroke. Sweetser took three putts, and after a terrific struggle Follett went down in two, winning 7—8. After this they played fine golf, though Follett tossed away his chances on the greens, losing 5 and 4.

Lewis Versus Anderson.

The Lewis-Anderson match was very close to the turn, each winning only one hole. Both failed to make the short eleventh green, but Anderson went from the near trap clear over the green, chipped out short, missed a putt, and resigned in favor of the young Wykagyl golfer, putting him 1 up. By magnificent playing on the fourteenth Lewis increased this to 2 up, when it looked as though Anderson had the match squared. Anderson played par golf with a 4. Lewis hooked behind a row of trees, pitched high over them to the edge of the green, and holed his chip shot for a 3. Both were short of the fifteenth green, but Lewis holed his putt and Anderson failed, thus putting the Siwanoy player 3 down, and he lost 3 and 2 when the sixteenth was halved in 4.

Eddie Van Vleck of Greenwich won two matches in a style peculiarly his own. He was 5 down and 7 to play in his morning round against C. H. Paul of Gedney Farms, and then he won the next seven holes in a row, finishing 2 up. In the afternoon he defeated C. G. Comstock of Siwanoy 6 and 4, although on one hole he went to jump a stymie and holed his opponent's ball instead of his own.

KUPCHIK AND JAFFE EVEN.

Tied for Lead in Tourney for State Chess Title.

Special to The New York Times.

TROY, N. Y., Aug. 7.—After five rounds of the annual State championship tournament at the Chess Club of Troy, A. Kupchik and Charles Jaffe are tied for first place, each with a score of 3½ points to 1½ to his credit, and the issue rests upon the outcome of two games to be played in the final round tomorrow.

Kupchik had a comfortable lead, but lost his return game with Jaffe today through a blunder, costing a piece, when he had the game well in hand. Jaffe scored after forty-four moves. Kupchik had the white side of a queen's gambit declined, and, casting on the queen's side, set up a strong attack against the hostile king's position. In the midst of it, however, he went astray.

Jaffe also drew his second game with O. Chajes, a Ruy Lopez, after fifty-nine moves. Chajes, on the other hand, won a double Ruy Lopez from Bernstein in forty moves.

WHITNEY PLAYS KEEN GOLF.

Special to The New York Times.

SOUTHAMPTON, N. Y., Aug. 7.—A field of 125 players started in the annual invitation golf tournament of the National Golf Links of America today. As usual the majority of the field found this famous course a hard proposition to solve, so only two contestants turned in cards under 80.

The playing of Nelson M. Whitney of Audubon on this difficult course has aroused admiration. His game today was very consistent, as a study of his card will indicate. He holds the amateur record for the national course, having made a 72 in 1915. Mr. Whitney is champion of the trans-Mississippi Golf Association and also Southern champion.

On account of the large entry list the committee has added two sixteens, making five in all with the usual beaten eights. Four former amateur champions, Charles B. McDonald, H. J. Whigham, Findlay S. Douglas and Eben H. Byers, were contestants.

A tie at 86 for the first division was played off by Fred Snare, Havana; E. S. Knapp, Westbrook; Reginald Fincke, Mt. Kisco; C. N. Amory, Myopia, and Paul Lewis, St. Davids. Snare and Fincke had a four each at the first hole and Amory and Lewis five each, while Knapp holed out in six.

The pairings at match play for the first sixteen are as follows: Ward and Solley, Archibald McIlwaine and Snare, Mellon and Hyde, Brown and Byers, Whitney and Amory, Fincke and Moore, Carter and White, Littleton, Jr., and Sullivan.

The summary of the first division:

Greenock Club's Tennis Tourney.

The open tennis tournament of the Greenock Country Club in Lee is to be played today and tomorrow. The events consist of men's singles and doubles and women's singles. The winner of the men's singles will receive the Housatonic Valley Challenge Cup, which must be won three times to become the permanent property of the holder.

When the Stormy Winds Do Blow.

PLAYERS GO OUT, CLOSING THEATRES

"In calling this strike the actors did not take into consideration these boys and girls of the chorus, nor did they consider the inconvenience of the public. The striking actors are all players receiving two or three hundred dollars a week. They have no grievance against this management. We have played fair."

Turning then to the chorus, he asked: "Have you any grievance?" Shouts of "No!" came back.

"Have you not always been treated fairly by this management," he asked them, and cries of "Yes!" answered him.

A Premiere Put Off.

The two theatres in which Comstock & Gest are interested were both closed. One of these was the Princess, where the premiere of "Nightie Night" was to have taken place. Here only two or three members of the company appeared, and no notice was given the manager, Adolph Klauber. Francis Byrne, who was to have played the leading rôle in this piece, is an Equity member.

At "The Five Million," a Comstock & Gest production, the issue was in doubt until nearly 9 o'clock. At the box office tickets were sold until the last minute, although each prospective patron was informed that a strike might be called. The house was crowded when a brief announcement was made from the stage. Several members of the company stood at the rear while the manager addressed the audience, and greeted the announcement with laughter.

At the Astor Theatre Fay Bainter and Lester Lonergan were almost the only players who arrived to play their customary rôles in "East Is West," and a capacity audience was admissed.

The audiences which poured out of the theatres joined the throngs from other closed theatres and as late as half past 9 thousands of prospective playgoers surged up and down Broadway seeking amusement places which were still open. At 10 o'clock there was still a line waiting to buy standing room for the "Follies" at the New Amsterdam Theatre, which was one of the few houses permitted to operate.

At "Oh, What a Girl" the players who refused to play included Harry Kelly, Frank Fay, and Ignacio Martinetti, who have the three leading rôles. No strike was called at the Winter Garden, but one actor who walked out without orders was replaced without difficulty. At the Playhouse, where At 9:45" was prevented from being given, William A. Brady made an address to the audience attacking the Equity and its methods.

Other Theatres Crowded.

The result of the wholesale closing was, of course, that the eight or nine attractions which were permitted to play had capacity audiences and turned thousands of patrons away.

The problem of refunding money at the closed theatres, although apparently a simple one, was complicated by the fact that many people had purchased their seats from the speculators, paying various figures. One broker, when asked what he gave back to customers who returned tickets, replied, "Oh, I guess at it."

The launching of the long-anticipated strike followed an eleventh-hour attempt to negotiate with the managers, and an enthusiastic meeting of the Actors' Equity Association at the Hotel Astor, at which E. H. Sothern was greeted with hisses for suggesting a certain form of mediation, and strike resolutions and pledges were signed by nearly all of the 1,400 members present.

At this meeting, from which newspaper representatives were barred, Francis Wilson presided, and addresses were made by John W. Cope, E. H. Sothern, Frank Gillmore, Joe N. Weber, representing the musicians' union; Hugh Frayne, State organizer for the American Federation of Labor; W. B. Rubin, counsel for the labor union, and a representative of the stagehands' union.

Mr. Sothern, who had been in communication with the managers earlier in the afternoon, brought a suggestion for a meeting with the managers, to be attended by all the actors as individuals and not as Equity members. He was hissed and shouted down by the crowd.

$1,000,000 Pledged for Fight.

The representatives of the American Federation of Labor, it was said, pledged $1,000,000 for the carrying on of the strike, and said that immediate steps would be taken to enlist the stagehands and musicians. The representatives of these unions said that they felt certain that their members would be behind the actors if a strike were called, but said that the question would, of course, have to be voted upon by the locals.

The strike resolution, which was carried unanimously and then signed by more than 1,000 actors and actresses, read:

Whereas, In all contracts previously entered into between managers and actors, the Actors' Equity Association was recognised by the managers as the representative of the actors to be dealt with on behalf of the actor in all matters arising under such contracts; and

Whereas, The managers who are members of the Producing Managers' Association now definitely declare than they no longer recognise the Actors' Equity Association and will not deal with it, and will not arbitrate with it the differences which have arisen between manager and actor; and

Whereas, by so doing said members of said Producing Managers' Association have both broken and repudiated existing contracts between the managers and the actors; and

Whereas, many other equitable and moral reasons exist for this agreement; be it

Resolved, That we severally agree, each with the other, that until the Actors' Equity Association is recognised as the representative of the actor and until a satisfactory arrangement is made with it governing the working conditions of the actor, we will not perform any service for any manager who is a member of the Producing Managers' Association, or who refuses to recognize our association or issue its contract, either in plays now being presented or in plays which are now or may hereafter be rehearsed.

Sothern Fails as Mediator.

Following the strike vote Mr. Sothern again volunteered his services as intermediary, and it was agreed that he should carry the actors' ultimatum to the managers. Unless a favorable reply were received by 7 o'clock, the managers were to be informed, a strike would be called. All of the Equity members playing in current shows were asked to meet at a restaurant in Forty-fifth Street at 7 o'clock, when they would receive final instructions.

The meeting at the Astor did not break up until after 6 o'clock. In the meantime a committee of managers, including Sam H. Harris, John L. Golden, William A. Brady, Arthur Hammerstein, Arthur Hopkins, and George Broadhurst, waited in the offices of Mr. Harris for word as to the decision of the meeting. At 7 o'clock Mr. Sothern had not reached the office of Mr. Harris, and, failing to receive word, the strike was formally called. Francis Wilson, President of the Equity, said that Mr. Sothern had evidently given up all hope of averting a clash.

A committee was appointed by the actors to designate the plays which would be closed by strike order, but the identity of this committee was kept secret lest its members should be singled out for the particular disfavor of the managers. The original plan had been to call out only five or six shows, but as curtain time approached one attraction after another was added to the list, with the result that thirteen were eventually called.

At the offices of the Actors' Equity Association, following the strike, Frank Gillmore said the results had far exceeded his expectations. Nothing had been decided upon for the future, but it was inferred that the continued failure of the managers to meet the actors' demand would result in the closing of one company after another all over the country. New York City, which is the theatrical centre of the country, was the only territory affected last night.

William A. Brady, when shown a copy of the actors' resolution, branded it as "a malicious and despicable lie." The managers, he said, were not objecting to dealing with an organization of actors; their objections, he declared, were to the alliance of the actors with Harry Mountford and James William Fitzpatrick, whom he characterized as "professional agitators." The managers, he said, had held several meetings with the actors in an attempt to adjust all differences, and that following every meeting the actors had broken their word by giving information regarding the meetings to the newspapers.

The trouble between the managers and the actors began a few months ago, when the standard contract under which they had been operating expired, and negotiations were entered into for certain changes on both sides. After several weeks of negotiations the two sides were in agreement on all points except one—the question of payment for extra matinees given on legal holidays. On this point neither side was willing to give way, and the actors finally suggested that the point be arbitrated by William H. Taft, Charles E. Hughes, or others upon whom the actors and managers might agree.

The managers refused this offer and suggested individual arbitration with each actor as difficulties arose. Simultaneously they printed their own contracts, upon which no mention of the Actors' Equity Association was made. The actors then affiliated with the American Federation of Labor, since which time a strike has been an ever-present possibility.

Late in the evening the various managers began to make plans for the presentation of their attractions as usual tonight. In addition to the decision of J. J. Shubert to present the "Gaieties of 1919" with under-studies, it was announced by Selwyn & Co. that "The Challenge" would be played at the Selwyn Theatre tonight. Last night the calling off of the performance was made necessary by the defection of five actors, but it was said that they would be immediately replaced. Eugene Walter, the author, probably will play a part tonight. "Listen, Lester," at the Knickerbocker, is another attraction which will be played tonight in some form or other.

A persistent report late at night had it that Chicago would be the next scene of attack, and that a strike would be called there tomorrow if an agreement were not reached in the interim.

UNDERWOOD WILL APPEAL.

Erie President Found Guilty in Ferryboat Rule Case.

Frederick D. Underwood, President of the Erie Railroad, who submitted to arrest on a Staten Island ferryboat on Saturday to test the rule requiring all passengers to debark at the end of each trip, was found guilty on a charge of disorderly conduct yesterday by Magistrate Croak at New Brighton, Staten Island. Sentence was suspended.

Through counsel Mr. Underwood filed notice of intention to ask permission of the court today to appeal the case to a higher court.

His attorney declared that the rule requiring passengers to leave the boats at the end of every trip was not valid, for the reason that the rule, when was made by the Department of Plants and Structures, has never been approved by the Board of Estimate and printed in The City Record.

ALMEIDA HEADS PORTUGAL.

Violent Republican, Former Premier, Is Elected on Third Ballot.

LISBON, Aug. 5.—Antonio Almeida, former Premier and Minister of Colonies, was elected President of Portugal today by Parliament. The election took place on a third ballot, Senhor Almeida receiving 123 votes to 31 for other candidates. Thirteen members of Parliament abstained from voting. President-elect Almeida will take office on Oct. 5.

Antonio Almeida is 54 years old, and during the latter days of the Monarchical régime in Portugal, was considered one of the most violent Republicans, being imprisoned on several occasions in connection with alleged plots for the overthrow of the monarchy.

HOW TO ARGUE AND WIN.

99 out of 100 can argue to one who can argue and win. Yet upon this faculty more than any other depends the success of the business man or woman, salesman, lawyer, preacher, politician, and teacher. To win is a universal desire. Almost to make a sale, almost to win a case, almost to make a convert, brings—nothing!

In this book, by Grenville Kleiser, are definite suggestions on training the mind in accurate thinking and clear and effective statement. It is the outcome of many years' experience in teaching and imparts a knowledge of successful argumentation.

CONTENTS: — Introductory — Truth and Facts—Clearness and Conciseness—The Use of Words—The Syllogism—Faults — Personality—The Lawyer—The Business Man—The Preacher—The Salesman—The Public Speaker—Brief-Drawing—The Discipline of Debate—Tact—Cause and Effect—Reading Habits—Questions for Solution—Specimens of Argumentation—Golden Rules in Argumentation.

Weren't you wishing, just yesterday or the day before, that you could talk more convincingly? One of America's top-notch salesmen, Robert Ruxton, says of this book: "It can be perused and studied to advantage by those who speak and by those who write. To read the first chapter alone is an education in the basic principles of written presentation. This book is so pregnant with advertising principles that it should have an honored place on every business man's desk. I recommend its purchase to all who wish to discover how to argue and win." FINANCIAL MARKETS

A drastic decline of prices, such as occurred in yesterday's stock market, betokens extraordinary distress in the speculative situation, and this was emphasized by business in the last half hour. In this period bids for many industrial issues seemed to be scarce, with the result that offerings were thrown over without reference to quotations. Recitation of the fact that U. S. Steel declined 6⅝ points during the session is enough to picture a demoralized state of business. Some of the reasons back of the renewed decline were evident, others were only to be estimated with reference to what had gone before. The wide spread between consecutive prices reported on the ticker for certain of the more erratic industrial shares indicated that a great volume of stop-loss orders had been uncovered late in the day. Quite likely, the amount of such orders had expanded largely in the last month, after the market trend began to grow obscure, and once the recession had acquired speed they were eliminated with great rapidity. In the final line-up of the price list declines extending from 3 to 5 points were widely distributed, and particular stocks showed net losses of 10 points and more.

As a "shake-up" the day's result was effective in fulfilling the warnings against over-speculation which had been coming from responsible quarters for a number of weeks. The character of the selling seemed to show, however, that other holdings than those on an inadequate financial basis were let go, and one needed to look further than the surface of market occurrences to find the explanation. It did not lie in the immediate money situation, as demand funds were plentiful at 4½ and 5 per cent., and more time money was reported as offered than for several days past. It was evident in the comment of banking and brokerage offices from the start of business that, after one day of partial relief from concern over the railroad outlook, the financial community was again studying with close attention the railway workers' movement to nationalize the carriers, and the steps being taken to investigate rising commodity prices. The declarations of the Department of Justice against certain packing interests were received as a pointed indication that Government action to determine what prices ought to prevail was to be pressed without delay, and it was noticeable that the selling of stocks gained a fresh impetus after news came that the President was conferring with the committee recently appointed to inquire into the cost of living. Mr. Wilson's address to Congress on the subject will be awaited with keen interest today, inasmuch as the impression has prevailed all this week that it may contain recommendations which will have to do with the prices of various goods that lately have been the main source of large profits among some of the corporations.

The cotton market moved nervously throughout the day, declining with stocks in the afternoon. Considering both markets in the same light, the parallel changes of quotations all this week have denoted the presence of speculative forces in each which have become considerably upset by developments centring about economic facts. In quarters where a sane and gradual market movement had long been wished for, the reaction of Monday and yesterday was looked upon as a salutary process which would have beneficial results later. The belief that a satisfactory period of industrial activity lies ahead has not been altered by stock market occurrences, and the plan of the United States Rubber Company to return the common stock to a dividend basis reflects the situation in the rubber business in a way which any one may see.

Again, weakness in French rates marked the foreign exchange market, sight drafts getting as low as 7.83 to the dollar. A fairly good recovery occurred in the late afternoon, to 7.76. Offerings were still greatly in excess of the active demand. Sterling recorded an irregular movement without changing radically from the closing quotation the day before.

Select Conservative Investments

In these exceptional times even the most conservative investments yield unusually liberal returns. To obtain on your money an average yield of, say, 6%, you can keep well within the limits of conservatism. All the more reason, therefore, why you should be careful to avoid the pitfalls of unsound or untried enterprises, and exercise the utmost discrimination in selecting your investments.

TOPICS IN WALL STREET.

Reasons for Break Clouded.

For the most part there was no one who could ascribe any definite reason for the almost panicky decline in prices which occurred in the final hour of trading. People went from one to the other asking as to the news, but of actual developments there was nothing tangible. Of rumors there were plenty, as is always the case when a decline of such proportions occurs. One of these had to do with some mysterious sort of tax which was to be levied by the Government, presumably on food products. It was not explained, however, how an additional tax would help reduce the much-talked-about cost of living. The word tax, unexplained, is, however, enough to make Wall Street shy. What was undoubtedly a market factor was the impending address of President Wilson to a joint session of Congress today. There was fear that what he was to say might not be favorable marketwise. One rumor in connection with the forthcoming address was to the effect that a recommendation would be made that the pay of railroad employes be increased.

Market in a Turmoil.

Trading in the last hour was on a scale of about 3,500,000 shares a day. The volume was 700,000 shares, and values melted as stop-loss orders were caught. In many cases there were declines of a point to two points between sales, with support almost negligible. One house was credited with having sold 60,000 shares of Steel common in the final hour.

Money Rates Easy.

There was nothing in the call money market which could be described as untoward. Rates were easy, with plenty of funds in sight, and there was a great degree of activity in the time money market. For some time funds of this sort have been practically unobtainable, but yesterday the offerings were free. The liquidation, it was said, had greatly reduced brokerage loans.

Some Interesting Comparisons.

The selling wave, which swept almost everything before it in the last trading hour of yesterday's stock market, brought about price recessions which it had taken many days in the bull market of the first half of the year to gain. The following table shows comparative high and low prices of the year in a number of the more active issues, with the net change at the close yesterday:

	Year's High.	Y't'day's Low.	Net Ch'g y't'day.
U. S. Steel	115⅝	100⅛	−6⅝
U. S. Rubber	138⅝	118⅛	−9½
Baldwin Loco	124⅜	100	−7⅜
Marine Com	67⅜	53½	−5⅜
Chesapeake & Ohio	68⅜	56	−3¼
Southern Pac	115	95⅝	−3⅜
Reading	98⅜	78	−3⅜
Union Pacific	138⅜	124	−2⅛

Standard Rails Decline.

Declines in the railroad group while not so large as among the industrials were nevertheless great enough in the case of several issues to arouse comment. Some stocks approached close to their low for the year. Great Northern was off 2⅝ points, Pennsylvania was down 3½, New York Central, 3; Atchison, 1⅛, and Union Pacific, 2⅛.

Erratic Course by U. S. Rubber.

United States Rubber, which has been one of the speculative favorites during recent weeks, followed an erratic price course. The stock opened the day with a show of strength and moved up more than 2 points, but when the selling pressure came into the market on a pronounced scale there was a sharp decline, the price shading off rapidly. On sales of 1,300 shares the issue dropped 4 points, from 127 to 123, and on an additional 1,300 shares there was a decline to 120, or a break of 7 points on 2,600 shares. All of the reported good news which was to come forth from the meeting of the Directors of the company did not serve to give support. As a matter of fact the good news did develop after the market closed, provision for dividends on an 8 per cent. basis having been made.

U. S. Steel Under Pressure.

The net decline in United States Steel was 6⅝ points and this was pointed to as showing the weight of the selling. It is not often that a decline as great as this is recorded during one day. Steel opened well below the close of Wednesday and sagged steadily downward. The last forty minutes, however, saw Steel drop from above 103 to only a fraction above par.

Ore Shipments.

It is asserted that the strikes in the Northwest are beginning to interfere with ore shipments, a situation which if long continued would find reflection in the steel industry. Most companies, however, have supplies enough ahead to tide over any strike of ordinary proportions. Some of them have material on hand for as much as three months' operations.

Ticker Far Behind.

The stock ticker fell far behind the trading in the final hour yesterday, and quotations ran for slightly more than twenty-five minutes after the market closed. Only once before this year has such a run of the ticker been recorded.

Specialties Lose Ground.

Recent market favorites which attracted a large speculative following when they were steadily advancing were hard hit in the late selling yesterday. Among them were American Bosch Magneto, which closed for the day with a net loss of 6⅞ points; American Hide and Leather closed with a net loss of more than 6 points, American Woolen lost more than 10, and Central Leather lost 12 points. In the case of the leather issues the agitation in Washington for a drastic cut in the cost of all commodities continued to serve as a depressing market factor.

Wilson & Co. Shares Off.

Publication of the news that the Attorney General would bring suit against the packing companies brought about continued selling of Wilson & Co. shares in yesterday's stock market. The turnover was not particularly heavy, however, and gave but little evidence of broad liquidation such as that which caused the break in so many other stocks in the general list.

American Locomotive Rumors.

In spite of rumors which were circulated through the financial district yesterday that American Locomotive Directors may increase the dividend when they meet within the next week or so, the stock sold off in sympathy with the general liquidation in the last half hour of trading. As an offset to the dividend talk, attention was called in some quarters to the uncertain situation surrounding the financing of foreign Government railway equipment orders, which are said to be going begging in this market.

Pool-Support Reported.

Missouri, Kansas & Texas was pointed to as one issue in yesterday's stock market which was receiving substantial support. This stock, which has attracted a somewhat spasmodic speculative following in recent weeks, closed for the day with a fractional net decline. The sale of a block of 1,400 shares of the stock appeared on the tape early in the day and other substantial buying orders were attributed to pool activity.

A Wide Spread.

One item of interest yesterday was the wide spread between the bid and asked price on Union Pacific stock. The bid was printed as 117 on the stock ticker with the asked price being set down at 124. In the case of Texas & Pacific, one of the speculative issues which has moved over a wide range in the last few months, the tape showed only an offered price of 49. This was considered as a palpable error due to the rush at the close.

U. S. RUBBER PLANS INCREASE IN STOCK

Directors Urge Expansion to $100,000,000 First Preferred and $200,000,000 Common.

REPORT BUSINESS GROWING

Directors of the United States Rubber Company yesterday recommended that the capital stock be increased to $100,000,000 first preferred, and $200,000,000 common, and that the outstanding second preferred stock be retired. Most of this latter issue already has been acquired by the company, the amount outstanding being $403,600.

The present authorized capitalization is $120,000,000, divided into $70,000,000 first preferred, $10,000,000 second preferred, and $40,000,000 common. The aggregate capitalization is $99,425,700 outstanding, divided into $63,022,100 in first preferred, $403,600 in second preferred and $36,000,000 in common. Of the proposed capital increase it is intended to issue $36,000,000, thereby making the outstanding common capitalization $72,000,000. The additional capital increase will remain in the company's treasury for the present.

It is asserted in the announcement of the capital increase, which will be passed upon by the stockholders at New Brunswick, N. J., Sept. 9, that the new capital will be used to expand the business of the company, plans for this now being under way. In this connection, Samuel P. Colt, Chairman of the Board, said:

"The company is engaged in a business capable, on conservative lines, of large expansion, the tire business both of passenger vehicles and trucks being a notable example of this. For the last two years, the company has been unable to meet the demand for its tires, and notwithstanding its capacity has already been substantially increased, further construction has been authorized which will require in the neighborhood of $15,000,000 for its completion, and which will double the present capacity of the company for producing tires."

"The amount of outstanding common stock, as compared with the property of the company is relatively very small. The new issue of stock will be offered to common stockholders at par.

It was also announced that the common stock would be placed on an 8 per cent. dividend basis, beginning in October, the earnings of the company justifying this, in the opinion of the chairman of the board. It also was recommended by him that an extra distribution in stock or in cash, be made early in 1920 to common stockholders. Intimations of dividend action and other "good" news with relation to United States Rubber have pervaded the Street for some time, and much of the advance in the issue has been predicated on these. Yesterday the common stock sold as high as 137, but reacted sharply under heavy liquidation in the late afternoon.

During the last five years, the capitalization of the company has remained practically the same. In that period, the volume of business transacted has steadily expanded. In 1914, gross business amounted to $83,000,000. In the following year, $92,000,000 was reported. In 1916, the gross was $126,000,000; in 1917, $176,000,000, and in 1918, $215,000,000. The surplus of earnings for 1917 and 1918 was equivalent each year to about 30 per cent. on the common stock. The earnings for the first half of 1919, it is asserted, have been virtually the same as in the first half of 1918.

The indebtedness of the company was funded in 1917 into 5 per cent. long term notes. The total consolidated funded debt now outstanding is $67,907,000.

SEEKS BILLION TAX CUT.

Campbell Calls for Federal Expense Estimate So Framed.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, Aug. 7.—Chairman Campbell of the House Rules Committee, who asserts that he would like to have $1,000,000,000 worth of Federal taxation removed from the people of the country, today introduced a resolution calling on the President to submit by Dec. 1 an estimate of expenses for the next fiscal year, so framed that the huge sum indicated may be eliminated. The resolution reads:

"To the end that the cost of government and the amount of taxation may be reduced, be it

"Resolved, That in submitting estimates for the next fiscal year for the expenses of the Government, the President is hereby requested to submit to Congress, not later than Dec. 1, 1919, a statement showing:

"First—Such reduction of the estimates for expenditures for the fiscal year ending June 30, 1920, (exclusive of estimates for the national defense, pensions, and war insurance,) as will permit a reduction of taxes by the sum or at least one billion dollars annually.

"Second—The annual receipts of the Government from all sources for the fiscal years ended June 30, 1910, to June 30, 1919, inclusive, together with an estimate of the revenues and income from all sources for the fiscal years ending June 30, 1920 and 1921, respectively.

"Third—The annual expenditures of the Government for all purposes for the fiscal years ended June 30, 1910, to June 30, 1919, inclusive, and the estimated expenditures for the fiscal year ending June 30, 1920."

AUTUMN HATS TO BE SIMPLE

There was a strong tendency toward simplicity at the Autumn Promenade of the Retail Millinery Association of America, which was held at the Hotel Astor. The show was the most elaborate that has been given by the association.

France and America vied with each other in the displays, and the designers from both countries appear to have had the inspiration simultaneously to turn to the Oriental artists of the olden days for suggestions—only suggestions—for the ideas are cleverly concealed under the cloak of simplicity.

There were large hats, small hats and medium sized ones, but in no case were they extreme, and the chief tendency seemed to be toward irregularity. This was particularly true of the picture hats.

Feathers were much used as trimming, but were never permitted to rise above the crown of the hat, and in most cases drooped off the brim well over the shoulder. The toques were rich in hand broidery, and the most unusual trimming for the street hat was an ornament made of monkey fur rising eight or nine inches at the front of the crown.

The greatest surprise was in headgear for evening. The designers decree that the woman must have her head well covered, and wide bands of tulle or tinsel finished with birds of paradise were shown, most of them with a filmy crown. The stockingless craze now sweeping Paris was introduced at the show, but did not cause much of a stir.

COTTON FOLLOWS STOCKS IN TUMBLE

Market Has Little Support and Drops 130 to 140 Points Below Previous Closing.

TRADE SHOWS UNEASINESS

There was another sharp break in the cotton market yesterday, future contracts selling from 130 to 140 points below Wednesday's closing quotations. This was attributed in large part to selling by Wall Street interests when the sharp break in the stock market came in the late afternoon, although the belief seemed to prevail that the President's message to Congress on the high cost of living may contain suggestions which will not exempt cotton from a general price cut. Rumors, however, were prevalent, and served to add to the general uneasiness, and the gains of the previous day were all wiped out.

Future contracts opened from 2 to more than 30 points down, and, while the market was somewhat erratic in the morning trading, Southern selling and hedge sales by local spot houses were reflected almost immediately, as there was little evidence of the support which stiffened prices in the preceding session. In fact, the only apparent buying power in the late afternoon came from short covering operations.

Cables from Liverpool indicated that the market there was firm, with a fair volume of trade buying, but this had little local effect.

What the President will suggest to Congress as a means to decrease the cost of living was the chief gossip of the cotton trade, and there were but few instances where anything other than a gloomy attitude could be found. Continued weakness in French exchange was also a contributing feature.

In the big decline which came soon after the break in stock market prices October contracts sold down to 30.80, December touched 31, January futures were quoted as low as 30.90, and March contracts dropped to 30.95. Recoveries before the close ranged from 5 to 35 points.

SHIP LINE TO LATIN AMERICA

Julius Klein Says United States Plans Closer Relations.

SANTIAGO, Chile, Aug. 7.—The United States Government is considering a proposal to create a transportation system to the commercial centres of South America, according to Julius Klein, Commercial Attaché of the American Embassy at Buenos Aires.

The American Government, Mr. Klein said, is greatly interested in the South American markets and recognizes the need of a better knowledge of each other by the peoples of the United States and of the South American republics as a means of developing commercial relations.

To Learn Interborough's Condition.

It was learned in the financial district yesterday that there will be a preliminary meeting of the Interborough-Metropolitan 4½ Per Cent. Bondholders' Protective Committee early next week to consider a brief report prepared by utility engineers on the present condition of the Interborough Rapid Transit Company. Just what the report will show could not be ascertained, but from the remarks of Theodore P. Shonts, when the property was placed in the hands of a receiver early this year, and statements made from time to time by other local traction managers, it is generally believed that it will show that increased revenue is a vital necessity for the company.

If You Were Captain of a Ship—

Navigation is an exact science. So is industry. Yet in setting sail on commercial seas most of us pursue a course as aimless as a sailor in a rowboat without oars.

Hit-or-miss methods in industry are as out of date as the caravels of Columbus beside the steamships of today. Certain factors govern the success of any industrial enterprise, chiefly the nature of the product, its mechanical practicability and its commercial worth. Upon these points revolve its value as an investment, and what methods to pursue for economical development and production.

CITY CLUB INDORSES REFORMS IN TRANSIT

CITES BOSTON'S EXPERIENCE

Would Consolidate All Companies, Terminate Leases, and Change Franchises.

The suggestions of Public Service Commissioner Lewis Nixon for improving transit, made public on Monday, have been partly indorsed by the City Club. Mr. Nixon, among other things, suggested that the companies could be placed upon a sound financial basis by a sliding scale of fare.

But the City Club, in a statement issued with a letter sent to Mr. Nixon, says it does not agree that an increase in fare beyond 5 cents promises real relief from the present "unfortunate conditions" and that:

"This conclusion was reached by the club as the result of an extensive examination of the situation here and in cities which had permitted increased fares and was expressed in the club's report of Jan. 24. The lapse of six months with the experience of Boston and other cities does not tend to shake this conviction."

The letter, which is signed by Nelson S. Spencer, the club's President, says in part:

"The papers quote you as favoring a solution somewhat similar to that suggested by the Club, similar at least to this extent, that you believe it necessary before a proper solution can be arrived at, that all of the companies should be consolidated, leases should be terminated and perpetual franchises should be changed to indeterminate franchises and that the value of the properties should be agreed upon as between the companies and the city.

"It seems reasonably clear from the Boston experience that an increase in fare disproportionately decreases traffic, and does not secure a sufficient increase in revenue and offer a practical solution. We desire to call to your attention two suggestions we made of reducing operating costs, namely:

"A. To cancel paving and special charges.

"B. To permit the discontinuance of certain lines or parts of lines, and the reduction of service on other lines.

"The latter suggestion is possible only under the condition of a consolidated system.

"The situation is undoubtedly serious and something must be done to bring relief, and we sincerely hope that such measures as may be adopted will look toward a permanent solution which will better our service, and at the same time continue a basis of fare which will tend widely to distribute our population."

Accompanying the letter is a copy of the club's suggestions in a communication to the Board of Estimate in January.

Principal and interest payable at the office of Brown Brothers & Co., New York, the Fiscal Agents of the Loan, in gold coin of the United States of America of or equal to the standard of weight and fineness existing on July 1st 1919.

Payable without deduction for any Danish Governmental or municipal taxes or other Danish taxes present or future.

The Loan is to be repayable, by means of yearly payments of $750,000 in United States gold coin, to be made in the year 1925, and in each year thereafter during the life of the Loan. Such payments will constitute the sinking fund of the Loan, and are to be applied on July 1st 1925 and each July 1st thereafter to the redemption at par of bonds whose numbers are to be determined by lot.

Copenhagen, the capital of Denmark, is the chief seaport and leading commercial City of the Kingdom. Situated on one of the largest harbors of Europe at the entrance to the Baltic Sea, it holds a strategic position for world trade. The City has by far the most important Free Port in Scandinavia an advantage of much consequence in the commerce of Northern Europe. From 1895 when the Free Port was established to 1913, the last full year before the war, the annual tonnage entering Copenhagen increased from 860,096 tons to 1,801,299 tons. The population of the City is 550,000. This is nearly one-fifth the population of the entire Kingdom.

Loans of Copenhagen have always been held in high favor among European investors. In normal times these loans were issued at rates of interest of 3½% and 4%. The total debt of Copenhagen including the present issue is approximately $89,879,200. The debt of the City has increased relatively little during the entire war period. We are advised that no other foreign loan will be issued by the City within one year.

TO INVESTIGATE INSURANCE FUND

Miles M. Dawson Appointed to Make Actuarial Examination of Insurance System.

TO HOLD PUBLIC HEARINGS

Announcement Is Made by J. F. Connor, Special Commissioner Under the Moreland Act.

The actuarial investigation of the State Insurance Fund has been ordered by Governor Smith. The Governor has authorized the appointment of Miles M. Dawson, who assisted Charles E. Hughes in the insurance investigation conducted by the Armstrong Committee in 1906, as special counsel and investigator under the Moreland Act.

The announcement was made yesterday by Jeremiah F. Connor, who was named by Governor Smith several months ago a Special Commissioner under the Moreland Act to investigate the workings of the Workmen's Compensation system in this State, including the administration of the State Insurance Fund, and of labor laws generally.

Mr. Connor has already made two preliminary reports to Governor Smith, one was in relation to the direct settlements between employers or casualty companies insuring them and injured workmen, in which it was stated that the workmen under such settlements had been defrauded out of large amounts to which they were entitled under the law. The direct settlement clause was inserted in the Compensation Law during the first year of Governor Whitman's administration. The other, in relation to the State Insurance Fund, which is being administered by Professor F. Spencer Baldwin, called attention to irregularities in the administration of the fund and urged an examination of it by a recognized actuary.

Mr. Connor said yesterday that as soon as Mr. Dawson has had time to go over certain figures related to the State Insurance Fund, public hearings would be begun in this city. The first hearings in all likelihood will be held early in September.

Mr. Dawson took an active part in the drafting of the Workmen's Compensation Act. He has just completed an examination and audit of the State Insurance Fund of Pennsylvania and the State Insurance Fund of Ohio.

The work of laying tracks in the tunnel of the Fourteenth Street-Eastern District line of the dual system of rapid transit is expected to begin within ten months, and shortly thereafter this line, one of the most important in the city, will be ready for operation. Yesterday the tunnel under the East River was holed through by Transit Construction Commissioner John H. Delaney, who made the statement as to the time when the line would probably be ready for operation.

BUTTER AND EGG MARKET.

BUTTER.—Receipts yesterday, 13,655 packages. Prices fairly sustained on all grades of creamery, with moderate trading. Some new export business, mostly at 52c for creamery firsts. EGGS.—22,159 cases. Arrivals continue liberal, hot weather defects are very general, and a large part of the supply is running of decidedly poor quality. The scarcity of really high grades leads to a maintenance of values for such, so that the full range of prices is without quotable change, although a greater part of the supply is falling into lower grades than heretofore and the average of sales is materially lower. Under grades are in burdensome accumulation and are pressing for sales at reasonable offers. There has been some considerable movement in storage eggs under pressure and a willingness to accept comparatively easy prices, but the sales reported are within a range of previous quotations. Nearby white eggs are rather liberal and there is an accumulation of average prime and lower qualities pressing for sale, with prices in buyers' favor. Most receivers say they have no surplus of strictly fancy new-laid hennery stock free from hot weather defects, but others have an accumulation even of their best marks, and sales of these are being made below their usual place in the range of quotations. Rather a liberal offering of California whites and only a very limited movement in the range quoted. WHITE UNION PROTESTS STOCK YARD GUARDS

Threaten Strike in Chicago Unless Militia and Police Leave —5,000 Already Out.

Nearly 5,000 white employes left their work today as a double protest against the presence in the yards of guards and the readmittance to the yards of colored workers.

The negroes had been away from their jobs for ten days, due to the South Side race rioting. Upward of 3,000 colored men came to work, about one-fifth of the number employed. While there was a difference in statements as to the cause of their walk-out against negroes, it was most generally stated that there is no color antagonism, but, rather, a protest against the employing of non-union colored men.

The colored men were protected by a heavy guard of police, deputy sheriffs and militiamen.

According to John Kikulski, organizer for the Federal unions, the men object to going on with their work with "a Boy Scout and a bayonet right behind them." He said that the colored men who had reported for work were non-union; that the union colored men have not returned to work as a protest against the military and police guard.

Joseph Burns, General Superintendent for Swift & Co., said the packers have no control over the guards and are without authority to ask their withdrawal.

ALL TO MRS. HAMMERSTEIN.

Impresario's Will Ready for Filing —Only 166 Words.

The will of Oscar Hammerstein, which was prepared for filing yesterday at the office of Edward Lauterbach, leaves everything to his wife, Mrs. Emma Hammerstein, it was stated, and appoints her executrix to serve without bond. The will consists of 166 words, and disposes of an estate estimated in the petition at "more than $5,000."

While the impresario was worth more than $1,000,000 at the time of his greatest success in producing operas, the value of his property is now problematical. He owned an equity in the Rialto and Republic theatre properties which is now in litigation due to the fact that the properties involved are in a deed of trust made by Mr. Hammerstein for his first wife, the late Mrs. Malvina Hammerstein and his two daughters.

*Voting Trust Certificates.

For information regarding the above Preferred Stock (to be issued by a new company succeeding the present Austin, Nichols & Co., Inc.) we refer to a letter dated August 1, 1919, from Mr. Harry Balfe, President of the existing company, who is to be Chairman of the Board of the new Company. Copies of said letter should be obtained from the undersigned. Mr. Balfe has summarized some of the statements in his letter as follows:

The company ranks as the largest wholesale grocery concern in the United States, the business having been established some 64 years ago.

The position of the business is being greatly strengthened by acquisition of the stock of The Fame Canning Co. and control of Wilson Fisheries Co., providing an assured supply of high quality canned goods, and by the addition of the "Certified" and other grocery product brands popularized by Wilson & Co.

Consolidated sales for the last fiscal year were approximately $38,000,000.

Consolidated statement of total net assets, including new cash working capital now being provided and including earnings of current year to date, show the equivalent of about $160 per share for the new Preferred Stock, the net quick assets alone being over $107 per share. This is exclusive of trade names, brands, etc.

Consolidated net profits (including those of the canning and fisheries business and the net results derived from the sale of "Certified" and other grocery lines for 1918 alone) after depreciation and before allowance for Federal Taxes, based on independent audits, for last three fiscal years, averaged $1,378,947 per annum, these net profits for the last fiscal year being $1,542,284.

Consolidated net profits for the current fiscal year, before allowance for Federal Taxes, are conservatively estimated at $1,650,000 and after estimated Federal Taxes, at $1,310,000 or about 3.40 times the annual dividend requirements on the new Preferred Stock.

The company is not to create any mortgage on its real estate or equipment without the consent of at least two-thirds in amount of the outstanding Preferred Stock.

A cumulative sinking fund for the purchase or redemption of the Preferred Stock at not exceeding 115 and accrued dividends is to be created by setting aside annually from profits on March 1st, commencing with 1921, a sum equal to 3% of the aggregate par value of the Preferred Stock issued.

Application will be made to list the Preferred and Common Stock on the New York Stock Exchange.

Messrs. Price, Waterhouse & Co., Public Accountants, have examined the books of the various constituent companies for the last fiscal year and Messrs. Kelly, Gray & Co., Certified Public Accountants, have audited the books of Austin, Nichols & Co., Inc., for the past three years.

The legal proceedings in connection with the issue of stock are being passed upon by Messrs. Cravath & Henderson and Messrs. Hornblower, Miller, Garrison & Potter.

Delivery may be made in the form of interim receipts which will, by their terms, be exchangeable for stock certificates "when, as and if issued."

A copy of the full provisions covering the rights and preferences of the Preferred Stock will be furnished as soon as available, and reference thereto is made for all details.

We offer the above Preferred Stock, subject to prior sale, "when, as and if issued and received by us,"

At 98 and accrued dividend

THINKS LABOR CRISIS WILL SOON PASS

Lord Rothermere Predicts Great Improvements in the Course of a Year.

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

LONDON, Aug. 7.—Lord Rothermere, who is regarded as an authority on financial and industrial conditions, said today he was not pessimistic regarding the outlook for Great Britain in spite of numerous strikes and labor troubles.

"We are going through the teething process after the birth of a new era," he said. "There are some dark days before us but in twelve months' time the storms will have been weathered and England will commence to improve her position financially and commercially. There are signs now among the working classes that they are getting tired of bossism by their leaders, and there also is trouble brewing between unions. This is shown by the failure of the police strike to paralyse the industrial life of the country. If it had occurred three months ago the unions would have come out and supported them.

"The trouble with the Yorkshire miners in my opinion is that the leaders of their union are against the leaders of the general miners' union. There is no doubt in my mind there will be a general decrease in productions all over the world. The United States with all her vast resources will suffer because of the shortage of labor, which, I am informed, is leaving the country in thousands because they cannot have their light wines. There will be a shortage of some articles of food in England, but we shall be all right again when we get ships enough to transport products from Canada, Australia and the Argentine.

"The situation is bad here through congestion at the docks and warehouses in London and Liverpool. They are filled with thousands of tons of war supplies, and why the Government does not dispose of them I do not know. If this were done there would be ample storage space for the cargoes of the ships which are waiting to unload.

"America will probably send us less foodstuffs in the coming Winter because of the agitation going on over there about high prices, but it is unlikely that the Government at Washington will attempt to stop the farmer from sending his supplies to the world's markets."

"Do you think there is any danger of Great Britain going bankrupt, as has been predicted in some quarters?" he was asked.

"No," said Lord Rothermere, speaking emphatically. "If England goes bankrupt the whole world will go, too, including the United States. We shall have some bad times, but there is no danger of the country being ruined financially as there are too many important interests involved."

Strikes Continue.

LONDON, Aug. 7 (Associated Press.)—There is virtually no change in the labor situation tonight. The strikes of bakers and Yorkshire miners are still unsettled, but the railway position in London is resuming its normal condition. The situation at Liverpool is greatly improved, but the tramway strike continues and there is a great scarcity of bread.

It was announced in the House of Commons today that for the week ending July 26 the coal output was nearly 50 per cent. under the previous average.

Will Hold Corset Evening.

A "Corset Evening" will be given in the auditorium of the Bush Terminal Sales Building next Wednesday, Aug. 13, at 8:30 o'clock. The program will include a talk by Miss Edith Burtis, formerly fashion editor of The Ladies' Home Journal, on the "Evolution of the Corset and Underwear Review will given on live models. A. J. Haire of The Corset and Underwear Review will speak on "Turn-overs in Your Corset Department." An informal discussion of corset styles, the market situation and other trade topics will be held. The meeting will be open to the trade.

Russia to Restrict Fur Exports.

Russia has placed stringent restrictions on the shipment of furs from that country, according to advices received by the Metropolitan Fur Exchange, and as a result it is thought that the present high prices of furs will be driven even higher. Some large consignments were expected from Russia, and, if they fail to be received, the present shortage of skins will be aggravated. The Exchange expects to have $1,000,000 worth of furs to offer at its auction which takes place on Aug. 19.

Extending Use of Knitted Goods.

One of the chief lines along which the expansion of knitted goods is being conducted at present, it was pointed out yesterday, is in the creation of new fields for the use of these fabrics. Manufacturers are now busy planning gowns for next Spring, which will be made of knitted materials. Formerly the manufacturers confined themselves to producing strong and durable sweaters, but now they are combining style with utility and designing a variety of garments, opening new and profitable fields.

American Woolen Co. Opening.

The American Woolen Company yesterday opened Spring 1920 lines. They were restricted to fancies and no staples were shown. As reported in this column, allotments were made on a basis of 10 per cent. of the usual quantities taken by buyers. The demand for goods was such at the opening that the company was understood to have very little of its small offering left at the close of the day's business. The following price ranges occurred in the departments opened: Department 2, from $2.25 to $4.50; Department 3, from $1.45 to $4.77; and Department 7, $3.50 to $6.50.

Talk of Collar Increases Again.

While there have been some reports to the effect that collars are to see another increase on October 1, representatives of some of the leading collar manufacturers were not prepared to say yesterday whether such advances would come. The sales manager for one house stated that it is quite natural to think of increases under present conditions, but that as far as collars are concerned everything will depend upon the future state of the cotton goods market. The last advance on collars was made effective July 1 when the price rose from $1.90 to $2.10 a dozen.

Coat and Suit Merger Planned.

Several of the largest houses in the coat and suit industry are planning a merger, it was reported yesterday, that will give this city the biggest company of its kind in the world. The houses mentioned in the report not only lead the trade at present in the manufacture of various styles of women's garments but also have extensive retail interests. R. Sadowsky, whose name has been connected with the new enterprise, was not prepared yesterday to make a statement in regard to the reported merger. "It is not yet the proper time to make an announcement," he said, "but you might say that I have very large plans in view, which I prefer to discuss later."

Men's Neckwear to Go Higher.

Unless something occurs radically to change the situation, it was said yesterday, it will be impossible for manufacturers of the so-called popular priced neckwear for men to offer Spring lines with the cheapest item costing the retailer less than $12 a dozen. In the "good old days" the average moderately priced line had in it ties that sold as low as $2.25 a dozen. Tremendous business was done on numbers priced at $4.50. The holiday lines, it was further said, will have $8 a dozen goods as their cheapest. While the rise is due to the increased cost of production the manufacturers say that the biggest factors in it are the sharp advances that are taking place in the silks.

Gray Goods Still Dull.

Reports from the local gray goods market yesterday indicated little change in the situation. One of the leading commission firms had not received a single inquiry for any kind of goods at 2:30 P. M., which just about established a "quiet" record with them. Some inquiry was reported for the lighter sheetings, which appear to be wanted for bag purposes, but no great amount of business was put through on them. As for printcloths, first hands were again out of it. Second hands were said to be selling goods at any "reasonable" price buyers were willing to pay, and there were unconfirmed reports of sales, for August delivery, of 38½-inch 64-60s at 17½ cents. Similar shipments of 39-inch 68-72s and 38½-inch 60-48s were reported sold from the same sources at prices a quarter to a half-cent below recent second, hand-levels.

Raw Silk Prices Firmer.

The Yokohama raw silk market has recovered quite a little of the ground lost in the recent slump. Late cables tell of a gain of 30 yen per picul in the price of Sinshiu No. 1, which puts it at 2,270 yen. Shipments of Japanese silk to this country during July totaled 24,000 bales, against 500 bales sent to Europe in the same period. Stocks on hand at Yokohama are placed at 15,000 bales, against 14,000 bales at this time last year. Canton is reported firm at unchanged prices, and the same is largely true of Shanghai. Milan is very firm, and advancing under the influence of good buying for both American and European account. Lyons continues to improve. The local market is quiet, but steady. Prices are holding their own in spite of the labor situation at Paterson.

GUARD PLANS FIGHT ON SERVICE BILL

Berry, in Statement, Says Branches Will Be Formed in Every State.

ASSAILS MILITIA BUREAU

The Executive, Legislative and Law Committees of the National Guard Association of the United States, after being in session in the Seventy-first Regiment Armory since last Monday, adjourned, subject to the call of the Executive Chairman, yesterday. The main result of the conference was the unanimous decision of the Guardsmen to fight, with all the means in their power, the enactment into law of the Chamberlain-Kahn Universal Service Military bill, which they denounced at Tuesday's conference as the "swan song of the General Staff."

Adjutant General Charles W. Berry of this State, who presided, issued a statement following the adjournment, in which he said that the association will organize for the fight on the bill. Headquarters will be established in this city and branches in every State. The association is now drafting a military program of its own which will be urged as a substitute for the Chamberlain-Kahn bill. This program will be made public within the next few days.

General Berry denied that the association is in any way opposed to universal service. As a matter of fact, he said, the association is whole-heartedly for the universal principle, but it insists that the principle shall be developed in conjunction with the National Guard of the country.

Adjutant General Berry's statement follows, in part:

"It must be emphasized that the Chamberlain-Kahn bill conscripts our citizens for service in the Regular Army in time of peace, and that the conference is absolutely opposed to such conscription.

"The policy of the National Guard Association as to universal service is set forth in the resolution adopted at the convention held last May in St. Louis, which resolution reads: 'Resolved, That universal military training is a necessary step toward adequate national preparedness and for the proper development of the citizen soldiery of the nation; and we affirm that it can best be developed in conjunction with the National Guard.'

"When the National Defense act was enacted it contemplated an existing organization, which organization, under the interpretation of the act by the Judge Advocate General's Department of the army, was wiped out of existence by being drafted into Federal service. The National Defense act contains no practical provisions for the reorganization of the National Guard, and so that the National Guard may exist while numerous service bills are being discussed and considered a number of immediate amendments will be necessary.

"Even more important than the amendments is the question of obtaining reasonable co-operation from the Militia Bureau at Washington, which is officered exclusively by Regular Army officers who are apparently without experience with, or understanding of, the National Guard problems and whose ideas are based solely upon the theory of the General Staff as to what is necessary under war time conditions, without any regard to the maintenance, in time of peace of forces in small communities, or without regard to existing conditions in armories throughout the United States as to the handling and housing of troops. The opinion of the conferees was unanimous that the Militia Bureau was impeding and hampering the reorganization of the National Guard."

MARCH DEFENDS ARMY PLAN

WASHINGTON, Aug. 7.—The permanent military policy recommended by the War Department, involving, under revised estimates, a standing peace army of 576,000 and universal military training for youths of 19 years of age, would cost the country $900,000,000 a year, General March, Chief of Staff, told the Senate Military Sub-Committee today. General March was unable to conclude his statement today, and will appear again tomorrow. Secretary Baker will present his views to the committee next week, and General Pershing and other experts later.

Of the $900,000,000 which the program would cost, General March said, $798,-660,000 would be required for the upkeep of the proposed standing army, while three months' intensive training for 19-year-old youths would cost $94,066,500 annually. He estimated the per capita cost for this training at $144.75.

The Chief of Staff asserted that the present time was most appropriate for inauguration of a system of military training, inasmuch as military camps were in readiness over the country, and also the necessary equipment.

In response to questions by various Senators, General March said that youths subject to military training under the bill would not be subject to service in case of a declaration of war without further legislation by Congress. He also said it was proposed to provide three distinct training periods of three months each in order not to disturb industrial and educational conditions any more than necessary.

SUMMING UP STARTS IN FORD LIBEL SUIT

Special to The New York Times.

MT. CLEMENS, Mich., Aug. 7.—The jurymen in the $1,000,000 libel suit of Henry Ford against The Chicago Tribune started on the last five days' period of their three months' labors today, when they listened to the first address in the summing up of the case.

The day's arguments were between William Lucking, Jr., member of the firm representing Mr. Ford, and Weymouth Kirkland, representative of The Tribune's Chicago counsel.

Mr. Lucking declared The Tribune's reference to Henry Ford as an anarchist to have been malicious, false, and defamatory, and said it has been circulated in 400,000 papers and was "seared in the minds" of more than a million persons.

The Tribune, he said, could escape liability only by proving the charges true. He declared The Tribune had produced no proof that its statements were true, and he asked the jurors to consider what the million and a half readers of The Tribune thought was meant by the expression, "Ford is an anarchist."

"There are only two libels which can be alleged," said Mr. Kirkland in opening for the defense. "The first, that Henry Ford is an ignorant idealist, which is proved by his peace ship, by his remarks on the sinking of the Lusitania approving an imaginary vote of five small boys that the passengers had no business on the ship, and by Mr. Ford's own testimony on the witness stand.

"The second is that he is an anarchist and we shall be able to show you where the evidence proves that. A man who contributes to make the Government inefficient is an anarchist. A man who follows the teachings of well recognized anarchists is an arch anarchist. A man who attempts to interfere with the Government in putting down anarchy is an anarchist. Henry Ford comes in every class. If he had said in 1917 what he said in 1915-1916 he would be in Leavenworth."

Oscar Lungenhausen will probably take up the argument for Ford Friday morning.

OSTRICH FEATHERS SOLD.

Second Auction of the Kind in This City Was a Success.

About $100,000 was paid for the 8,000 to 9,000 pounds of ostrich feathers put under the hammer here yesterday at the warehouse of the New York Fur Auction Sales Corporation, 48 to 52 Great Jones Street, in the second public auction of this merchandise ever held here. The prices obtained were on a par with those paid by buyers at the first sale, which was held here about a month ago, but they were said to be "away below" the general quotations on similar goods in the local market. Local quotations, in turn, were said to be from 30 to 35 per cent. lower than the Cape, London and Paris markets. With ostrich as popular as it is now, however, steady and rapid advances here are regarded as inevitable.

The sale consisted of 325 lots of wing and body feathers, among them being several fine Western marks. The selling was completed by Auctioneer J. Gordon Noakes in three hours and fifteen minutes. This was an average of 1.55 lots a minute, which compared very favorably with the European sales record of 2 lots a minute.

The highest price paid was $100 per pound. It was got for Lot 16, which included three and one-half pounds of prime whites, eighteen to twenty-two inches long. A local importer was the buyer. This is the general range of prices: Body feathers, $1.25 to $20 a pound; spadones, $10 to $18 a pound; bloods, $60 to $98 a pound, and wings, $20 to $100 per pound. Practically every local importer and manufacturer of ostrich feather products was present at the sale, which was begun at 10:30 A. M. At 12:30 a short recess was taken, and a light lunch was served free to those present by the R. & R. Importing Company, Inc., which had the sale in charge.

Is the Small Man Better Off?

There has come up here the question of just how much better off, if any, the small retailer in this and other cities is as a result of the present prosperity. A case was cited yesterday of a retailer in a fair sized Southern city who, in 1918, did a business of $78,000. This year, to July 1, he had done $48,000, and expected at least to duplicate that figure during the final six months, which would give him a total of $96,000 for 1919. At this rate he would show a gain for 1919 of $18,000, or about 22 per cent. He came to this market and found that to buy only a little more than his 1918 volume of goods, mostly women's ready-to-wear, he would have to spend $30,000 in place of the $12,000 he formerly allotted for this purpose. Thus, he says, he has had to increase his Fall purchases 150 per cent. to show a probable gain for the year of 22 per cent., and he is wondering just where he is going to stand on Dec. 31.

The Weather.

WASHINGTON, Aug. 7.—Pressure is falling in the Atlantic States, and a low pressure area of moderate intensity is central over the St. Lawrence Valley. Pressure has risen decidedly over the upper lake region, attending the eastward advance of a moderate high pressure area, the centre of which is over Manitoba. During the last twenty-four hours showers and thunderstorms have occurred in the Atlantic States, along the East Gulf Coast, and in the lower Missouri Valley and portions of the upper lake region, and in the central and southern Rocky Mountain region. Elsewhere throughout the country the weather has been generally fair.

Temperatures have risen in the Atlantic States and have fallen over the upper Mississippi Valley, the Northern upper lake region, and the Southern plains States. They are generally above normal, however, except in the Northern upper lake region and the extreme upper Mississippi Valley.

The outlook is for generally fair weather Friday and Saturday east of the Mississippi River, except that showers and thunderstorms are probable Friday in New England and the South Atlantic and East Gulf States and on Saturday along the East Gulf and South Atlantic Coasts.

It will be somewhat cooler Saturday in the Lower Lake Region and the North Atlantic States; otherwise the temperature changes will not be marked.

Winds off the Atlantic Coast: North of Sandy Hook, moderate to fresh southwest winds, showers; Sandy Hook to Hatteras, moderate southwest winds, partly cloudy; Hatteras to Florida Straits, moderate, variable winds, mostly south and southwest, partly cloudy weather; East Gulf Coast, moderate, variable winds, local showers and thunder storms; West Gulf Coast, gentle, variable winds and fair weather.

Eastern New York, Eastern Pennsylvania: Generally fair Friday and Saturday, slightly cooler Saturday.

New Jersey: Partly cloudy Friday; Saturday fair, not much change in temperature.

QUESTIONS 4 GIRLS ON RED ACTIVITIES

Attorney General Newton Invokes Peace and Safety Act to Subpoena Witnesses.

EMPLOYED AT RAND SCHOOL

Four Men Also Served by State Troopers—Nature of Testimony Withheld.

The Peace and Safety act, which was passed as a war measure by the 1917 Legislature, was invoked yesterday by Attorney General Charles D. Newton for the purpose of eliciting information regarding the Rand School of Social Science from eight unwilling and surprised witnesses, four of whom were young girls. Bertram D. Wolfe, a Left Wing Socialist of Brooklyn, and Eamonn MacAlpine, one of the editors of the Revolutionary Age, an extreme radical organ, were also examined under this law.

Accordnig to one report, Deputy Attorney General Berger, who questioned the witnesses, was seeking to confirm that the "Are you prepared to meet the militia?" letter, a copy of which was found in the Rand School files when the school was raided on June 21 by agents of the Legislative Committee investigating sedition, had been written by a prominent Socialist in this city, at present filling an elective office.

According to one report, Deputy Attorney General Berger when asked regarding this. "The Peace and Safety Act makes it a misdemeanor for any one connected with an investigation conducted under it to divulge any part of the testimony, the questions asked, or even the identity of the persons examined."

The girl witnesses were subpoenaed at the People's House, 7 East Fifteenth Street, where the Rand School has its quarters. They were Lillian Barber, secretary to Alexander L. Trachtenberg, Director of Research; Nancy Markoff, stenographer to Louis P. Lochner, one of the instructors of the Rand School, and Lena Barish and Sarah Karps, stenographers in the office of Mrs. Bertha H. Mailly, Executive Secretary of the Rand School. Wolfe and MacAlpine were picked up at Left Wing Socialist Headquarters, 43 West Twenty-ninth Street.

The subpoenas were of the "John Doe" variety and were served by State troopers, who escorted the prospective witnesses to the Attorney General's office at 51 Chambers Street. The examination of the witnesses, it was said, had not been ordered by the Lusk Committee, but was on the initiative of Attorney General Newton.

At the Rand School officials characterized the activity of the Attorney General's office as a "fishing expedition." Deputy Attorney General Berger absolutely declined to give any information regarding the identity of the witnesses and the purpose of the examination. It was learned, however, that important evidence was obtained and that this will be used in the preparation of the Attorney General's new action to forfeit the charter of the Rand School. An earlier action was dismissed last week by Justice McAvoy of the Supreme Court.

Each of the witnesses from the Rand School, who, besides the four girls, included two young men working in the Rand School Book Store, were warned against divulging anything that transpired at the examination to their superiors at the Rand School or to any other person. A clause of the Peace and Safety act making it a prison offense to tell what questions had been asked or answers given was read to the witnesses after they had been sworn.

S. John Block and I. M. Sackin, attorneys for the Rand School, it was learned, have been subpoenaed to appear before the special Grand Jury which will be sworn in when the extraordinary term of the Supreme Court summoned by Governor Smith convenes on Monday to try cases growing out of the legislative investigation of Bolshevism and sedition.

ABANDON HOTEL PROJECT.

High Costs Stop $2,275,000 Enterprise at Atlantic City.

Special to The New York Times.

ATLANTIC CITY, N. J., Aug. 7.—Uncertainty as to the future of the material market and the steadily increasing cost of labor was said to be responsible for the abandonment of a project for the erection of a massive hotel of several hundred rooms on the old Windsor site, opposite the Hotel Traymore, at Illinois Avenue and the Boardwalk.

Projectors announced several weeks ago that the Ritz-Carlton Company would furnish the funds. The cost of the site and building was placed at $2,275,000. It is stated today that the whole enterprise has been abandoned for the time being.

20 DIE IN CRASH AT SEA.

HALIFAX, Aug. 7.—Twenty persons are believed to have lost their lives when the Tern schooner Gallia was sunk last night in a collision with the British steamer War Witch. The schooner is reported to have carried a crew of at least fifteen, and possibly a dozen passenger. Only even survivors are named in wireless messages from the steamer.

The collision occurred close to St. Pierre, and is alleged to have been due to the heavy fog which has prevailed in that locality for some days.

The War Witch was bound for North Sydney from Wabana, N. F., while the Gallia was on her way to St. Pierre from France. News of the catastrophe reached here in wireless messages to the agents of the War Witch.

The commission announces for Sept. 2 an examination for plant superintendent, for men only. Vacancies in the Ordnance Department at Large of the War Department, for duty at ordnance establishments throughout the United States, at salaries ranging from $2,000 to $2,400 a year, will be filled from this examination. Certification to fill the higher-salaried positions will be made from those attaining the highest average percentages in the examination. Applicants should have a knowledge of mechanical engineering and plant management, of the planning, laying out, and inspection of work, and of the various mechanical trades. They should have a thorough knowledge of the upkeep of buildings and equipment of establishments similar to the various ordnance depots. Competitors will not be required to report for examination at any place, but will be rated on (1) physical ability, 10; (2) education, training, and experience, 90. Applicants must have graduated from a standard high school or completed a course of study equivalent to that required for such graduation, and have had at least two years' preliminary mechanical experience, or have served an apprenticeship, and have had at least three years' experience in a responsible technical or executive position, the duties of which were similar to those outlined above, one year of which must have been in actual charge of power-plant operation. Applicants must not have reached their fiftieth birthday on the date of the examination.

Education Notes.

Plans and specifications have been approved for an addition to the Newtown High School. The estimated cost is $800,000. Superintendent Snyder says that it will practically double the size of the present building. Plans and specifications for the addition to P. S. 83, Manhattan, have also been adopted, at an estimated cost of $288,000.

The Board of Education has approved the action of Director Eugene C. Gibney in assigning planists as teachers and assistant teachers of kindergartens, due to the shortage of playground teachers.

The school building program for 1919 has been changed by increasing the grand total from $17,906,208 to $18,138,640. Instead of a building of thirty-six classrooms for new P. S. 38, the Bronx, a building of the forty-eight classroom type has been provided for. A thirty-six classroom building has been substituted for the proposed sixteen-room P. S. 102, Nassau Heights, Queens. All shower baths in new elementary schools will be eliminated. The proposed forty-eight classroom building at 140th Street, east of Alexander Avenue, has been eliminated, the new P. S. 38 being substituted for it.

REAL ESTATE FIELD

Trading in the realty market was confined yesterday to apartment house properties and private dwellings. Several big deals of the seven-figure variety are pending, however, and there was an unconfirmed report that a group of Manhattan operators had purchased the twelve-story Townsend Building at 1,121 to 1,127 Broadway.

The structure, which faces Madison Square, fronts 94.4 feet on Broadway and 124.3 feet on Twenty-fifth Street, and is separated from the St. James Building at Broadway and Twenty-sixth Street by a one-story taxpayer. To the west is Trinity Chapel, which extends from Twenty-fifth to Twenty-sixth Street.

Mary A. Sackett and others of New London, Conn., have held title to the property since 1887. It is assessed for taxation purposes at $1,120,000.

Lewisohn Increases Broadway Holdings.

Adolph Lewisohn has increased his Broadway holdings by the purchase of the seven-story Avonmore apartment house at 2,131 Broadway, between Seventy-fourth and Seventy-fifth Streets, occupying a site fronting seventy-two feet and having an average depth of 106 feet. L. J. Phillips & Co. arranged the sale for heirs of James A. Frame, who purchased the land at the auction sale of the Amos E. Eno estate in March, 1899, and shortly afterward erected the present building.

Tenant Buys Building.

The Bramhall-Deane Company bought the twelve-story building, assessed at $194,000 and held at $250,000, at 261 to 265 West Thirty-sixth Street, through Frederick Fox & Co. The purchasers have occupied the buildings since its completion about eight years ago as offices and showrooms for ranges and other kitchen equipment.

Buys Greenwich Village Plot for Garage.

Business Buildings Sold.

The Emigrant Industrial Savings Bank sold the four-story business building, on plot 21.6 by 98.9, held at $23,000, at 133 West Twenty-second Street, to an investing client of Thomas J. O'Reilly.

Robert E. Simon resold a six-story loft building at 225 Greene Street, which he purchased last week, to a client of Spear & Co.

Y. M. C. A. Sells Plot.

The Y. M. C. A. sold a plot 37.6 by 100, at 252 West Fifty-third Street, to the Pacific Motor Company through George A. Hampton & Son.

Apartment House Sales.

Richard Cronin bought the five-story nonelevator apartment house, held at $100,000 and renting for nearly $14,000, at 580 West 172d Street from Paterno & Sons Construction Company, Major Francis S. Paterno, President, through the Frank L. Fisher Company.

Arthur H. Lewis sold a five-story apartment house, 50 by 100, held at $70,000, at 619 West 143d Street, to the 400 Manhattan Avenue Corporation, Adolph Schechter, President.

The Lawyers Mortgage Company sold to an investor the Arthur, a six-story apartment house, 97.6 by 99.11, at 550 West 144th Street, 200 feet east of Broadway. The sellers recently secured the property in a foreclosure for $125,000.

Charles Wynne and Louis H. Low have resold 225 Central Park West, a six-story elevator apartment, on a lot 42 by 100, adjoining the northeast corner of Eighty-second Street, to an investor. The sellers purchased the property last month through Ludlow & Co. George Levy was the broker in the resale.

Private Dwellings.

Mrs. Lewis Lowenstein sold the four-story and basement twenty-foot dwelling at 42 East Seventy-fourth Street, between Madison and Park Avenues, to a client of Pease & Elliman, for occupancy.

Dr. Bennett Beach sold through F. R. Wood & Co. to Mrs. M. L. Tracy, for occupancy, his three-story dwelling at 144 West Eighty-fifth Street, on lot 18 by 100.

The Equitable Life Insurance Company sold for Dr. William J. Conner the three-story dwelling, 215 West 138th Street, on lot 17 by 99.11.

The three-story dwelling, 18 by 102.2, at 12 East Seventy-sixth Street, near Park Avenue, has been sold by John J. Aresson to Dr. Berringer.

William S. Strafford is reported to have sold the five-story American basement dwelling, on lot 25 by 102.2, at 6 East Seventy-ninth Street, between Fifth and Madison Avenues.

MAYOR SEES DOOM OF THE SURFACE CAR

Predicts That It Will Disappear Before Bus Service He Proposes for All Boroughs.

READY FOR A HARD FIGHT

Shortly before departing for his Bushwick Avenue (Brooklyn) home in his auto last evening, Mayor Hylan issued a long statement setting forth in detail his plan for establishing a system of city-owned buses throughout the city to compete with the street car lines. The Mayor prophesied the doom of all street cars, and said it wouldn't be long before the municipal buses would be operating in great numbers all over the city and the traction people would be tearing up their tracks in despair. The Mayor's statement relative to the establishment of bus lines in all five boroughs of the city began thus:

The day of the street surface cars has gone by forever, and it will not be long before New Yorkers will have trackless streets.

I see no reason why the people of New York, instead of being jammed like hogs into badly kept surface railway cars and then hung on straps, cannot have decent bus service for a very low cost. A lot of people say that bus service might cost more than 5 cents. The answer to that is that I now have a proposition from a private concern to run 5-cent buses. If a private concern can do it, I am sure that the investigation to be made by the Board of Estimate will demonstrate that we can have 5-cent buses. The surface railways are now trying to force a 7 or 8 cent fare, and we certainly need no introduction to the miserable kind of riding they would give us even for 8 cents, because their proposition does not include anything new for the public. It only covers new profits for the traction people.

The Mayor said the day of the surface railway was ended for several reasons, the first and fundamental one being that "things that go in a groove do not go at all nowadays." Surface railway cars, he said, run in track grooves and therefore they take "all evening to get a tired man or woman from a business place downtown to a home uptown." That, said the Mayor, is the principal reason why the street railway system is doomed.

Aside from the groove drawback, the Mayor said that the gentlemen who have operated the roads have "abused them and robbed them, have killed the goose that laid the golden egg." Despite their past crimes, he said, they have the effrontery to say that the city should consider the roads "as of present day value for the construction." The Mayor asked how many of their cars were built and tracks laid at prices that meant present day wages to laboring men.

"Do they come in," the Mayor asked, "with any guarantee that if the goose lays more golden eggs for them they will always guarantee to pay present day prices for car building, tracklaying, railmaking, and railway employes?" The Mayor's answer to his own question was:

"No, they only want to jam higher fares through while the dollar is temporarily dislocated as to value, and then when the dollar goes back to somewhere near its normal level they will have us high and dry with 8-cent fares that will give them millions more of plunder."

Continuing his argument, the Mayor said:

"I have studied their game just enough to understand their moves as they want them to work out over a period of the next five years. The people of New York elected me to protect them from such plunderers and I am going to do so with every power at the command of the Mayor of New York.

"There is not the slightest doubt in my mind right now that these traction gentlemen would like me to fall for a policy of municipal ownership for the surface railways. That is, they would like to sell their rotten surface railways to the city at a high cost and then go into the bus business. I am told that some of the London traction sharks played such a game on the city of London. But it won't work here.

"Personally I do not consider these surface railways worth very much right now. I do not want the city to get such an antiquated transportation system on its hands. I do want the city to run a real, up-to-date transportation system, and that is why I am for immediately establishing bus lines all over the city."

The Mayor said he noticed that the Broadway Association was in favor of bus lines and he thought that it was very intelligent in "this matter." He thought it would be a good idea if every local association would immediately begin studying the question and make suggestions to him about the needs of their districts. The Mayor then said he had given a lot of thought to the bus question and this is the way he would apply it to ball games:

"After a big ball game the crowd has a frightful time to get started home, and the last car, the one nearest the ball ground, cannot start away until the forward car is filled. A fleet of buses could be stationed all around the ball park to handle the crowd, and each bus could start as soon as it was filled."

Other crowds would be taken care of in the same way. This is the Mayor's solution:

"This would apply to all big gatherings, such as parades. The surface car lines are always paralyzed at the conclusion of any big event in this city. That is because the fastest car is governed in speed by the slowest one on the same track. Buses would eliminate all these delays at once.

"After theatre at night there could be concentration of buses in the theatre district, starting out in all directions. In the early morning these buses could be uptown, ready to bring the crowds down to work. In the late afternoon they could be concentrated downtown, ready to give our tired people a decent, pleasant ride up home, with a seat guaranteed for everybody.

"This would end the strap-hanging days of New York. There could be two types of buses. There could be a single-deck bus for sections where the traffic is light, and there could be a big double-deck bus, carrying 60 to 100 persons, for the sections where traffic is heavy.

"When we get a big fleet of municipal buses at work the surface car lines will simply go out of business, and after they stop operating we will lift up their tracks, and our people will wonder why we countenanced them for so many years after they had outlived their day."

The Mayor believes that a bus express service could be established, the buses making long-distance trips downtown and uptown during the rush hours without stopping except at long intervals. But the Mayor said he foresaw a great fight against him by the traction interests.

"Of course," he continued, "I expect a big fight over this—one of the biggest fights any Mayor ever had—and I suppose some of the public officials will be in sympathy with the traction people. But I am going to make the fight for municipal buses, because I think it is the only up-to-date idea in traction that has been advanced.

"Let the traction robbers go right along trying to gouge the public. I will have the city's legal force fight them to the limit, and I know that the public is with me all the way. And while they are trying to rob our people we will simply create a new traction method that will leave them with a worthless system on which the people won't ride at any price.

"Traction people will begin to have all kinds of objections to bus operation. They will probably tell us we will have tire trouble and that we will have to repave lots of the streets. I expect them to be very insidious and active against me. But when we call the automobile people and the tire people in to help us solve these problems I am sure they will be mighty glad to see the biggest city in the world modernize its traction methods and they will wipe out all such objections."

Despite all this opposition, the Mayor said he would "beat them at their own game." He said he wanted every man and woman in the city to begin thinking about how much superior a municipal bus service would be and then when the traction companies found they couldn't "work off their lines on the city" they would "gladly throw all of the surface line apparatus into the junk heap."

NEW YORK AWAITS THE FAMOUS SECOND

GEN. LEJEUNE TO COMMAND

The 2d Division of regulars and marines, who fought in all of the great battles in which Americans participated in the war against Germany and who suffered battle casualties that totaled more than 24,000 men, will parade up Fifth Avenue this afternoon. Never before in the history of the city has there been seen in marching column so many officers and enlisted men of regular organizations as will be acclaimed today by the people of New York. The parade will start at the Washington Arch in Washington Square at 3 P. M., the route being Fifth Avenue to 110th Street. The head of the column should be abreast of the official reviewing stand at Forty-second Street and Fifth Avenue at about 3:45 P. M.

There will be approximately 25,000 troops in line, who will be led by their famous commander, Major Gen. John A. Lejeune of the marines, in his last official appearance as the commander of this far-famed fighting organization. The Weather Bureau predicts fair weather for the parade.

General Lejeune will be escorted by his entire divisional staff, which includes officers from all branches of the regular army as well as the marines. Ahead of General Lejeune will ride a picked troop of New York policemen.

The soldiers of the 2d Division will arrive in New York this morning from the various demobilization camps in and near the city. There will be approximately 8,500 Marines and 16,500 regulars.

Neighbors Try to Help Recover Kidnapped Child.

A reward of $500 was offered yesterday for information leading to the return of seven weeks old Arthur Philip Wentz, who was taken from a baby carriage in which his mother had left him in front of a department store in the Bronx on Tuesday of last week.

The offer was made by neighbors of the mother, Mrs. August Wentz of 725 Home Street. The strain of the search for the missing child proved too great for August Wentz, the babe's father, who has collapsed and is under a physician's care.

Mrs. Wentz prays continually for the return of the child. Thus far the police have no clue.

WILSON ASKS LAW TO PUNISH PROFITEERS; WOULD CURB STORAGE, PUBLISH PRICES; B. R. T. RESUMES OPERATING NIGHT TRAINS

STREET TRAFFIC TIED UP

NIXON OFFERS TO MEDIATE

Garrison Accepts, but Refuses to Meet "Outside Organizers" on Strike.

HYLAN AGAIN URGES PEACE

Assails Receiver, Declaring Police Protection Adequate to Run Cars.

The Brooklyn Rapid Transit Company, for the first time since the strike began, attempted last night to maintain an all-night service, though much reduced from normal, on its elevated and subway lines. The surface lines were completely tied up in the middle of the afternoon, when cars were repeatedly mobbed before they could get more than a few blocks from their depots.

It was announced at the B. R. T. offices that the company would attempt to run eighty-seven trains continuously through the night, and that it had 224 crews for this purpose. It was also stated that there were 142 policeman on hand to guard them.

No great change in police policy occurred yesterday, in spite of the assurances of Second Deputy Police Commissioner Lahey, who was brought back from his vacation to take charge, that he would give protection for twenty-four hours of the day for every car that the company could send out. The company tried to resume surface car service in the morning and had a few cars running for a while, but never had as many as 100 running at any time during the day.

Receiver Garrison of the B. R. T., at a hearing before Public Service Commission Lewis Nixon, reiterated his statement that "one hour's real police work" would see the lines operating on a normal basis.

After Mr. Garrison had accused the police and the officials directing them for failing to put down the violence in Brooklyn, which he said forced the service to suspend, Commissioner Nixon offered his services or those of the Public Service Commission as mediator. Receiver Garrison said this offer would be accepted provided he would not be asked to deal with "outside" organizers or with representatives of any group of employes. The receiver then went on to say that the main issue today is not between the B. R. T. and its employes, but between the police and "the disorderly element."

Upon being informed of Receiver Garrison's statement at the hearing, Edward Smith, Chairman of the Strike Committee named at the meeting last Friday night to wait upon Receiver Garrison and obtain recognition of the union, issued a statement saying that the only committee that would meet Garrison would be one that represented the union. He said:

The Union's Statement.

"A committee of union men will meet Receiver Garrison on only one condition—that is, if he recognizes the committee which represents the union employes. We will settle the matter only under union recognition. This is our stand, and we will stick to it. We regret very much that the public is inconvenienced by the strike, which was forced upon us."

After a conference at Police Headquarters in Brooklyn last night between Second Deputy Police Commissioner Lahey and officials of the B. R. T., it was decided to attempt to run fifty-four surface cars in Brooklyn this morning. The normal number is about 1,500.

Developments on the lines in Brooklyn were such that hardly a car made a trip without being attacked. As on the previous days of the strike, the pickets of the strikers dashed about in motor trucks, speeding from one car to another, pulling off crews, wrecking the cars, and sometimes overpowering the policemen, three and four of whom guarded some of the cars. Sometimes, according to the B. R. T. reports, the police guards showed indifference, but on other occasions they drew revolvers and chased mobs away.

One capture of a motor load of strikers took place. This was at 11 o'clock, when the police came on a mob of strikers at Church Avenue and Huntersfly Road tearing up a temporary switch. Police reserves were called. They arrested the entire truck load and took them to the Flatbush Court. This was the only instance reported when one of the strikers' "tanks," with which the

Mexican Inquiry Ordered by Senate; Committee to Fix Damages for Outrages

WASHINGTON, Aug. 8.—The Senate's growing irritation over the Mexican situation today resulted in the adoption of a resolution directing the Foreign Relations Committee to make a comprehensive investigation. The Senate adopted the measure without a dissenting vote and with no debate.

This action was closely followed by the appointment of Senators Fall, Smith of Arizona, and Brandegee as a subcommittee to make inquiry. Senator Fall announced that they would begin as soon as practicable and be most thorough in their work.

The resolution, which was introduced by Senator King of Utah, provides that "the Committee on Foreign Relations or any subcommittee thereof is authorized and directed to investigate the matter of damages and outrages suffered by citizens of the United States in Mexico, including the number of citizens of the United States who have been killed or have suffered personal outrages in Mexico, and the amount of proper indemnities for such murders and outrages; the amount of damages suffered on account of the destruction, confiscation and larceny of personal property and the confiscation and deprivation of the use of lands and the destruction of improvements thereon; the number of citizens of the United States residing in Mexico at the time Porfirio Diaz retired from the Presidency of Mexico and the number of citizens of the United States at present residing in Mexico and the nature and the amount of their present holdings and properties in said country, and in general any and all acts of the Governments of Mexico and its citizens in derogation of the rights of the United States and of its citizens, and for this purpose to sit at any time or place during the session of Congress or during the recess of Congress, and with authority to subpoena such witnesses and documents as may be necessary, and to make a report of findings in the premises to the Senate; and said committee shall further investigate and report what, if any, measures shall be taken to prevent the recurrence of such outrages."

The final clause was added at the suggestion of Senator Ashurst, Arizona. It empowers the committee in effect to formulate recommendations for a Mexican policy, if its investigation discloses what the committee deems to be a need for a change in the present policy of this Government. The investigators are authorized, if they see fit, to conduct their inquiry on the border, or anywhere else.

Senator King, author of the resolution, who for months has been urging more vigorous prosecution of American claims against the Carranza Government, said today that the investigation would show to the American people many things heretofore unknown to them. Other Senators who are prepared to assist the subcommittee with information affirmed that the evidence would show bribery of American Government agents by the Carranza Government, and prove that facts concerning the character of the Carranza régime had been withheld from President Wilson in order to influence his course.

Senator Phelan of California intends to ask the subcommittee to look carefully into the oil situation, particularly with reference to recent purchases by Japanese and British interests.

JOB HEDGES SENDS HYLAN WARNING

Says He Will Move Against City Officials if Strikers Tie Up His Lines.

"GREEN CAR" MEN MEET

Oppose Effort to Extend Strike to Manhattan and Call for Police Protection.

After he had learned yesterday that union officials who are directing the B. R. T. strike in Brooklyn had declared that an attempt would be made to tie up all the subways, elevated lines, and street car lines in Manhattan, Job E. Hedges, receiver for the New York Railways Company, wrote a letter to Mayor Hylan, declaring that he would insist upon complete and effective police protection for all the men and property of the lines under his control.

Mr. Hedges declared that the police were able to put down all acts of violence if they were directed to exert their full power. Should the police not provide protection, he said, he was prepared to call upon the Sheriff and Governor Smith. He added that if the proper city officials failed to instruct the police to carry out their "constitutional duty" to protect men and property he would demand that the Governor remove them from office.

Officials of the New York Railways Company last night asked motormen and conductors of the "green cars" to report to the car barns in Seventh Avenue at Fiftieth Street for discussion of the reports that the employes might strike for increase in wages. The meeting was secret.

Officials of the Brotherhood of the New York Railways Company Employes gave out copies of a resolution adopted at the meeting declaring intention to carry out their agreements with the company, which do not terminate until the end of the year, and calling upon the police to protect them against intimidation by the Brooklyn strikers.

Hedges Writes to Mayor.

This is the letter Mr. Hedges wrote to the Mayor:

"An afternoon newspaper quotes P. J. Shea, the national executive officer of the carmen's union, now directing the strike in Brooklyn, as follows:

"'There isn't a damn thing surer on earth than that the street railway employes of Manhattan and the Bronx, including subway and "L" employes, will go out as soon as we can get leaders here to direct them. W. D. Mahon, President; Thomas Shine, Vice President, and other officers of the union are on the way here.'

"This interview I have had verified by a reporter who heard it.

"There are two fundamental questions involved in the present street railway disturbance in New York City which apply here and everywhere throughout the United States:

"1. Can a man labor for whom he

STRIKING ACTORS KEEP 9 SHOWS DARK

Players in Rehearsals Called Out and Thirty New Attractions Held Up.

MANAGERS THREATEN SUITS

Sothern Quits Union—Comedians Do Picket Duty—Equity Gets 1,200 New Members.

Decision by the managers to stand firmly together against the union actors, the calling out of important principals in Broadway's two biggest musical productions, and the reopening of three of the twelve affected shows were the features of the second night of the theatre strike.

The actors, in addition to compelling nine theatres to forego performances last night, impaired the effectiveness of several other attractions and brought about a sharp falling off of patronage in many houses.

Equity Association actors now rehearsing new plays were called out at 10 o'clock in the morning, and it was estimated that rehearsals of thirty plays were held up. The Actors' Equity Association announced that 1,200 actors had joined the organization yesterday, bringing the membership to 5,400.

E. H. Sothern, following the failure of his efforts to avert the strike on Thursday, resigned from the Actors' Equity Association.

"Chu Chin Chow," the first company in which the Actors' Equity Association tried to call a strike, opened as announced last night at the Century Theatre.

George M. Cohan elevated chorus people to principals in "The Royal Vagabond," and himself played parts of two rôles in a suddenly arranged performance of that piece at the Cohan and Harris Theatre last night. Eddie Cantor, principal comedian of the Ziegfeld "Follies," and a member of the council of the Actors' Equity Association, went on strike early in the evening, and then reconsidered his action at 10 o'clock and played his part in the second act.

Managers Threaten Suit.

The managers announced that suit would be brought against the Actors' Equity Association and also against the individual actors for contract-breaking.

The three shows which resumed performances last night were "The Royal Vagabond," at the Cohan and Harris; "The Challenge," at the Selwyn, and "Gaieties of 1919," at the Forty-fourth Street Theatre. Plays which were unable to resume were "Nightie Night," which is waiting to open at the Princess; "A Voice in the Dark," at the Republic; "Listen, Lester," at the Knickerbocker; "The Crimson Alibi," at the Broadhurst; "At 9:45," at the Playhouse; "Oh, What a Girl," at the Shubert; "The Five Million," at the Lyric; "Lightnin'," at the Gaiety, and "East Is West," at the Astor.

SPEECH WINS APPROVAL

Both Parties Applaud Warning to Radical Railway Groups.

KILLS SOVIETISM, SAYS KING

TREATY PLEA IS ATTACKED

Lodge Calls Injection in Talk "Unfair Advantage"—Brandegee Flouts Cost Effect.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, Aug. 8.—While the majority of Republican members of the Senate and House assumed a critical attitude toward many of the statements made today by President Wilson in his message to the joint session in regard to the high living cost situation, causes contributing to it, and suggested cures, there was a marked unanimity of expression tonight, by Republicans and Democrats alike, to the effect that the President had accomplished a distinct service to the nation in his denunciation of the radical groups which are accused of taking advantage of the emergency to force nationalization of the railways and of the basic industries upon the country.

The President's statements that the nation cannot overnight revolutionize all the processes of its economic life, and that "we shall not attempt to do so," were the subject of widespread discussion and approbation. His declaration that the Government would not cower before threats of any group was received with the equal satisfaction among the members of Congress and others in official life in Washington.

The radical groups, expecting a more temporizing attitude upon the part of the President, were endeavoring to marshal their forces tonight for another drive and talking about plans for a convention to advance their cause. But they were obviously discouraged. There were some of them who had even hoped that President Wilson might lend a sympathetic ear to their course and that ultimately they might accomplish their purpose of injecting their principles for the nationalization of industries into the platform of the Democratic Party at the next national election. Their hopes died hard.

Death Blow to Sovietism.

The most outspoken member of the Congress in connection with the President's denunciation of the radical group who seek nationalisation of industries was Senator King, Democrat, of Utah. He made a striking statement in which he said:

"It means that Sovietism will not dominate in the United States."

This was the keynote of other expressions on the same subject by members of the Congress.

The scope of the legislation which President Wilson recommended to aid his administrative officers in the fight on the high living costs was so broad that the majority of the Senators and Representatives were desirous of more time to digest the recommendations before discussing them in detail. Speaking generally, it may be said that the Republican majority in Congress is opposed, at this time, to granting licensing power.

The recommendation that the price at which the retail merchant purchased commodities be stamped on them so that the ultimate consumer may know the profit that the retailer is making, contains features of so revolutionary a character that members of Congress wished time to discuss it in conference before committing themselves. The feeling was expressed that it would be difficult to get such legislation through Congress, but admittedly this attitude was not final.

Senator Henry Cabot Lodge, Republican, Chairman of the Senate Foreign Relations Committee, led the forces which attacked the President for injecting without good reason, as they alleged, the peace treaty issue into his message on high living costs. Senator Brandegee, who has been one of the most outspoken opponents of the President's League of Nations program, was bitter in his denunciation, asserting that the President had deliberately taken advantage of the economic situation to make an effort to club the Senate into line.

Some Senators and Representatives took the position that if the President knew that profiteering and hoarding was going on as he stated, that he should long ago have sent forth his prosecuting officials to cure such a situation, but there was no organized attack on this point.

EPOCA—PURE HAVANA CIGARS, EXCELLENCE and INDIVIDUALITY. The two fine points of this brand.—Advt.

Text of the President's Address to Congress

WASHINGTON, Aug. 8.—President Wilson's address to Congress today, embodying recommendations designed to reduce the cost of living, was as follows:

Gentlemen of the Congress:

I have sought this opportunity to address you because it is clearly my duty to call your attention to the present cost of living and to urge upon you with all the persuasive force of which I am capable the legislative measures which would be most effective in controlling it and bringing it down. The prices the people of this country are paying for everything that it is necessary for them to use in order to live are not justified by a shortage in supply, either present or prospective, and are in many cases artificially and deliberately created by vicious practices which ought immediately to be checked by law. They constitute a burden upon us which is the more unbearable because we know that it is willfully imposed by those who have the power and that it can by vigorous public action be greatly lightened and made to square with the actual conditions of supply and demand. Some of the methods by which these prices are produced are already illegal, some of them criminal, and those who employ them will be energetically proceeded against; but others have not yet been brought under the law, and should be dealt with at once by legislation.

I need not recite the particulars of this critical matter; the prices demanded and paid at the sources of supply, at the factory, in the food markets, at the shops, in the restaurants and hotels, alike in the city and in the village. They are familiar to you. They are the talk of every domestic circle and of every group of casual acquaintances even. It is a matter of familiar knowledge, also, that a process has set in which is likely, unless something is done, to push prices and rents and the whole cost of living higher and yet higher, in a vicious cycle to which there is no logical or natural end.

With the increase in the prices of the necessaries of life come demands for increases in wages—demands which are justified if there be no other means of enabling men to live. Upon the increase of wages there follows close an increase in the price of the products whose producers have been accorded the increase—not a proportionate increase, for the manufacturer does not content himself with that—but an increase considerably greater than the added wage cost and for which the added wage cost is oftentimes hardly more than an excuse. The laborers who do not get an increase in pay when they demand it are likely to strike, and the strike only makes matters worse. It checks production, it affects the railways, it prevents distribution and stops the markets, so that there is presently nothing to buy, and there is another excessive addition to prices resulting from the scarcity.

These are facts and forces with which we have become only too familiar; but we are not justified because of our familiarity with them or because of any hasty and shallow conclusion that they are "natural" and inevitable in sitting inactively by and letting them work their fatal results if there is anything that we can do to check, correct, or reverse them. I have sought this opportunity to inform the Congress what the Executive is doing by way of remedy and control, and to suggest where effective legal remedies are lacking and may be supplied.

The Supreme Need of Peace.

We must, I think, frankly admit that there is no complete immediate remedy to be had from legislation and executive action. The free processes of supply and demand will not operate of themselves, and no legislative or Executive action can force them into full and natural operation until there is peace. There is now neither peace nor war. All the world is waiting—with what unnerving fears and haunting doubts who can adequately say?—waiting to know when it comes—a peace in which each nation shall make shift for itself as it can, or a peace buttressed and supported by the will and concert of the nations that have the purpose and the power to do and to enforce what is right.

Politically, economically, socially, the world is on the operating table, and it has not been possible to administer any anaesthetic. It is conscious. It even watches the capital operation upon which it knows that its hope of healthful life depends. It cannot think its business out or make plans or give intelligent and provident direction to its affairs while in such a case.

Where there is no peace of mind there can be no energy in endeavor. There can be no confidence in industry, no calculable basis for credits, no confident buying or systematic selling, no certain prospect of employment, no normal restoration of business, no hopeful attempt at reconstruction or the proper reassembling of the dislocated elements of enterprise until peace has been established and, so far as may be, guaranteed.

Our national life has no doubt been less radically disturbed and dismembered than the national life of other peoples whom the war more directly affected, with all its terrible ravaging and destructive force, but it has been, nevertheless, profoundly affected and disarranged, and our industries, our credits, our productive capacity, our economic processes are inextricably interwoven with those of other nations and peoples—most intimately of all with the nations and peoples upon whom the chief burden and confusion of the war fell and who are now most dependent upon co-operative action of the world.

We are just now shipping more goods out of our ports to foreign markets than we ever shipped before—not foodstuffs merely, but stuffs and materials of every sort; but this is no index of what our foreign sales will continue to be or of the effect the volume of our exports will have on supplies and prices. It is impossible yet to predict how far or how long foreign purchasers will be able to find the money or the credit to pay for or sustain such purchases on such a scale; how soon or to what extent foreign manufacturers can resume their former production, foreign farmers get their accustomed crops from their own fields, foreign mines resume their former output, foreign merchants set up again their old machinery of trade with the ends of the earth.

All these things must remain uncertain until peace is established and the nations of the world have concerted the methods by which normal life and industry are to be restored. All that we shall do, in the meantime, to restrain profiteering and put the life of our people upon a tolerable footing will be makeshift and provisional. There can be no settled conditions here or elsewhere until the treaty of peace is out of the way and the work of liquidating the war has become the chief concern of our Government and of the other Governments of the world. Until then business will inevitably remain speculative, and away now this way and again that, with heavy losses or heavy gains, as it may chance, and the consumer must take care of both the gains and the losses. There can be no peace prices so long as our whole financial and economic system is on a war basis.

Europe will not, can not, recoup her capital or put her restless, distracted peoples to work until she knows exactly where she stands in respect of peace; and what we will do is for her the chief question upon which her quietude of mind and confidence of purpose depend. While there is any possibility that the peace terms may be changed or may be held long in abeyance or may not be enforced because of divisions of opinion among the powers associated against Germany, it is idle to look for permanent relief.

Must Check Hoarding of Food.

But what we can do we should do, and should do at once. And there is a great deal that we can do, provisional though it be. Wheat shipments and credits to facilitate the purchase of our wheat can and will be limited and controlled in such a way as not to raise, but rather to lower, the price of flour here. The Government has the power, within certain limits, to regulate that. We cannot deny wheat to foreign peoples who are in dire need of it, and we do not wish to do so; but, fortunately, though the wheat crop is not what we hoped it would be, it is abundant, if handled with provident care. The price of wheat is lower in the United States than in Europe, and can with proper management be kept so.

By way of immediate relief, surplus stocks of both food and clothing in the hands of the Government will be sold, and, of course, sold at prices at which there is no profit. And by way of a more permanent correction of prices, surplus stocks in private hands will be drawn out of storage and put upon the market.

Fortunately, under the terms of the Food Control act the hoarding of foodstuffs can be checked and prevented; and they will be, with the greatest energy. Foodstuffs can be drawn out of storage and sold by legal action, which the Department of Justice will institute wherever necessary; but so soon as the situation is systematically dealt with, it is not likely that the courts will often have to be resorted to.

Much of the accumulating of stocks has no doubt been due to the sort of speculation which always results from uncertainty. Great surpluses were accumulated because it was impossible to foresee what the market would disclose and dealers were determined to be ready for whatever might happen, as well as eager to reap the full advantage of rising prices. They will now see the disadvantage, as well as the danger, of holding off from the new process of distribution.

Some very interesting and significant facts with regard to stocks on hand and the rise of prices in the face of abundance have been disclosed by the inquiries of the Department of Agriculture, the Department of Labor, and the Federal Trade Commission. They seem to justify the statement that in the case of many necessary commodities effective means have been found to prevent the normal operation of the law of supply and demand.

Disregarding the surplus stocks in the hands of the Government, there was a greater supply of foodstuffs in this country on June 1 of this year than at the same date last year. In the combined total of a number of the most important foods in dry and cold storage the excess is quite 10 per cent. And yet prices have risen. The supply of fresh eggs on hand in June of this year, for example, was greater by nearly 10 per cent. than the supply on hand at the same time last year, and yet the wholesale price was 40 cents a dozen as against 30 cents a year ago.

The stock of frozen fowls had increased more than 208 per cent., and yet the price had risen also from 34½ cents per pound to 37½ cents. The supply of creamery butter had increased 129 per cent., and the price from 41 to 53 cents per pound. The supply of salt beef had been augmented 3 per cent. and the price had gone up from $34 a barrel to $36 a barrel. Canned corn had increased in stock nearly 92 per cent., and had remained substantially the same in price.

In a few foodstuffs the prices had declined, but in nothing like the proportion in which the supply had increased. For example, the stock of canned tomatoes had increased 102 per cent., and yet the price had declined only 25 cents per dozen cans. In some cases there had been the usual result of an increase of price following a decrease of supply, but in almost every instance the increase of price had been disproportionate to the decrease in stock.

The Attorney General has been making a careful study of the situation as a whole and of the laws that can be applied to better it, and is convinced that, under the stimulation and temptation of exceptional circumstances, combinations of producers and combinations of traders have been formed for the control

PRESIDENT OFFERS PLANS

Seven Suggestions Made for Legislation to Solve High Prices Problem.

FOOD CONTROL EXTENSION

Licensing of Corporations and Curb on Security Issues Proposed.

URGES THE PEACE TREATY

Appeals to Producers, Middlemen, and Retailers to Deal Fairly.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, Aug. 8.—President Wilson appeared before Congress this afternoon and outlined plans for dealing with the problem of the cost of living.

He told the legislators that the present high prices were not justified by any shortage of supplies, present or prospective, but were in many cases an artificial creation, many of the retailers being to blame.

While declaring with emphasis that it was idle to look for permanent relief until peace was actually obtained and guaranteed, he suggested the following legislation to supplement existing statutes in curbing hoarding and profiteering:

1. Extension of the Food Control act to peace time and widening of its scope to cover all necessaries.
2. Licensing of all corporations engaged in interstate commerce to insure competitive selling and prevent "unconscionable profits."
3. Passage of a law to regulate cold storage, limiting the time of storage, and requiring goods to bear the date of receipt and the price at the time they went into storage.
4. Provision for a penalty for violation of the profiteering clauses of the Food Control act.
5. A law requiring that all goods destined for interstate commerce be marked where possible with the price at which they left the producer.
6. Enactment of the proposed law for the control of security issues.
7. Additional appropriations for Government agencies which will inform the public of the prices at which retailers buy.

Lines of Present Executive Action.

He informed Congress that the administrative branch of the Government would take these steps to cope with the situation:

1. Limit wheat shipments and credits to lower the price of flour here.
2. Sell surplus stocks of food and clothing now in the hands of the Government, without profit.
3. Draw surplus stocks out of storage and put them upon the market, by legal action wherever necessary.
4. Prosecute combinations of producers and traders formed for the control of supplies and prices.
5. Employ publicity, through the Departments of Commerce, Agriculture and Labor, and the Federal Trade Commission, to acquaint the public with supplies not available because of hoarding and methods of price fixing.

In his address the President declared that the world faced a supreme crisis in which America must prove her mettle and save Europe by her action in peace just as she had saved Europe by her action in arms.

"The world," said he, "has just destroyed the arbitrary force of a military junta. It will live under no other. All that is arbitrary and coercive is in the discard. Those who seek to employ it only prepare their own destruction."

Almost in the next breath the President declared his belief that "the more extreme leaders of organized labor will presently yield to a sober second thought and, like the great mass of their associates, think and act like true Americans."

"They will see," the President went on, "that strikes undertaken at this critical time are certain to make matters worse, not better—worse for them and everybody else."

While the President was frequently applauded during his address the loudest demonstration followed this reference to the threat of railway strikes.

The President appealed to producers, middlemen, and merchants to deal fairly with the people, and concluded with a strong appeal to employes and workmen to avoid temper and passion, and unite to deal soberly with a situation, wherein as he had previously pictured it, "politically, economically, socially, the world is on the operating table."

When the House assembled in anticipation of the joint session Representative Blanton raised the point of order of no quorum.

A call of the House showed 223 members present, or seven more than a quorum. The resolution for the joint session was passed and the stage was set for the President ten minutes before his arrival.

When, promptly at 4 o'clock, the Approval of Most of Wilson's Suggestions for Cutting Living Cost

President was announced, the entire audience of Senators, Representatives and gallery spectators arose. The President was greeted with applause, but few Republicans joined in this.

The President's delivery of his address was much better than when he read his address to the Senate on the Peace Treaty. There was no halting in sentences. He was applauded a dozen times during the delivery of the address. The first burst of applause came when he ended the sentence, "Some of the methods by which these prices are produced are already illegal, some of them criminal, and those who employ them will be energetically proceeded against."

The next demonstration came from the Democratic side only, when the President declared that "there can be no settled conditions, here or elsewhere, until the treaty of peace is out of the way."

Again, when he asserted that under the Food Control act, "the hoarding of foodstuffs can be checked and prevented," there was an interruption by the audience, and also when he stated that the Attorney General, after study of the situation, was convinced that combinations of producers and of traders had been formed for the control of supplies and prices, and declared that prosecutions would be instituted against them.

The Plan to Curb Stock Issues.

The President's reference to the bill for the control of pending security issues came as a surprise. This bill was introduced in the House by Representative Taylor of Colorado and referred to the Judiciary Committee on Feb. 28. The Capital Issues Committee, of which Charles S. Hamlin is Chairman, submitted a report calling again to the attention of Congress the insistent need of legislation to prevent the wholesale floating of millions of worthless stock. Among other things the committee said:

"One of the strongest arguments in favor of Federal legislation to check the offering and sale of fraudulent or worthless issues is the magnitude of the traffic. Before the war this traffic amounted to tens of millions of dollars annually, but reports, made to the committee from all parts of the country during the last eight months, indicate that this traffic has greatly increased during the war, due to high wages and to the further fact that millions of people have invested in Liberty Bonds.

"The estimate of $500,000,000 annually devoted to the purchase of such fraudulent or worthless stocks seems to the committee to be too conservative. This sum represents sheer waste and net loss to the people and the nation not only of dollars but of moral confidence and the incentive to save. The nation's loss cannot be measured alone in money values, but in terms of those things which make for good citizenship.

"State regulation of security issues which has been undertaken in more than half of the States has been effective only to a limited extent, principally where a company has organized to operate and sell its securities in the State of its creation. But whenever the enterprise has crossed State lines and its securities are sold indiscriminately from ocean to ocean, the State Commissions have been powerless, as they cannot reach beyond their own boundary lines, and no State system can be devised for complete harmony by which the authorities of the several States may work in unison."

America Alone Holds World Steady.

WASHINGTON, Aug. 8. (Associated Press.)—During his address, which took about forty minutes to deliver, the President made an appeal for the ratification of the Peace Treaty to turn the country from a war basis. He said in part:

"There can be no peace so long as our whole financial and economic system is on a war basis. * * * While there is any possibility that the peace terms may be changed or may be held long in abeyance or may not be enforced because of divisions of opinion among the powers associated against Germany, it is idle to look for permanent relief."

"There can be no confidence in industry, no calculable basis for credits, no confident buying or systematic selling, no certain prospect of employment, no normal restoration of business, no hopeful attempt at reconstruction and the proper reassembling of the dislocated elements of enterprise until peace has been established, and, so far as may be, guaranteed."

The world, the President reminded Congress, must pay for the waste and waste of the war, and take the results of food fields turned to battle grounds. At the same time it must help Europe back to her normal state.

"We, and we almost alone, hold the world steady," said the President, "and it is in this supreme crisis—this crisis for all mankind—that America must prove her mettle."

His general recommendations to meet the burden of high living costs were:

Increase of production.

Careful buying by housewives.

No threats and undue insistence upon the interest of a single class.

Correction of "many things" in the relation between capital and labor in respect to wages and conditions of labor.

URGES DEFLATION TO CUT LIVING COSTS

Representative Fess Also Suggests Repeal of Wartime Laws and Control of Exports.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, May 8.—Gradual deflation of the currency, repeal of wartime legislation that maintains expensive Government agencies, and control of exports were proposed today by Representative Simon D. Fess of Ohio as remedies for the high cost of living.

"The high cost level," he said, "is due primarily to two fundamental items, both induced by the war. First, the item of labor makes up at least 30 per cent. of the average article of consumption. If the cost of labor is increased the price of the article must also increase. When Europe became involved in war the European countries began to compete against one another in the American market, which inevitably increased the scale of prices.

"When the United States entered the war the Government began to bid for labor. The prices were no consideration. The cantonments and aviation fields scoured the country for artificers. The shipyards invaded the labor market, paid great advances and an eight-hour day, with time and a half for overtime; paid transportation charges, and supplied houses.

"The Government at one stroke increased the labor employed at a given piece of work, advanced the wage scale, and shortened the day. All industry had to meet this scale, and at once passed it over to the public.

"To care for the immense Government operations, the Treasury Department enormously increased the issue of Federal Reserve notes, until today there is a per capita circulation of at least $57, nearly double what it was five years ago. This fact, considered in connection with the riot of Government expenditure of borrowed capital, further inflated the credit of the country until the dollar will buy not over half what it purchased before the war. The remedy here is gradually to deflate the currency until it reaches normalcy.

"Another item of the high level of cost is the wastefulness of the Government in all its operations. There are said to be 135,000 trucks held by the Government, many out in the weather deteriorating, with no effort to turn them on the market for fear of breaking the market. This material should at once be put on the market.

"Today, nine months after the end of the war, we still maintain the war machine, so far as many war agencies are concerned. Congress ought to repeal the war acts as soon as possible to force a peace basis.

"The Government should at once take steps to control the exports, as well as further foreign credit."

of supplies and of prices which are clearly in restraint of trade, and against these prosecutions will be promptly instituted and actively pushed which will in all likelihood have a prompt corrective effect.

There is reason to believe that the prices of leather, of coal, of lumber, and of textiles have been materially affected by forms of concert and co-operation among the producers and marketers of these and other universally necessary commodities which it will be possible to redress. No watchful or energetic effort will be spared to accomplish this necessary result. I trust that there will not be many cases in which prosecution will be necessary. Public action will no doubt cause many who have perhaps unwittingly adopted illegal methods to abandon them promptly and of their own motion.

And publicity can accomplish a great deal. The purchaser can often take care of himself if he knows the facts and influences he is dealing with; and purchasers are not disinclined to do anything, either singly or collectively, that may be necessary for their self-protection. The Department of Commerce, the Department of Agriculture, the Department of Labor, and the Federal Trade Commission can do a great deal toward supplying the public, systematically and at short intervals, with information regarding the actual supply of particular commodities that is in existence and available, and with regard to supplies which are in existence but not available because of hoarding, and with regard to the methods of price fixing which are being used by dealers in certain foodstuffs and other necessaries.

There can be little doubt that retailers are in part—sometimes in large part—responsible for exorbitant prices; and it is quite practicable for the Government through the agencies I have mentioned to supply the public with full information as to the prices at which retailers buy and as to the costs of transportation they pay, in order that it may be known just what margin of profit they are demanding. Opinion and concerted action on the part of purchasers can probably do the rest.

That is, these agencies may perform this indispensable service provided the Congress will supply them with the necessary funds to prosecute their inquiries and keep their price lists up to date. Hitherto the appropriation committees of the houses have not always, I fear, seen the full value of these inquiries, and the departments and commissions have been very much straitened for means to render this service.

That adequate funds be provided by appropriation for this purpose, and provided as promptly as possible, is one of the means of greatly ameliorating the present distressing conditions of livelihood that I have come to urge, in this attempt to concert with you the best ways to serve the country in this emergency. It is one of the absolutely necessary means, underlying many others, and can be supplied at once.

There are many other ways. Existing law is inadequate. There are many perfectly legitimate methods by which the Government can exercise restraint and guidance.

Let me urge, in the first place, that the present Food Control act should be extended, both as to period of time during which it shall remain in operation and as to the commodities to which it shall apply. Its provisions against hoarding should be made to apply not only to food, but also to feedstuffs, to fuel, to clothing, and to many other commodities which are indisputably necessaries of life. As it stands now, it is limited in operation to the period of the war and becomes inoperative upon the formal proclamation of peace.

But I should judge that it was clearly within the constitutional power of the Congress to make similar permanent provisions and regulations with regard to all goods destined for interstate commerce, and to exclude them from interstate shipment if the requirements of the law are not complied with. Some such regulation is imperatively necessary. The abuses that have grown up in the manipulation of prices by the withholding of foodstuffs and other necessaries of life cannot otherwise be effectively prevented. There can be no doubt of either the necessity or the legitimacy of such measures. May I not call attention to the fact, also, that, although the present act prohibits profiteering, the prohibition is accompanied by no penalty? It is clearly in the House interest that a penalty should be provided which will be persuasive.

For Regulation of Cold Storage.

To the same end I earnestly recommend, in the second place, that the Congress pass a law regulating cold storage as it is regulated, for example, by the laws of the State of New Jersey, which limit the time during which goods may be kept in storage, prescribe the methods of disposing of them if kept beyond the permitted period, and require that goods released from storage shall in all cases bear the date of their receipt.

It would materially add to the serviceability of the law, for the purpose we now have in view, if it were also prescribed that all goods released from storage for interstate shipment should have plainly marked upon each package the selling or market price at which they went into storage. By this means the purchaser would always be able to learn what profits stood between him and the producer or the wholesale dealer.

It would serve as a useful example to the other communities of the country, as well as greatly relieve local distress, if the Congress were to regulate all such matters very fully for the District of Columbia, where its legislative authority is without limit.

I would also recommend that it be required that all goods destined for interstate commerce should in every case, where their form or package makes it possible, be plainly marked with the price at which they left the hands of the producer. Such a requirement would bear a close analogy to certain provisions of the Pure Food Act, by which it is required that certain detailed information be given on the labels of packages of food and drugs.

And it does not seem to me that we can confine ourselves to detailed measures of this kind, if it is indeed our purpose to assume national control of the processes of distribution. I take it for granted that that is our purpose and our duty. Nothing less will suffice. We need not hesitate to handle a national question in a national way. We should go beyond the measures I have suggested.

We should formulate a law, requiring a Federal license of all corporations engaged in interstate commerce and embodying in the license, or in the conditions under which it is to be issued, specific regulations designed to secure competitive selling and prevent unconscionable profits in the method of marketing. Such a law would afford a welcome opportunity to effect other much needed reforms in the business of interstate shipment and in the methods of corporations which are engaged in it; but for the moment I confine my recommendations to the object immediately in hand, which is to lower the cost of living.

May I not add that there is a bill now pending before the Congress which, if passed, would do much to stop speculation and to prevent the fraudulent methods of promotion by which our people are annually fleeced of many millions of hard earned money. I refer to the measure proposed by the Capital Issues Committee for the control of security issues. It is a measure formulated by men who know the actual conditions of business, and its adoption would serve a great and beneficent purpose.

We are dealing, gentlemen of the Congress, I need hardly say, with very critical and very difficult matters. We should go forward with confidence along the road we see, but we should also seek to comprehend the whole of the scene amidst which we act. There is no ground for some of the fearful forecasts I hear uttered about me, but the condition of the world is unquestionably very grave and we should face it comprehendingly.

The situation of our own country is exceptionally fortunate. We of all peoples can afford to keep our heads and to determine upon moderate and sensible courses of action which will insure us against the passions and distempers which are working such deep unhappiness for some of the distressed nations on the other side of the sea. But we may be involved in their distresses unless we help, and help with energy and intelligence.

The world must pay for the appalling destruction wrought by the great war, and we are part of the world. We must pay our share. For five years now the industry of all Europe has been slack and disordered. The normal crops have not been produced; the normal quantity of manufactured goods has not been turned out. Not until there are the usual crops and the usual production of manufactured goods on the other side of the Atlantic can Europe return to the former conditions; and it was upon the former conditions, not the present, that our economic relations with Europe were built up.

Help Europe or World Chaos Is Certain.

We must face the fact that unless we help Europe to get back to her normal life and production a chaos will ensue there which will inevitably be communicated to this country. For the present, it is manifest, we must quicken, not slacken, our own production. We, and we almost alone, now hold the world steady. Upon our steadfastness and self-possession depend the affairs of nations everywhere.

It is in this supreme crisis—this crisis for all mankind—that America must prove her mettle. In the presence of a world confused, distracted, she must show herself self-possessed, self-contained, capable of sober and effective action. She saved Europe by her action in arms; she must now save it by her action in peace. In saving Europe she will save herself, as she did upon the battlefields of the war. The calmness and capacity with which she deals with and masters the problems of peace will be the final test and proof of her place among the peoples of the world.

And, if only in our own interest, we must help the people overseas. Europe is our biggest customer. We must keep her going or thousands of our shops and scores of our mines must close. There is no such thing as letting her go to ruin without ourselves sharing in the disaster.

In such circumstances, face to face with such tests, passion must be discarded. Passion and a disregard for the rights of others have no place in the counsels of a free people. We need light, not heat, in these solemn times of self-examination and saving action. There must be no threats. Let there be only intelligent counsel, and let the best reasons win, not the strongest brute force. The world has just destroyed the arbitrary force of a military junta. It will live under no other. All that is arbitrary and coercive is in the discard. Those who seek to employ it only prepare their own destruction.

We cannot hastily and overnight revolutionize all the processes of our economic life. We shall not attempt to do so. These are days of deep excitement and of extravagant speech; but with us these are things of the surface. Every one who is in real touch with the silent masses of our great people knows that the old strong fibre and steady self-control are still there, firm against violence or any distempered action that would throw their affairs into confusion. I am serenely confident that they will readily find themselves, no matter what the circumstances, and that they will address themselves to the tasks of peace with the same devotion and the same stalwart preference for what is right that they displayed to the admiration of the whole world in the midst of war.

And I entertain another confident hope. I have spoken today chiefly of measures of imperative regulation and legal compulsion, of prosecutions and the sharp correction of selfish processes; and these no doubt are necessary. But there are other forces that we may count on besides those resident in the Department of Justice. We have just fully awakened to what has been going on and to the influences, many of them very selfish and sinister, that have been producing high prices and imposing an intolerable burden on the mass of our people. To have brought it all into the open will accomplish the greater part of the result we seek.

I appeal with entire confidence to our producers, our middlemen, and our merchants to deal fairly with the people. It is their opportunity to show that they comprehend, that they intend to act justly, and that they have the public interest sincerely at heart. And I have no doubt that housekeepers all over the country and every one who buys the things he daily stands in need of will presently exercise a greater vigilance, a more thoughtful economy, a more discriminating care as to the market in which he buys or the merchant with whom he trades than he has hitherto exercised.

Not the Time for Strikes Now.

I believe, too, that the more extreme leaders of organized labor will presently yield to a sober second thought and, like the great mass of their associates, think and act like true Americans. They will see that strikes undertaken at this critical time are certain to make matters worse, not better—worse for them and for everybody else.

The worst thing, the most fatal thing, that can be done now is to stop or interrupt production or to interfere with the distribution of goods by the railways and the shipping of the country. We are all involved in the distressing results of the high cost of living, and we must unite, not divide, to correct it.

There are many things that ought to be corrected in the relations between capital and labor, in respect of wages and conditions of labor, and other things even more far reaching, and I, for one, am ready to go into conference about these matters with any group of my fellow-countrymen who know what they are talking about and are willing to remedy existing conditions by frank counsel rather than by violent contest.

No remedy is possible while men are in a temper, and there can be no settlement which does not have as its motive and standard the general interest. Threats and undue insistence upon the interest of a single class make settlement impossible.

I believe, as I have hitherto had occasion to say to the Congress, that the industry and life of our people and of the world will suffer irreparable damage if employers and workmen are to go on in a perpetual contest as antagonists. They must, on one plan or another, be effectively associated. Have we not steadiness and self-possession and business sense enough to work out that result? Undoubtedly we have, and we shall work it out.

In the meantime—now and in the days of readjustment and recuperation that are ahead of us—let us resort more and more to frank and intimate counsel and make ourselves a great and triumphant nation by making ourselves a united force in the life of the world. It will not then have looked to us for leadership in vain.

spoke for the administrators of the Government tonight when he said:

"It is a message of hope and of confidence. In my opinion the President embraced in his recommendations a program that is practicable to the last degree, and one in which the public can place its full reliance. From top to bottom it has my unqualified indorsement."

Bitter Opposition Ahead.

That the President will get all of the features of his program through Congress without bitter opposition, or in fact that it will be adopted without considerable adjustment, is not probable from the note struck in most of the statements given. But it is probable that the most vital legislation sought, such as the extension of certain sections of the food control law, both as to scope and as to the period in which they shall be applicable, will be granted.

For instance, there seems little doubt that Congress will put teeth in the profiteering section of the food control law by supplying a wholesome penalty to discourage violations. Money also will be supplied, it is predicted, to make possible the carrying out of a nation-wide publicity campaign to acquaint the public with the price which the Government considers fair.

Unquestionably the President by his firm utterances today stiffened the backbone of Congress in connection with its dealings with the radical groups. The applause which greeted his remarks about governmental defiance of threats, and Government disapproval of efforts to overturn the industrial fabric, gave evidence of the hope that the great majority of the members had held that the President would assume such an attitude and give his normal support to the sentiment which has been growing in Congress during the last few days. It is perhaps a conservative statement that official Washington believes tonight that much will be accomplished in the fight against the mounting living costs as a result of the President's attitude and the developments which will come within the next few weeks.

In the House, the Democrats almost to a man expressed approval of the address which the President delivered. Champ Clark, former Speaker, acting as spokesman of sentiment, classified the message as "a great one." Republican leaders were frankly critical and it was noticeable during the delivery of the message in the House that there was little or no applause from the Republican representatives.

Speaker Gillett spoke of the message as "disappointing." He criticized the President for not having exercised the powers which he already holds, and expressed the opinion that the governmental departments already had sufficient appropriations. Speaker Mondell took the same general viewpoint, but said that if money actually was needed that it would be furnished. He disapproved of licensing regulations.

The attitude of the President toward the striking railway employes was applauded by the Republican representatives and especially by Chairman Esch of the House Interstate Commerce Committee, which is now holding hearings on the Plumb plan for the nationalization of the railways. Representative Nolan of California, a labor leader, was one of the few to take exception to the President's attitude on the strike question, saying that under no circumstances would labor surrender the right to strike.

Little favor was found among the Republican members of the House for the President's suggestion that the Peace Treaty must be ratified before conditions could radically be changed. Some House Republicans referred to this line of argument as a club held over the Senate. Representative Campbell, Chairman of the House Rules Committee, said that it was "tommyrot" to believe that the ratification of the Peace Treaty and the League of Nations covenant would "reduce the price of beefsteak."

There was a wide variety to the views expressed by members of the United States Senate. Here are some of the Senators' statements:

Lodge Praises Some Parts.

Senator Henry Cabot Lodge, Republican, Chairman of the Senate Foreign Relations Committee:

"In regard to the artificial and extortionate prices for the necessaries of life, I think the President made some very good and practical suggestions, and I am sure that Congress will deal with them at once. All that he said in regard to the labor situation was of a general character, but I agree with the intention conveyed by these general statements and trust they will be put into practice. The purpose of reducing the question of the treaty was obvious. We are at peace with Germany as a matter of fact. We are trading with Germany as a matter of fact.

"It is highly desirable that the treaty of peace with Germany should be ratified as soon as possible, and that is the desire of the Senate without regard to party. The wrong done to China in the case of Shantung is all that would delay the treaty if the League of Nations had not been fastened onto it.

"It took the President seven months to make the treaty. It has been in possession of the Senate barely one month and the Senate's responsibility and power are equal to that of the President. No other nation has yet ratified it except Great Britain, and it is perhaps not surprising that she ratified it quickly. It has not yet been acted upon by the French Chamber and has not been taken up at all in the French Senate; and with the exception of Chile I have heard of no other country which has as yet acted upon it.

"The Foreign Relations Committee has made every effort to expedite the consideration of the treaty, which occupies 268 quarto pages. It was necessary for the committee to read the treaty, which has been done. The committee has met every day, sat every morning, and sometimes in the afternoon also. They have also endeavored to secure information absolutely necessary for a proper consideration of the treaty.

"They have asked for certain documents and records which seem absolutely necessary for proper consideration. One of those requests put in three weeks ago was for the protest of three of our delegates against handing over the German rights in Shantung to Japan and also the report of the experts upon the same subject. This request has been ignored.

American Plan Not Received.

"The other request was for the American plan submitted to the commission on the league and for all records and minutes of the Peace Conference. The President informed the committee that those papers were not yet ready, and they have not been sent in. The committee, meantime, has heard three of the experts on the financial clauses and the Secretary of State on the general treaty. The Secretary of State is to conclude his evidence on Monday.

"The total amount of information received by the committee thus far from these witnesses, although quite full on the economic clauses, has been neither extensive nor sufficient. Consideration of the treaty will proceed much more rapidly when the committee can secure the information necessary for dealing with it properly.

"There is no desire on the part of either the committee or the Senate for the slightest delay, and no suggestion has been made in the Senate that there has been any delay. No undue delay has been intended in the Senate by any one and is not intended now. Some time has also been taken up dealing with the Colombian treaty and the special request of the Administration."

Senator G. N. Hitchcock, ranking Democratic member of the Foreign Relations Committee, said:

"I am enthusiastic about it. There was something in it that everybody applauded. I believe it will be effective. Personally I was particularly interested in what he said about the necessity of ratifying the Peace Treaty before we can get down to settled economic conditions. I believe that it will have the effect of speeding up the ratification of the treaty."

Senator Hitchcock added that he expected the treaty to be out of the Foreign Relations Committee in less than three weeks.

Brandegee Charges Unfairness.

Senator Brandegee, Republican, of Connecticut, said:

"The President has taken an unfair advantage of the high cost of living issue, and is endeavoring to use it to force through the League of Nations. If the President is so anxious for peace as he professes, let him agree to a reservation by the Senate providing that the United States does not consider itself obligated to Section 1 of the Peace Treaty, which is the League of Nations covenant. The Senate, in my opinion, is willing to co-operate with the President in every way effectively to reduce the cost of living, but it will not be stampeded into ratification of the Peace Treaty without drastic American reservations."

Senator Harding, Republican, of Ohio, said:

"I was very much pleased with the speech in many ways. I think the connection of the League of Nations with it was wholly unnecessary and very far-fetched."

Senator McCormick, Republican, of Illinois:

"Since conditions are so bad, why didn't the Attorney General get busy sooner? They have known that prices have been jumping since last January."

Senator King, Democrat, of Utah:

"It means that Sovietism will not dominate in the United States. It was a great American message. I heard that there was a program to organize a great strike now, tie up the transportation system and take over the railroads. Then, next Winter, when the people were shivering for want of coal, to organise another strike in the mines, cut off the country's fuel supply, and take over the mines. These things will not happen in view of this vigorous and fearless expression. No threats are going to affright the Government."

Senator Chamberlain, Democrat, of Oregon:

Sees Timely Warning to People.

"The message is a timely warning to the American people in its suggestion for deliberate consideration and judgment rather than for hasty and passionate or partisan action. There is no question but that legislation against profiteering and the enforcement of legislation now on the statute books will assist in relieving the situation with regard to soaring prices and the high cost of living, but as the President very forcefully suggested, peace must be established beyond peradventure before normal conditions can be restored and high cost of living abolished. In the meantime, the President's suggestion that all must aid in relieving the situation ought to be observed to the utmost."

Senator Nelson, Republican, of Minnesota:

"The President's address contained many glittering generalities, but most of his recommendations were good. I agree with much that he said, and shall assist in putting some of his recommendations into law."

Senator Watson, Republican, of Indiana:

"I am in thorough accord with the last part of the President's message, dealing with strikes and threats of strikes, particularly on the railroad lines of the country. Unless there is an absolute necessity that can be met in no other way, I should not approve his suggestion for an extension of the Food Control act and for putting the business of the country under a licensing system. If this is absolutely essential, it should be made only a very temporary measure."

Senator Fletcher, Democrat, of Florida:

"The President's message was great. It will reassure the country and go far toward settling unrest. It will have a most salutary and steadying effect among all the people everywhere. It covered in a logical, convincing, and statesmanlike way the present situation, and dealt with the present problems and their solution clearly and forcefully."

Senator Swanson, Democrat, of Virginia:

"The President's address was able, eloquent, and forceful. He presented the conditions and need of the present situation very clearly and effectively."

Reed Opposes Trade Licenses.

Senator Reed, Democrat, of Missouri:

"I have been asked what I have to say about that part of the President's message which proposes a licensing system for business. I am in favor of the enforcement, and, if necessary, the strengthening of laws to prevent combinations and forestall artificial control of prices. But I am opposed to putting the business of the country in leading strings to be manipulated by a lot of Jacks in Washington."

Senator Pomerene, Democrat, of Ohio:

"The most significant part of the message is the warning to that class of people who stand here not to petition for legislation, but to order it. The American people are going to run this country. And it will not submit to class dictation of any kind from any source. A word to the wise is sufficient. The excessive prices for the necessaries of life are concerned. Those who control the supplies and fix the prices to gratify their selfish designs must remember that the American people are very patient, but there is a point beyond which they will not tolerate continued abuses."

Senator Underwood, Democrat, of Alabama:

"The President's message was clear, forceful, and, in my opinion, expressed what are the foremost thoughts in the mind of the American people. I have no doubt that the Congress and the people of the country will respond to the proposals made by the President with beneficial results to all."

"So far as I am concerned, the President has got all the power he will ever get from the Committee on Agriculture. I do not agree with him that additional legislation is necessary to reach the profiteers. They can be prosecuted under the Sherman Anti-Trust law as being guilty of restraint in trade. At a meeting this morning there seemed to be general agreement that we should repeal food control legislation rather than extend it; but if the President is going to commandeer grain at his own price, just as though we were in war, it probably will be better to leave the guarantee on. The President's argument that the Peace Treaty should be ratified I regard as a club to force favorable action by the Senate."

Senator Capper, Republican, of Kansas:

"I agree with the President that many commodities should be subjected to Federal licensing system, but I think we should start first with the packers. The suggestion that the prices paid by the retailers should be stamped on commodities offered for sale is a good one—a plan I have advocated in my paper for some time. It would prevent retailers selling shoes that they now pay $8 and $10 a pair for to the consumer at $25.

"The capital issues provision of the President's message is particularly good. There is no doubt that in recent months millions of dollars in Liberty bonds have been traded for worthless oil and mining stocks, and in the end the public really pays for this loss."

Renews Confidence, Says Pittman.

Senator Pittman, Democrat, of Nevada: "The message renews confidence, dispels fear, and appeals to the justice and patriotism of all Americans. He will get the support for which he appealed."

Senator Walsh, Democrat, of Montana: "It was characterized by the President's remarkably clear thinking and forceful expression. It undoubtedly will have a steadying influence upon the country, much needed at this time."

Senator Thomas, Democrat, of Colorado: "The President's address was timely, temperate and appropriate. If all the people, merchants, manufacturers, wage earners, producers, and consumers, will heed his suggestion and keep their heads, co-operate in obtaining better and less turbulent conditions, suppress their passions, and listen to reason, we can and will pass safely through the pending crisis."

Senator Williams, Democrat, of Mississippi: "The Lodges and Knoxes, et al, will say he is a mere 'visionary' and 'idealist' and 'dreamer,' and his monopolistic and profiteering enemies will still denounce him as a sentimentalist, but his sentiment is that of the ennobled part of humanity, and his dreams are of those 'dreams which come true.'"

Senator Gerry, Democrat, of Rhode Island: "As usual the President has justified the belief of the people in his great qualities of leadership. His speech today went to the heart of our difficulties, and the remedies he proposed were so practical that they will appeal to all thoughtful citizens."

Senator McKellar, Democrat, of Tennessee: "I think the President's address was admirable. If the Congress will proceed along the lines suggested by him, as I am sure it will, the problem of the high cost of living will be solved."

Senator Owen, Democrat, of Oklahoma: "I was delighted at the splendid tone of the President's message. His suggestions will prove of great value if Congress and the country will vigorously act along the lines suggested."

Senator Freylinghuysen, Republican, of New Jersey: "I think there are certain suggestions that Congress can carry out. I don't believe the majority of the people desire a licensing system, though it may be necessary in some instances."

Senator Johnson, Republican, of California: "I listened carefully to the President, and I shall read what he said and study it with still more care before I will be ready to discuss it."

Praise from House Democrats.

Democrats in the House of Representatives generally spoke of the President's message in favorable terms. Champ Clark, former Speaker, characterized it as "a great message." Republicans, headed by Speaker Gillett and Floor Leader Mondell, were inclined to be critical, although they applauded the President's stand against radical demands of certain branches of organized labor.

Among the comments were the following:

Speaker Gillett said: "I am deeply disappointed by the President's message. High prices are the country's most grievous burden, and I had hoped that, enlightened by this great force of experts, he had called us together to point out some practical remedies. But he gave us only a beautiful appeal for class harmony.

"His recommendation for Federal licenses of all corporations engaged in interstate commerce, giving an administration ominous influence over the industries and the wealth of the country, will hardly be granted save as a last resort and where the powers already existing have been exercised vigorously and successfully. No such condition exists today."

Floor Leader Mondell said: "I have not had time carefully to digest the President's message as I had no intimation of its contents until it was delivered. So far as offering any practical suggestions for the early reduction of the high cost of living the message is a distinct disappointment. The public, however, will welcome the promised change from the attitude of measureless and unfathomable apathy which has characterized the administration in its attitude toward the advancing cost of living.

"The suggestion in the President's message that more funds will be needed to enable the departments to enforce the laws comes as a surprise in view of the fact that little more than a month has elapsed since the departments received their annual appropriations, and in view of the further fact that up to this hour no suggestions have been received in the way of additional estimates.'

"The linking up by the President of the high cost of living with the establishment of peace, and inferentially the ratification of the Peace Treaty, is more cunning and ingenuous than convincing. It would be difficult to persuade the American people that the high cost of living is to any considerable extent involved in the issue of the League of Nations."

Scoffs at League Plea.

Representative Campbell of Kansas, Chairman of the Rules Committee, said: "It was to the point except the idea of using the League of Nations as a club to bring down the price of beefsteak. That was tommyrot. The rest is very good. The President's warning to organized labor against intemperate threats of strikes should prove wholesome and beneficial. Vigorous enforcement of the laws now existing, as the President promises, will afford a great measure of relief."

Representative Esch, Chairman of the Committee on Interstate and Foreign Commerce, said: "Some of the statements in reference to threats are very appropriate, and ought to have a beneficial effect in the pending railroad situation. I think some of his suggestions as to legislation designed to prevent excessive prices of foods are reasonable and can be carried out."

Representative Haugen of Iowa, Chairman of the Agricultural Committee, said: "The extension of the world production act affords no excuse for the delay in the prosecution of the packers after thirteen months. Concerning including clothing in the Food Control act, I congratulate the President on coming over to our side. We fought for that two weeks here."

Representative Nolan of California, acknowledged union labor leader in Congress, said: "Labor does not expect to sit idly by and starve while the President hands out glittering generalities of how to reduce the cost of living. Labor will not give up its right to strike now, if its demands for higher wages or lower living costs are not met. The President should have acted before."

Representative Garland of Pennsylvania, Republican, member of a railway brotherhood, said: "I think his plans are acceptable, and I believe Congress will do all possible to solve the situation."

Representative Fess of Ohio, Chairman of the Republican Congressional Committee, said: "It is unfortunate that his stand as to threats was not taken in 1916, when he asked Congress to surrender to the demands for wage increases, as embodied in the Adamson act. The address was greatly weakened by his use of the necessity for reducing the high cost of living as a special plea for the League of Nations."

Representative Reavis of Nebraska, Chairman of the sub-committee investigating Quartermaster stores, said: "The President's appeal to the distress of the people with the idea of coercing the Senate into ratification of the treaty was reprehensible and unworthy of him. So far as extension of the Food Control act is concerned, there would be no justification for it in peace times, and it would be an interference with the business life of the nation. No one can tell how long it will take to ratify the treaty."

Representative Kahn of California, Chairman of the Military Committee, said: "The President spent a good part of his time telling us there were already laws on the statute books to deal with most of the profiteers. Instead of calling attention to facts of which we were already cognizant he should have spent his time telling department chiefs to get busy. I regret that the President has not seen fit to enforce the laws that we already have.

Representative Coady of Maryland, Democrat, a member of the House Interstate Commerce Committee, said: "It ranks with his declaration of war speech, and is one of the greatest ever made. It presented an array of vital facts and offered a program of remedy, concise, intelligible, reasonable, and not to be avoided."

OUTLINES $10 FLOUR PLAN.

Julius H. Barnes, United States Wheat Director, made public a plan whereby the United States Grain Corporation would sell flour at $10 a barrel. Restrictions are proposed on the price to be charged by wholesalers, jobbers, and retailers. The flour will be sold in 140-pound sacks on a basis of $10 in the territory west of the Illinois and Indiana line, and west of the Mississippi, from Cairo to the Gulf of Mexico, not including the Pacific Coast region, and at $10.25 in the remainder of the country.

Jobbers and wholesalers must guarantee to resell to retailers at not more than 75 cents additional, and retailers are confined to an increase of not more than $1.25 over the wholesale price for the original packages, and not higher than 7 cents a pound for broken packages of any size.

The Grain Corporation also announced that its weekly purchase at Baltimore of wheat flour packed for export was 1,051,013 barrels, at prices ranging from $9.80 to $10.40 per barrel.

MUST REPORT FOOD IN STORAGE HERE

29 Warehouses Served with Subpoenas Requiring Data for Federal Grand Jury.

WILL PUNISH HOARDERS

District Attorney Bell to Demand Limit of Law in All Convictions.

The campaign for the prosecution of violations of the Lever food act began here and in Jersey City yesterday when the local United States District Attorneys served subpoenas on each of the twenty-nine cold storage warehouses in Manhattan and the Bronx, requiring them to submit to the Federal Grand Jury next Tuesday all records which will indicate the amount of food they have in storage and the owners thereof. It was announced by Assistant United States District Attorney Benjamin A. Matthews that similar subpoenas will be issued shortly to all warehouses containing non-perishable food.

In the Eastern District of New York, which includes all of Long Island and Staten Island, an investigation was begun by United States District Attorney James D. Bell. He called upon Marshal James M. Power and the Police Commissioner to assist him in securing evidence of the violation of the food law, announcing that sentences of two years in jail and fines of $5,000, the limit of punishment, would be demanded in all convictions.

Throughout the Eastern District agents of the Department of Justice visited all refrigerating plants. Inspections were also made in Jersey City, where Armour & Co., Swift & Co., Wilson & Co., Morris & Co., and Cudahy & Co., have warehouses. At a recent meeting of the Jersey City Commissioners it was stated by Commissioner James F. Gannon that an appraisal of the contents of a warehouse in Jersey City for taxing purpose had disclosed that it contained $5,000,000 worth of meats, chicken, butter, cheese and other foods which he believed were kept out of the market for higher prices.

Letter With Subpoena.

The letter addressed to the cold storage houses in Manhattan and the Bronx reads as follows:

Aug. 8, 1919.

Gentlemen:

The accompanying subpoena calls for the production of certain documents and papers in your possession before the Federal Grand Jury, Aug. 12, 1919. It is desired to secure promptly all the data from which it may be determined whether or not there exist violations of the hoarding provisions of the food control law.

It would facilitate the Grand Jury and also this office, and perhaps your concern, if you could have the information called for in the subpoena, and such additional information as, in your opinion, has a bearing thereon, tabulated and forwarded immediately to this office.

Data not covered by the information you so furnish can thereafter be called for at the convenience of the Grand Jury. If you comply with this suggestion it will not be necessary for the present to produce your original records.

I am counting on your co-operation in assisting this office to arrive at the facts in connection with the food situation.

Respectfully,
FRANCIS G. CAFFEY,
United States Attorney.

The subpoenas call for the production of all records and information covering the following matters:

"(1 List of food products of all kinds in your custody or control, stating quantity of each lot. (2) Names and addresses of owners of each lot of food products in your custody; date each separate lot of food products was acquired or received by you. (3) All contracts covering all of the food products in your custody or control. (4) Contracts covering food products to be acquired by you. (5) Your estimate of the quantity of each class of food products to supply your normal trade for one month."

Prepare for Food Sale.

The force of the Department of Public Markets began yesterday to work out the detail of the sale of the surplus army food which will be placed on sale for the people of the city on Monday, Aug. 18, or soon thereafter. Deputy Commissioners O'Malley and Smith conferred with Captain A. A. Stewart, in charge of army surplus supplies, and it was learned that much of the army food which will be sold to New Yorkers is stored in the city or near by.

Collector of the Port Byron R. Newton announced that he had made arrangements with the War Department to supply the 6,000 Government employes in the eight custom districts under his supervision, extending from Coney Island to Yonkers, with part of the army surplus food. The sale will begin on Monday in Room 135 of the Custom House. Those living or working near the Custom House have been requested to bring their own paper and twine, while to the other sub-districts the foodstuffs will be sent by truck to be distributed from the main office of each sub-district.

Some of the items to be sold and the prices to be charged are as follows: 100 cases tinned bacon, 36 cents a pound; corned beef, two-pound tin, 66 cents per tin; corned beef hash, one-pound tin, 23 cents per tin; tomatoes, No. 2, 11 cents; tomatoes, No. 3, 15 cents; wax beans, No. 2, 11 cents; stringless beans, No. 2, 11 cents; corn, No. 2, 12 cents; peas, No. 2, 12 cents; pumpkin, No. 2, 6 cents; squash, No. 2, 6 cents; pork and beans, No. 2, 11 cents.

The 3,000 sugar-cured hams will be sold, one to each employe, at 31 cents a pound, and the 10,000 strips of bacon will be sold at 35 cents per pound.

One of the proposals to solve the food situation was made yesterday on postal cards sent to the members of Congress and signed "Food Producers' Union," without any address. The message read: "With Chinese farm labor, under contract for five years at $30 a month and feed themselves, food can be produced at low cost; otherwise not. Agriculturists are tired of being made the goat and now pass the buck to Congress. Low-cost farm labor provided in time to sow the Winter grains means low-priced food in one year. It's up to you."

ISSUE PRICE LIST FOR ARMY FOODS

Cost to Government Disregarded and Quotations Are Lower Than Prevailing Rates.

WASHINGTON, Aug. 8.—The War Department made public today a complete price list on all subsistence stores available for sale to the public through the parcels post or through municipal selling agencies. Costs of the commodities to the Government, the Department said, had been disregarded entirely in fixing the prices of sale, which are materially lower than prevailing market rates.

The prices quoted are f. o. b. from storage points in each of the thirteen districts into which the country is divided for War Department subsistence purposes. The department now is redistributing the food supplies in the thirteen areas in order that each may have its proportion per population of the seventy-two articles offered for public sale.

The price tables include the price per can or individual units in each case, and also the price per case or larger container. It also shows the gross weight per can and per case in order that the public may arrive at the price they will have to pay by adding parcel post rates from the nearest distributing point to the home of the consumer to the f. o. b. prices quoted.

Municipal selling agencies will compute freight charges on these shipments to be added to the price quoted by the War Department. On the parcel post distribution no orders will be received direct by the War Department, but only through the Post Office Department, which will make requisition for the supplies by case or larger package, the Postmasters in turn breaking these shipments up into unit packages of a single can or several cans.

Sales to municipalities at the new prices will begin as soon as the surplus property officers at the various zone supply offices and depots have received the quotations made public today. Sales to individuals through the parcel post will be inaugurated on Aug. 18, and before that time all Postmasters will have a price quotation list from which the consumer may order.

The department emphasized that no change in the policy of sales to municipalities had been made, the only alteration being in prices. If a municipality is unable to buy or sell foodstuffs, owing to its charter or local laws, the department will ship to it upon consignment subsistence stores in not less than case or carton lots, the goods to be paid for or returned within thirty days from date of receipt. Shipments of this character, however, will be made only when the Mayor or head of the local government either acts as the Federal Government's agent and supervises the distribution of the food, or appoints someone to so act.

Although only seventy-two food staples are enumerated in the price list, the itemized quotations, owing to the variety of packing, are quite lengthy. Quotations on some of the leading commodities are: Bacon, $4.15 a can of 17 pounds; corned beef, 55 cents for a can of 1.36 pounds; baked beans, 5 cents for a can of 1¼ pounds; salted corn, 10 cents a 2¼-pound can; dry beans, $6.49 a hundred pounds; crackers, 5 and 6 cents a pound; army flour, $6 a hundred pounds; macaroni, 7 cents for 1½ pounds; rolled oats, 12 cents for two pounds; seeded raisins, 10 cents a pound; rice, $6.74 a hundred pounds; tomatoes, 9 cents a two-pound can, and white corn meal, $3.50 a hundred pounds.

WANT WHEAT PRICE GUARANTEE ABOLISHED

WASHINGTON, Aug. 8.—Repeal of the Government price guarantee for wheat, to enable farmers to obtain higher prices, was urged at a special meeting today of the Senate Agricultural Committee. Action by the committee was deferred. Senator Norris of Nebraska proposed the repeal of the guarantee, and T. C. Atkeson, Washington representative of the National Grange, indorsed it.

Senator Norris, Chairman Gronna, and other committee members said that the wheat price guarantee law had not been carried out. The $2.26 guarantee, they asserted, was intended by Congress to be the minimum price, with a higher price possible under the law of supply and demand. Instead, they asserted, the United States Grain Corporation had made the minimum guarantee the maximum price for the farmer.

Mr. Atkeson told the committee that the farmer would receive an average of only $1.50 a bushel for wheat this year. He and Senator Gronna asserted that had the Government not fixed the price, farmers would receive much more than the guarantee because of the prospective wheat shortage and world demand.

Mr. Atkeson said that the Grain Corporation had made large profits from wheat sales which the farmer should have received. He added that the proposal to have the Government buy all wheat at $2.26, and sell it to the consumer at $1 a bushel would be "a subsidy to our blessed city population."

Complaints against grading of wheat were made by Senators Curtis and Capper. Senator Curtis said he had complained to President Barnes of the Grain Corporation without result.

Senator Poindexter, referring to President Wilson's plan for additional legislation to lower the cost of living, said that the difficulties of the situation were "due largely to Government action as war measures."

Chairman Gronna asserted that Government agencies were "refusing to do anything" to lower the cost of living and that Congress was not at fault.

John A. McSparran, Master of the Pennsylvania Grange, urged an organization to advise the American public of the facts in the food situation as it affects the farmers.

"The Department of Agriculture should have done it, but it has not," said McSparran. "The people are 'kicking' at paying $2.26 for wheat when they are paying $36 a bushel in the form of shredded wheat. Corn is selling at $1.90, and the people are paying $12 a bushel in the form of toasted corn flakes. The Quaker Oats Company made 104 per cent. profit on its investment last year."

Senator Norris said there was general public misconception of the farmers' interests in the food situation.

"The people think the farmers are getting $2.26 for wheat, and they are not," he went on. "The people don't know that they are paying enormous profits to the middleman."

A proposal by Senator Norris that Chairman Gronna and the representatives of the grange organizations issue a statement to the public, giving the facts of the food situation, was approved by the committee.

Senator Norris said that he thought it would be "a good idea" to introduce a bill for repeal of "every vestige of every statute" fixing wheat prices.

Senator France, Republican, of Maryland, said that Congress was responsible for much blame regarding food prices.

"We passed laws," he said, "in violation of every economic law at the dictation of men who didn't know what they were talking about."

"You're absolutely right," Chairman Gronna commented; "but Mr. Hoover refused to agree to fixing a maximum price for wheat."

Senator France held that the food control law had not been properly administered. Meat prices, he charged, were fixed by the Food Administration "behind closed doors" which gave the packers, who had representatives on the board, exorbitant profits.

MAYORS OPEN FOOD FIGHT.

Mayors and other public officials of twenty-five cities, towns, boroughs, and villages in New Jersey met yesterday in the office of Mayor Charles P. Gillin, in the Newark City Hall, to discuss methods of reducing the cost of living, especially with reference to the purchase of army surplus food. Mayor Gillen urged co-operation on the part of the various towns so that they might go into the food business temporarily and by competition force down the prices of food. Mayor Slayback favored passing a resolution calling upon Congress "to stop all this fussing about the League of Nations and to get down to business on the food situation."

Mayor Gillen was elected Chairman of the Committee of Mayors. He was authorized to appoint a committee of five to draft resolutions and to carry them to Washington for presentation to the President and Congress. The committee was instructed to obtain a hearing before the Congressional Food Investigating Committee.

Commissioner Underwood Cochran of Atlantic City suggested that Mayor Gillen invite every Mayor in New Jersey to go to Washington with the committee to impress upon Congress the importance of New Jersey's demand for action. Mayor Gillen stated he would do so.

Among the places represented and the officials present were: Borough of Roosevelt, Mayor Joseph A. Hermann; Perth Amboy, Mayor Frank Dorsey; Long Branch, Mayor Marshal Wooley; Rahway, Mayor D. H. Trembley; Elizabeth, Mayor Victor Mravlag; Verona, Mayor D. H. Slayback; New Brunswick, Mayor John J. Morrison; Bradley Beach, Mayor Frank C. Borden; Irvington, Mayor Edward R. Folsom, and Montclair, City Commissioner John Picken.

WARNS OF BLUNDERS IN FOOD CONTROL

TELLS OF FRENCH RESULTS

Rise in Costs Nearly Twice as Much There—Power to Seize Stocks Urged.

By WALTER DURANTY.

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

PARIS, Aug. 6.—"The high cost of living in France is due to substantially the same causes as in America, but there are certain factors here and in the rest of Europe which render the situation more acute than it is in your country," said one of the most competent authorities on the subject in Paris.

"In the United States, as in France," he continued, "there are abnormal currency inflation, transportation difficulties, profiteering, and excess of demand over supply as a result of the narrow supplies available pending the next harvest. The French problem is greatly complicated by the very unfavorable exchange, a vast decrease in home production as a result of the war, lack of oversea transport, with high freight rates and deteriorated rolling stock and roadbeds in France.

"Food production in America has never been so abundant. Your exchange is the highest among the nations that took part in the war, and your transportation, though temporarily somewhat disorganized by strikes, has not suffered from war, as is the case in France.

"The result is that, although food prices have risen, they are relatively far lower than here. The average American cost figure stands at 200, as compared with the pre-war 100, whereas the French average has now reached 380.

Decries Wheat Price Plans.

"This startling difference ought to show the utter futility of the plan I see being suggested in America, that the Government sell wheat at a much lower price than is paid to the farmers. Not only does the money lost by the Government in such a deal come ultimately out of the consumer's pocket in the form of taxation, but it is also a fallacy to suppose that other food prices will fall automatically if bread is cheapened.

"Why, France has been doing that very thing ever since the beginning of the war, and, as I say, prices here have increased nearly twice as much as in America.

"Moreover, you have no idea of the practical difficulties involved. We are forced to have official inspectors in all flour mills—for wheat is sold to the millers, as it would be impossible to deal with every baker in the country—to prevent fraud, for which there is great temptation in the comparatively simple operation of the miller selling his cheap wheat back to the farmer, so that he can in turn resell it to the Government at the higher rate.

"I understand that there are upward of 18,000 flour mills in the United States. That means 18,000 new officials at the outset, to say nothing of the dangerous opportunities for graft.

Can Control Prices of Staples.

"I assure you that France would gladly be quit of this system if we knew how to manage it without trouble. But in this country bread forms an exceedingly large proportion of the national diet and there would be tremendous outcry if its price were suddenly raised.

"As a matter of fact, I don't believe that people generally realize that a certain limited number of staples form in themselves over 90 per cent. of the nation's food. Even in America bread makes up 20 per cent. of the diet total, and fats another 20, while beef, pork, and sugar account for most of the remainder. People will make more fuss over a rise of 10 cents a dozen in eggs than a cent a pound in bread, yet eggs, fish, and poultry lumped together make up less than 2 per cent. of the national food consumption.

"It is the fact that nearly all the nation's food depends on five or six commodities, which makes food control a comparatively simple matter if it is handled right.

"The system in vogue in the United States during the war of fixing a fair wholesale price by agreement between the producers and the food authorities, then adding legitimate profits, by similar agreement, for intermediaries and retailers, worked admirably and is now being copied in France. Unfortunately, the French plan, as outlined to date, does not go far enough. It is too platonic in character, and depends for success not only on the good-will of the merchants in displaying 'normal' price lists when they have been drawn up, but also on the action of consumers on their own behalf, firstly, in demanding that lists be so displayed, and, secondly, in refusing to purchase from merchants who do not display them or who exceed the scheduled prices.

Wants Direct Sales to Public.

"Our authorities ought also to be empowered to requisition foodstuffs if necessary, and even to sell direct to the public should the occasion require it. In the final instance that is the only way in which dealers who refuse to lower prices can be brought to reason.

"Anything less sweeping in the way of maximum price fixing is inadequate, because experience has shown in every country that the establishment of maximum prices simply entails the disappearance of supplies from the market, because merchants prefer to make big profits by clandestine business—in which, unfortunately, there are always purchasers ready to second them—than the small gains afforded by fixed-price trading in the open.

"At the same time care must be taken in apportioning normal prices, as under the American system the wholesale rate is not fixed so low as to discourage producers. The result of that would simply be that in the following season the commodity in question would be abnormally scarce, because it would not pay to produce it.

"The importance of such factors cannot be overestimated, and this, too, is one of the dangers of the allied pool for the combined purchase of supplies abroad, such as is now in process of reestablishment. Advocates of the idea declare that it will permit the purchase of, say, American fats at a much lower price than would be the case if France, England, and Italy were competing in the American market.

"This is true enough, but if through the absence of competition the Americans are forced to sell their fats at a price too low to be worth their while, we shall find that next year there will not be any American fats for us to buy, and that will mean famine. The American producers will only turn out enough for the home market, and devote themselves to other more profitable products instead.

"It might be imagined that the readmission of the Central Empires to foreign markets would maintain prices. Indeed, the expectation that this would be the case caused a considerable amount of more or less speculative buying, directly the armistice was signed. But in point of fact the Central Powers are not buying to anything like the extent anticipated. They prefer to tighten their belts and ration strictly the food they have rather than buy abroad with their terribly depreciated currency any more than is absolutely necessary.

"France might do worse than follow their example. Reduced consumption and hard work, not only to produce more food but other commodities whose sale will improve our exchange, is the best and shortest road to national reconstruction."

NOULENS SEES TRADE UPSET.

By WALTER DURANTY.

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

PARIS, Aug. 8.—"France's greatest difficulty in solving the food problem is transportation both by sea and land," said Food Minister Noulens today.

The Minister fully realizes the effects of inflated currency, reduced production, and profiteering on the food situation, but considers the two former evils a matter of slow and gradual elimination and hopes that they will be scotched, if not killed, by his system of normal price lists. He continued:

"When the armistice was signed every one made the same mistake of supposing that the return to the pre-war basis of free commerce without Government control was immediately possible. We are paying for that error now. In point of fact, it was impossible that the highly complicated machinery of food supply, transportation, and sale which had been replaced during the war by Government management, should recommence to function again, as it were, automatically.

"One of the leading food importers in the country said to me recently, 'to reestablish trade freedom overnight was as if the Captain of an ocean liner should set a passenger adrift in a small boat in mid-Atlantic and say to him: "Now you are perfectly free to finish the passage at your own sweet will."'

"Both sea borne traffic and that of the railroads had been regulated for four and a half years, with only one end in view—to win the war. To that purpose everything possible was sacrificed, with the result that available sea transport was greatly reduced, and the railroads greatly deteriorated.

"Strikes, too, and accidents, whose cause appears to be connected with wilful sabotage, have increased the difficulties tenfold.

"During the last month France has complained that sugar and chilled meat were almost unobtainable. Well, mysterious fires on shipboard have brought about the loss of no less than 70,000 tons of sugar, and the strikes at the Atlantic ports have completely held up the movement of foreign meats.

"Ask any railroad man how hard it is to restart the traffic stream running smoothly after a serious tie-up. One week's blockade means months of difficulty and delay.

"Now, however, things look better. The labor elements in this country at last appear to have realized that interference with the traffic flow represents national suffering and danger. At the same time we have concluded an arrangement with England and other Allies whereby a sufficiency of freight tonnage will be placed at our disposal for the transport of food from abroad and from our colonies, where there are very large stocks awaiting shipment.

"Then, too, the Railroad Administration is hard at work getting the lines back into shape and eliminating sources of delay. For the moment they are hampered by the demands of demobilization, but by the time that is finished, provided there are no further strikes, I hope everything will be running smoothly.

"There remains another difficulty, the sale of food from the importer or producer to the consumer. I propose to deal with this by the publication of weekly normal price lists drawn up by mutual agreement between different parties concerned.

"We borrowed the outlines of the scheme from Mr. Hoover's system in the United States, but in point of fact the idea goes back a long way further, as something very similar was established by the Roman Emperor Diocletian during a period of dear food at Rome after a war.

"The first of these lists should appear at the end of this week. There will be one for every department of France and where necessary separate lists for cities or large towns.

"It has been objected, firstly, that it is a matter of practical impossibility to draw up a list that will satisfy all of the parties concerned; secondly, that the scheme relies too much on the good-will of merchants who are not compelled by law to observe the list prices; thirdly, that I am asking too much of the consumer in suggesting that he should defend his own interests. Critics point out that a similar plan in force in Paris in 1915-16 proved cumbrous and unsuccessful.

"Well, to begin with, I have great faith in average human nature. I believe that a majority of the food traders are honest and will support the system unequivocally. The remainder will be compelled to follow in their own interests. The business men concerned approve the plan heartily, and we had no such difficulty in drawing up lists as has been suggested.

"M. Pascalis, President of the Paris Chamber of Commerce, is one of the strongest supporters of the new plan, and many retailers, both small and large, declare the list system to be of the utmost value to them in revealing inordinate profits hitherto made by intermediaries at whose mercy they formerly were, but whom they now are able to avoid.

"As for the consumer protecting himself, there is no comparison possible with 1916. Then the food problem was not acute and the war dominated the thoughts of all. Now the public attention is concentrated on the food question almost to the exclusion of everything else, and I believe that the consumer is both ready and anxious to act on his own behalf. The number of consumers' leagues, &c., that are being formed everywhere proves that clearly enough.

"Another important point—in 1916 the lists were not clearly enough printed or prominently displayed. Now we shall have them in bold type on white paper. They will be published in the newspapers and should the retailers try to hide them away in a corner the public will soon insist that they be shown more openly.

"Still another and more serious objection is that the list system is too platonic in character—that it is not backed by sufficient authority to enforce its general observance. Doubtless infringements would be less probable if I had the power to imprison the culprits out of hand instead of depending on the comparatively slow process of law, but France would regard such power as undemocratic and would not, I think, accept it.

"I count rather on an aroused public opinion to compel observance.

"It must not be forgotten that while the Food Administration lacks authority to order the requisition of supplies and undertake their direct sale to the public with the purpose of meeting recalcitrant dealers by competition, there is one weapon in my hands which answers the same purpose quite effectively. I refer to the immense supplies to be or already imported by the Food Administration.

"We control these supplies absolutely and can meet opposition by their sale either to dealers who will observe my regulations or in vilgrain sheds, whose number, I hope, will be considerably augmented. For the practical purpose of reducing prices that will be just as good and far easier than wholesale requisition. It is too soon yet to boast, but I have every confidence that as far as the sale of food is concerned the new system will reduce prices and largely eliminate profiteering."

BRITISH CONDEMN 'ORGY OF SPENDING'

Aroused by Chamberlain's Declaration That the Country Is Headed for Bankruptcy.

DEMAND CURB IN COMMONS

London Paper Wants Army and Navy Cut—American Readjustment Watched.

LONDON, Aug. 8.—Great Britain's financial condition, which J. Austen Chamberlain, Chancellor of the Exchequer, told the House of Commons last night showed that the country was headed for bankruptcy, was brought forward today by the newspapers as the most vital problem of the hour, even overshadowing labor troubles.

The Chancellor's statement recently that British expenses were $4,500,000 daily came as a distinct shock to the country, but was emphasized by the details given by Mr. Chamberlain last night. It was remarked by some of the newspapers that this constituted a criticism of the Cabinet of which he is a member, but his view was endorsed by Premier Lloyd George.

Virtually every newspaper in London today joined a chorus of condemnation of the national expenditures. Newspapers hostile to the Government criticised it for "its rash, wasteful extravagance." The House of Commons, it was remarked, was largely responsible because it surrendered the control of expenditures.

The Daily News said:

"Even the present House of Commons is at last aghast at the Government's reckless prodigality and its total lack of any policy designed to stay the country's headlong career toward bankruptcy."

The newspaper fixed on the army and navy as the chief causes of extravagance, condemned the maintenance of the present great military force, and deprecated the proposal in the United States to create "a standing army of half a million," which, it said, "may well be hailed as a setback to the whole cause of disarmament."

The Daily Mail, which announced that the forthcoming second report of the Air Ministry would contain revelations of extravagance more sensational than any yet divulged, said that the Government's extravagance was one of the direct causes of labor unrest. The paper added that if the present Government could not reduce expenses, one must be found that could do so.

The newspapers generally express the hope that the public, which so far has seemed unappreciative of the danger, may be roused to heed the Chancellor's warning.

The country is indulging in an orgy of spending, several of the newspapers remark, and is contributing thereby to the high cost of living. People who temporarily have relatively great wealth, it is said, are willing to pay any price rather than forego the gratification of their desires, so that, while the necessities of life are higher than ever, there never was so much money spent on luxuries. All those who deal in jewelry, automobiles, costly apparel, and entertainments of all sorts are said to be doing unprecedented business.

The cry against profiteers was said by the newspapers to be voiced by these reckless spenders as well as by the poor, but actual cases of profiteering are rarely followed up successfully. In this connection, it was said, the measures being taken in the United States to reduce the cost of living were being watched with much interest.

ACCUSED OF PROFITEERING.

Four Pittsburgh Sugar Men Held for Federal Court.

PITTSBURGH, Aug. 8.—George W. Sheehan, President and directing head of the Central Sugar Company, Chicago, and three representatives of the concern's local branch were held for the November term of the United States District Court by Federal Commissioner Edward F. Duffey, following a hearing here today on charges growing out of alleged sugar profiteering.

The four men were charged with conspiracy to violate Section 4 of the Federal Food act, which makes it unlawful to charge unreasonable prices for the necessities of life.

Evidence was introduced in the form of telegrams and letters in which, it is alleged, President Sheehan dictated to the local branch men that they must sell sugar at the price he suggested, and in which he predicted a sugar famine.

The President of a local biscuit company testified that his company had purchased 2,500 pounds of sugar wholesale from the Pittsburgh branch at 14 cents a pound. This sale caused the prosecution.

SEES OLD ECONOMICS' FALL.

British Food Official Finds "Supply and Demand" Not the Big Factor.

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

LONDON, Aug. 8.—C. A. MacCurdy, Parliamentary Secretary to the Ministry of Food, and Chairman of the Committee on Trusts, in the course of an article published in the London Chronicle discussing the control of prices by trusts and trade combines, says:

"A few months ago many people believed that as soon as we got rid of wartime restrictions and controls, restored freedom to individual enterprise and gave free play to the economic factor of competition, increased supplies and lower prices would necessarily result. Six months' experience of de-control has proved these expectations to be unfounded, at any rate so far as foodstuffs are concerned.

"The mistake we made was in supposing that in the world of 1919 the economic factors of competition and operation of what the old economists called the 'Law of Supply and Demand' are any longer determining factors in regulating world prices of commodities. We are, in fact, passing through a period of economic transformation in which free competition has to a very large extent ceased to exist, and in which prices are determined not by competition but by the control of great trade combinations and organizations which in one form or another, at some stage of production, transportation or distribution now load on in varying degrees the price of virtually everything we consume.

"Few people realize the extent to which economic conditions already have been transformed. We still use old political shibboleths without realizing how completely they have lost their meaning. We still speak of free trade but we are living in a world in which any real freedom of trade, as understood by Adam Smith or Richard Cobden, long ceased to exist.

"There are still those who repeat 'no tax on food' in reference, perhaps, to some small proposal with regard to the Dutch tax on tea, but who seem unconscious of the fact that today an international meat pool is able to tax an important part of our food supply at its pleasure.

"The tax on food is none the less a tax as the British housewife well knows, because it is imposed by a meat trust and not by the British Government."

AFTER BRITISH PROFITEERS.

Government Bill Provides Severe Punishment for Guilty Ones.

LONDON, Aug. 8.—The Government bill providing prosecution and penalties for persons guilty of profiteering, the text of which was made public today, empowers the Board of Trade to investigate prices, costs, and profits, and to investigate complaints of unreasonable profits, whether wholesale or retail.

After investigation the Board of Trade is authorized to declare what is a reasonable price and require that the article be sold at that price. In case of failure to sell articles at the price specified the board is empowered to take proceedings against offenders before a court of summary jurisdiction, which may inflict penalties not exceeding a fine of £200 or six months' imprisonment.

The Board of Trade may require local authorities to establish committees, to whom the board may delegate all its powers, with a regulation to provide right of appeal by dealers from any order or decision of the local committees, and may make provision for the prevention of frivolous complaints.

The Board of Trade may authorize local authorities, under prescribed conditions, to purchase and sell any article to which the act applies. The act will continue in force for six months unless Parliament directs otherwise.

GROCERS ASSAIL JOBBERS.

Retail grocers of the Bronx last night held a mass meeting at McKinley Square Casino, 169th Street and Boston Road, the Bronx, to band together against the jobbers in the grocery trade, to defeat what speakers called unfair methods.

Various retail grocers asserted that jobbers compelled them to buy from $100 to $200 worth of staple grocery articles before they can get 100 pounds of sugar.

A committee was appointed to wait upon the heads of the local sugar refineries with a view to changing this condition. The retail grocers stated in their addresses that there is no actual shortage in the sugar market.

WILSON TO ANSWER SENATE.

Belief That He Will Send In Peace Conference Documents.

WASHINGTON, Aug. 8.—President Wilson has completed his reply to the Senate resolutions asking for documents used by the American delegates at the Peace Conference, and it was said at the White House that it would be sent to the Senate tomorrow.

It was understood the President would send all the documents now in Washington.

FOUR FINNS SEIZED ON ANARCHY CHARGE

Prisoners Are First Ever Held in This State for Criminal Activity.

ONE UNDER $25,000 BAIL

For the first time in the history of this State a charge of criminal anarchy was preferred against four prisoners captured in an early morning raid yesterday on an apartment at 864 Cauldwell Avenue in the Bronx by members of the Bomb Squad under the command of Detective Sergeant Gegan.

The prisoners, all Finns, only one of whom had sought naturalization, gave their names as Gustave Alonen, 42 years old; Michael Idey, 31 years old; Matti Martins, 35 years old, all carpenters, and Martin Peltola, 35 years old, who said he was a butler. When arraigned before City Magistrate William Blau in the Harlem Police Court, Alonen was held under $25,000 bail and Idey and Peltola in bail of $5,000 each, for examination on Monday. Martins was discharged for lack of evidence. It is understood that he will be used as a witness against the others by the State.

The raid and arrests were the direct outcome of evidence presented before the legislative committee which is investigating seditious activities. It was stated last night on good authority that other arrests were likely as a result of disclosures made by secret agents of the legislative committee.

The four prisoners were arrested for activity in connection with the publication and circulation of the Lukkataistelu, (The Class Struggle,) a magazine printed in Finnish in this city. A number of articles, preaching bloody revolution and the forcible seizure of the Government by the proletariat were presented in evidence and read into the record at recent hearings of the legislative committee. The articles from the Lukkataistelu are by far the most inflammatory of all the radical outpourings that have found their way into the minutes of the committee.

Seek Men Behind Them.

Alonen, while he told the police that he was a carpenter by occupation, is said to have admitted to a secret agent of the Legislative Committee that he was the editor and publisher of the Lukkataistelu, and that the other prisoners held by Magistrate Blau were his assistants in the publication and circulation of the periodical. This story, however, is not accepted at its face value by the authorities, who are convinced that, while fairly intelligent, Alonen was never equal to the task of editing the Finnish magazine. They believe that somewhere in the background a man of greater influence and importance in the Red movement is lurking, who so far has contrived to elude the police and Secret Service agents.

While no direct evidence has been obtained by either the Legislative Committee, the District Attorney's office, or the office of Attorney General Charles D. Newton to indicate that the prisoners were in any way connected with the May and June bomb outrages, they will be closely questioned for the purpose of finding out if they know anything about them. One of the detectives who took part in the raid said that information had been received by the police to indicate that the Finns had been actively identified with one of the alien branches of the ultra-radical I. W. W., but had been expelled from that organization as too radical to fit in as members.

Assistant District Attorney Alexander I. Rorke, who appeared against the prisoners when arraigned, told Magistrate Blau that he regarded Alonen as the most important catch the police had made in many years and urged that bail be fixed for the exceptionally high amount of $25,000. Alonen is said to be a naturalized American and speaks English, but did not demur. Magistrate Blau then assented to Mr. Rorke's request. All the prisoners were locked up in default of bail.

Investigate Circulation.

It was intimated last night that an investigation was in progress in the office of the Attorney General, Charles D. Newton, 51 Chambers Street, for the purpose of ascertaining which agencies had been involved in the circulation of the Finnish magazine beside the men who were arrested.

It is known that a big bundle, containing several numbers of the Lukkataistelu was found when special agents of the Legislative Committee raided the headquarters of the Russian branch of the I. W. W. in East Fourth Street on June 21. It could not be learned last night whether the Rand School book store and the headquarters of other radical organizations in this city had kept the Finnish magazine for sale. It is known, however, that indictments will be sought against all who have been instrumental in circulating the periodical.

Deputy Attorney General Samuel A. Berger, who has been sitting with the Legislative Committee and who, with Assistant District Attorney Rorke was at work last night preparing the case against the Finnish prisoners, had under examination in his downtown office more than a score of radicals gathered in during the afternoon by special agents of the Legislative Committee.

The article which appeared in the March issue of the Lukkataistelu under the caption "The Activity of the Rioting Masses" will figure largely in the prosecution of the prisoners. This article spoke about "decisive blood battles between the capitalists and the working classes," and wound up with this:

"To hell with the preaching of peaceful revolution. The bloody seizure of power by the working classes is the only possible way. As long as our enemies are able to raise even one sword a bloodless fight is a day dream."

Writing Is Scholarly.

There were other articles in both the March issue and in subsequent numbers of the Lukkataistelu that have been translated for the District Attorney's office and will be used against the prisoners. A vast amount of radical literature, membership cards in I. W. W. and Socialist organizations, letters and manuscripts were seized in the raid on the apartment where the four men lived. One manuscript found in the apartment, the contents of which Assistant District Attorney Rorke and Deputy Attorney General Berger declined to divulge, is regarded as highly important by both those officials as affording proof that the four men arrested were not the brains of their radical propaganda.

This document, written in scholarly English, gave evidence of literary quality far beyond anything of which any one of the four Finnish captives was capable. The police made certain that the document had been turned out on a typewriting machine which was found in the apartment by the raiders. On the table beside the machine the detectives found a loaded revolver.

The address of the publication office of the Lukkataistelu was given in the magazine as a house in East 126th Street. The police found that the premises had been vacated some weeks ago when extracts from the magazine were presented in evidence to the legislative committee. The Finnish magazine is said to have been printed in this city.

August Lauder, agent of the apartment house where the prisoners were arrested, said that the apartment had been rented by Martins about three months ago. When he first moved in a woman and a nine-year-old boy, said to be the wife and son of Martins, moved in with him. About five weeks ago the woman and the boy departed.

Assistant District Attorney Rorke said yesterday that if the prisoners should be held by Magistrate Blau, as he expected, their case would be taken before the Special Grand Jury that will be sworn in on Monday, when the extraordinary term of the Supreme Court summoned by Governor Smith to deal with Bolshevism and sedition convenes.

Deputy Attorney General Samuel A. Berger said last night that the report that S. John Block and I. M. Sackin, counsel for the Rand School, had been subpoenaed to appear before the Special Grand Jury was erroneous.

HOOVER GOES TO VIENNA.

Will Visit Most of Central European Capitals on Food Mission.

PARIS, Aug. 8, (Associated Press.)—Herbert C. Hoover, Chairman of the interallied relief organization, left last night with Brig. Gen. Harry M. Bandholtz for Vienna.

He will be gone about two weeks, visiting virtually all the central European capitals investigating food and economic conditions.

HOLD WRECKED BANK HEAD.

Director of North Penn Also Held on Conspiracy Charge.

Special to The New York Times.

PHILADELPHIA, Penn., Aug. 8.—Louis H. Michel, President of the wrecked North Penn Bank, was arrested this afternoon. A warrant also has been issued for William T. Gabell, a Director. Following the announcement that two other men, former State officials, would soon be taken into custody, detectives of the District Attorney's office brought Michel to City Hall.

Michel and Gabell are accused of conspiracy and of accepting deposits in a bank they knew to be unsound. R. P. Ferguson, a State bank examiner, swore to the charges before Magistrate Pennock, who, ten days ago, held Ralph T. Moyer, the accused cashier, in $25,000 bail. Magistrate Pennock fixed bail for Michel at $10,000.

It was explained in the District Attorney's office that Michel and Gabell are accused on criminal charges with Moyer. The wording of the affidavit on which they are arrested first charges that they "conspired with Ralph T. Moyer, and other persons who are not known, to receive deposits in a bank known to be insolvent." The second charge is that they actually received deposits in an unsound bank. The politicians will not be arrested until Attorney General Schaffer reaches the city.

Definite action will be taken against Charles A. Ambler, former Speaker of the House and Insurance Commissioner under former Governor Brumbaugh, officials declared, unless he reimburses the wrecked North Penn Bank in the immediate future for enormous loans.

ARMY WANTS NEW RIFLE.

WASHINGTON, Aug. 8.—Inventors were asked today by the War Department to submit designs for a semi-automatic military rifle to replace weapons now in use. The designs must meet specifications giving the characteristics a service rifle of this type must have, which have been prepared by ordnance experts.

The present rifle is a magazine gun, operation of the bolt action by hand being necessary to prepare it for the next shot. Officials said that if an acceptable semi-automatic could be developed for the army, the rapidity and accuracy of fire by any infantry unit would be greatly increased.

TO RESTORE BELGIAN FARMS

Government Will Take Over Devastated Areas and Improve Them.

BRUSSELS, Aug. 8, (Associated Press.)—The Belgian Government has undertaken a vast project for reclaiming the devastated farm lands in the battle zone. The farms will be taken over from their owners and worked under the latest scientific principles and then returned in first-class condition to them.

Owners are to be paid 5 per cent. interest on the pre-war valuation of the property during operation by the Government, which, however, is prepared to purchase the land outright in the event owners do not desire to keep the farms.

King Albert will fix the limit of the operation of the project, which is designed merely to hasten, in the national interest, the restoration of the vast territory laid waste by shellfire.

Express Co. Gets Rate Increase.

Deputy Public Service Commissioner Glennon granted permission yesterday to the Westcott Express Company to increase its rates 30 cents on each piece of baggage carried within the city. The order states that the present rates are insufficient to yield a reasonable compensation. Schedules of the new rates are to be filed before they take effect on Aug. 15.

Today's Press on the President's Address

NEW YORK CITY.

"Neither Peace nor War."

From The World.

Back of all President Wilson's drastic recommendations for the protection of the public against profiteering and the maintenance, so far as power exists in Government, of reasonable prices for the necessaries of life stands the vital fact that he compressed into a single sentence, "There is now neither peace nor war." And as we are neither at peace nor at war, we lack all the elements of stability that attach to either state.

Some measure of relief may follow from the legislation that the President recommends, provided Congress acts quickly and intelligently, but this situation cannot be permanently cured by statute or by executive action. The disease is too deep. Nobody ever liquidated a war by legislation and nobody ever will. The first step in the process of liquidation must come in the establishment of peace, and there is no peace.

Sees No Swift Relief.

From The Sun.

In a situation which is streaked with lightning much of the relief suggested by President Wilson in his cost of living message to Congress will seem to many persons to have the velocity of cold molasses. The new legislation he recommends cannot be produced in a day. The necessary administrative machinery to carry out the purpose of the proposed statutes cannot be set up and put in good running order for weeks and months. The paralyzing red tape inseparable from Government business will have to run its usual course around and into and through all the works. Meanwhile the American people will be wanting their food and other necessaries at more reasonable cost.

BUFFALO.

League No Remedy.

From The Express.

So far as the international situation is responsible for the high cost of living, the President and his League of Nations are the cause, not the remedy, and the League of Nations will rather prolong than end the conditions which have aroused complaint.

WASHINGTON.

Sees Approval of Recommendations.

From The Post.

In the main the recommendations * * * will meet with popular approval. Some of the suggestions are ahead of the times and the President merely throws them out as food for thought. Other specific recommendations are quite to the point and should be worked into law without delay.

It seems to us that there is little point in the suggestion that there can be no relief from the high cost of living until the treaty of peace is ratified and the League of Nations created. * * * The greater part of the evil is within the United States, and remediable by the United States Government, without bothering about the condition of Europe. America is a bigger market than all the rest of the world.

Europe has made a sorry mess of civilization. America has nothing to gain by subordinating its intelligence or independence to those nations. The hope of mankind is the New World, led by the United States.

ST. LOUIS.

A Warning to Profiteers.

From The Republic.

Profiteers are not so blind that they cannot see in the message fair warning of wrath to come. The President in speaking his own mind has spoken the mind of the people, who are awake at last to the fact that high prices are threatening to bring about a crisis in the affairs of the country, which can be averted only by a prompt check to profiteering.

NEW ORLEANS.

Helpful Suggestions.

From The Times-Picayune.

In his address to Congress on the living cost situation yesterday, President Wilson offered certain specific recommendations which will prove helpful if they can be immediately enacted into law. The President does not, in our judgment, overestimate the gravity of the case. It is a time for all of us to take "sober second thought" and "think and act lik Americans." The results of the Government campaign to stamp out the profiteering abuses ought to be apparent in a comparatively short time. Meanwhile it would seem to be the duty of all good Americans to co-operate in the general efforts for the general welfare and refrain from rocking the boat in which we are riding while it is being steered through rough and dangerous waters.

ST. PAUL.

The Duty of Congress.

From The Pioneer Press.

Among the President's suggestions which will be generally accepted as good are proposed laws covering the cold storage field, setting a time limit on storage and requiring articles taken from storage to be marked with the price at which they came from the producer and which prevailed when they went into storage. The Executive declares that it still remains within the wartime power of the Government to draw accumulated food out of storage and sell it. Then why not do it? Now Congress has before it the suggested program of the President and it remains for it without thought of politics to consider earnestly that program. If it ignores any part of it it will be giving the President a political club with which to go before the country.

BOSTON.

The Need of Peace.

From The Herald.

All is grist to the President's mill. Yesterday's opportunity to discuss the rising cost of living he utilized to plead for the League of Nations and the settlement of the war.

Basically and fundamentally we cannot expect the Governments of the world to function normally until peace is accomplished in law as well as in fact, and any device for lessening the world's dependence on the war method of settling its disputes would contribute so mightily to the economic health of the nations as to make all other aids seem trifling and inconsequent.

CLEVELAND.

Penalties That Bite.

From The Plain Dealer.

The President, it is feared, has more confidence in publicity and moral suasion as remedies for gouging than most Americans will feel. Letting the people know, as he suggests, might have some slight curative effect, but our own opinion is that a profiteer has a more wholesome fear of a jail cell than we can hope to make him have of mere public condemnation which carries no tangible penalty with it. Let us have plenty of publicity, but let us have also prosecutions and penalties that bite.

After a Day of Disorder B. R. T. Trains Are Run at Night Under Guard

MOBS BY HUNDREDS RAID STREET CARS

Police More Active, but Unable to Deal with Bands of Rioters All Over Brooklyn.

TRUCKS AS "TANK CARS"

Although no shooting was reported yesterday in Brooklyn, rioting was as frequent as it had been on Thursday, and even more successful, so far as tying up the surface lines was concerned. The police were more numerous and generally more active, but were unable to deal with mobs of hundreds which sprang up every few minutes in different parts of the city, and did not succeed in stopping the "tank cars" of the strikers, motor trucks, which carried fifty or more at a time for quick dashes to points where there was little police protection. The police broke up several mobs, including one that was pulling up the rails in the afternoon at Reid Avenue and Halsey Street. Fourteen men were arrested during the day on charges of attempting to damage railroad property.

A mob numbering 500 which had surrounded two cars at Classon and Putnam Avenues was scattered by the police, and in the fight one of the strikers swung a cable at Police Lieutenant Solomon Hauptman, who saved himself from serious injury by warding it off with his hand.

The following occurrences were reported by telephone to the general offices of the B. R. T. in Brooklyn:

2:20 A. M.—Flatbush reports a feeder wire cut at Avenue H and Flatbush. This was done by placing a gas-pipe on the wire and rail, burning it out.

2:51 A. M.—Police Department reports a hole in the street about five feet deep, 100 feet east of Euclid Avenue on Liberty Avenue.

4:00 A. M.—The Eighty-eighth Precinct reports, on Bergen Street east of Classon Avenue, flagging and paving stones have been thrown on the tracks.

6:00 A. M.—Dempsey on Williamsburg Bridge reports seventy-five soldiers gathered at Plaza and intimidating the crews of the locals.

6:50 A. M.—Flatbush reports that three Flatbush cars, which left the depot with five officers on each car, were held up at Avenue F and were forced to return.

7:10 A. M.—Gilchrist at Fifty-eighth Street, reports four Court Street cars left depot with two police on each car followed by an auto with eight strong-arm men.

7:45 A. M.—Inspector Neville reports a mob just passed Gates and Broadway on their way down to meet Gates Avenue cars.

8:00 A. M.—Policemen assigned to Bay Parkway are kicking about continuing to go on trains, and want to be relieved. They have been out all night.

8:30 A. M.—Strikers pulled a crew off the train at Eighteenth Avenue on the Culver line. Police made no attempt to prevent them.

9:20 A. M.—Inspector reports eight men from East New York and Canarsie were tampering with the telephone box at Wyckoff and Myrtle Avenue.

10:15 A. M.—A civilian, refusing his name, reported that a truckload of men at Vanderbilt and Atlantic Avenues were tampering with the electric switch. They then went to Bergen and Vanderbilt.

10:30 A. M.—Inspector reports that a Canarsie car was held up at Hunterfly Road by a gang of strikers, who drove an auto across the track. The policemen on the car ordered them off, and told them that if they started anything they would use their guns, which they had drawn.

10:40 A. M.—Truckload of men at Ninth Avenue and Ninth Street turning all cars back.

10:40 A. M.—Large truck turned over on rails at Seventh Avenue and Fifty-second Street.

10:45 A. M.—Delancey Street reports four Grand Street and twenty-four local cars over Williamsburg Bridge during the last hour.

10:50 A. M.—East New York reports they had one car out, with three men and three policemen on same. The car went about a block when a mob surstrikers and took them to the Flatwere called from the depot and they just stood around and did not render any assistance whatsoever.

11 A. M.—Mob of strikers tearing up temporary crossover at Church Avenue and Hunterfly Road. Police reserves arrived, arrested a truckload of strikers an dtook them to the Flatbush Court.

11:05 A. M.—Riot reported at Twenty-third Street shop. Police reserves called.

11:07 A. M.—Fifty-eighth Street shopmen out, all except five men. Strikers went to the men's homes last night and threatened them if they came back to work this morning.

1 P. M.—Elevated motorman on his way from Thirty-sixth Street to Eighty-sixth Street with fuses was held up on Thirty-sixth Street between Fourth and Fifth Avenues and the fuses were taken away from him.

1:30 P. M.—Sea Beach subway started on a twelve-minute interval.

2 P. M.—Chief Inspector Walsh at Brooklyn Bridge reports that two auto loads of strikers came to the Brooklyn Bridge at noon. Police Captain O'Toole drew his gun and threatened to shoot the first man that went near a car. Auto trucks turned around and drove away.

2:30 P. M.—Chief Inspector Dempsey at Williamsburg reports strikers and sympathizers gathered on the Plaza and the cars were sent to New York and laid up in the Delancey Street Terminal. Their crews went upstairs to return to Brooklyn via the elevated. The strikers followed them, threw them into autos and took them away.

2:50 P. M.—Two Halsey Street cars left the depot with four police on each car and six or seven men. The cars went about a block, when the mob got on the track ahead and attempted to stop them.

3 P. M.—Three Flatbush-Seventh Avenue cars were held up at Fulton Street and Elm Place by a mob. The police were notified and Adams Street reserves dispersed the gang. The cars returned to the depot.

3:15 P. M.—Reported that a gang of men with an auto truck marked "Ridgewood" were tampering with the switch at Halsey Street, near Nostrand Avenue.

4 P. M.—Reported that two policemen arrived at Halsey Street and Nostrand, but the gang continued to cause mischief without being interfered with.

4:05—Halsey Street reports that two cars were returned to the depot. At Classon Avenue the men held up the cars by putting a manhole cover on the rails, pulled the fuses from the cars, took the draw bar and smashed the resistance on the first car. The cars finally proceeded to Reid Avenue, where they were again stopped by an ash can on the rails.

4:10—Ninth Avenue reports three Flatbush cars started out, but only went about a block. Then they were stopped by a mob; finally drove them off and brought the cars back. Inspector reports sixty men willing to go out and the police are coming around fine, but it is a crime to send the men out.

These were the last cars which attempted to run at this time, and by shortly after 4 o'clock the strikers had completely wiped out the surface car service in Brooklyn.

BROOKLYN GOES HOME IN MOTOR TRUCKS

Two Deaths Due to Accidents in Congested Streets—Prices for Rides Come Down.

Automobiles, motor trucks, and vans were more numerous than ever in Brooklyn yesterday and took care of the bulk of the passenger traffic at the rush hours yesterday morning and last night. Their operation was more regular over fixed routes and there was little profiteering, the average charge being 10 cents for a short ride and 25 cents for a long one. The service was generally rapid and covered the borough pretty thoroughly.

Borough President Joseph A. Guilder permitted about 300 out-of-town buses to operate on regular lines in the borough, making the one condition that they would not charge more than 10 cents.

The strike was indirectly the cause of two deaths and of many injuries, because of collisions resulting from the traffic congestion. Walter H. Preiss, 23 years old, of 9,520 127th Street, Richmond Hill, an employe of the Marmon Automobile Company, was killed in an automobile collision at Eighth Avenue and Forty-fourth Street. John Morena, 18 years old, living in Conselyea Street, Brooklyn, was killed by an automobile on the Williamsburg Bridge Plaza.

LESS OF A JAM AT BRIDGES.

Some Firms Let Employes Go Early, Reducing the Evening Rush.

There was an absence of confusion at the entrance to Brooklyn Bridge and on the Manhattan and Williamsburg Bridges during the homegoing hours yesterday, and one reason assigned for this condition was that some firms have adopted the policy of letting their Brooklyn employes leave a little before the regular closing hour, and this has had the effect of distributing the rush over a greater period of time. There were no surface cars running, and those few elevated trains that reached the Brooklyn Bridge were not crowded to such an extent as on the first two days of the strike. This was because many thousands have given up waiting for the occasional appearance of a train and now go home on the trucks that continually cross the bridge in the early evening.

The scene at the bridge entrance and in Park Row was much the same as yesterday, though there was less apparent haste and less jostling and shoving. A great majority of the homegoers had apparently made arrangements for their transportation and knew just where to find waiting trucks that would take them to their particular part of the borough. Many large private concerns are transporting their own employes to and from Brooklyn. There was no rush for trains at the station in the Municipal Building. The rush on the ferries at South Ferry has been absorbed by placing more boats in service each morning and evening. There are now more places where tickets can be purchased.

Although it was estimated that between the hours of 4:30 and 7 o'clock last night between 14,000 and 15,000 passengers were carried to Brooklyn over the Thirty-ninth Street ferry, there was none of the confusion that existed at that terminal during the first day of the strike. Boats ran all night.

Jitneys did a thriving business, notwithstanding the curb that had been placed upon them by the officials for overcharging. Heretofore charges of from 25 cents to $1 had been made for a trip from the Williamsburg Bridge to any part of the Bushwick, Ridgewood, or East New York section, but last night the charge was uniformly the same, 25 cents.

GARRISON CONTINUES OPPOSITION TO UNION

But Receiver Declares He Will Obey Any Lawfully Constituted Authority.

NIXON'S POWER QUESTIONED

Battered Employes Before Commission Testify That They Did Not Receive Police Protection.

The two outstanding features of the hearing yesterday before the Public Service Commission on the strike situation in Brooklyn were the oft-repeated declaration of Receiver Lindley M. Garrison that he would not recognize the union or confer with a committee representing it because it did not represent a majority of the company's employes, and testimony by several employes who told tales of assaults by strikers without fear of molestation by the police.

On the dais with Commissioner Lewis Nixon sat Transit Construction Commissioner John H. Delaney, who denied on Thursday the statements made by the company that the police were not doing their duty.

When the hearing was over, Corporation Counsel William P. Burr told Mr. Nixon that he had the power to instruct Receiver Garrison to settle the strike, and that it had been made plain that the main point of difference was the continued refusal of the company to recognize the union. If this recognition was accorded, Mr. Burr said, the other points could be quickly disposed of, the men probably would return to work, and peace and quiet restored.

Mr. Nixon replied that he was doubtful of his power to enforce such an order to the receiver, and he wanted to know if Mr. Burr was in a position to assure him such power lay in his hands. Mr. Burr was loath to accept the responsibility, and it was finally agreed that the hearings should be continued until all of the facts attending the strike were on record and the jurisdiction of the commission ascertained. Then a decision could be reached.

It was said after the meeting, by various lawyers who had been present, that the situation was complicated by the fact that the company was in the hands of the Federal Court and that, while the laws of the State had to be observed by the receiver, no local court would probably care to issue an order that might interfere with the control of Federal Judge Mayer.

Explains Attitude Toward Court.

During the time that Mr. Garrison was in the witness chair he was questioned by Mr. Burr relative to the extent to which he felt he should obey orders of the court. One of his answers was:

"If Judge Mayer would tell me that the union should be recognized I should hesitate a long time before refusing to do so."

It was resolved to continue the hearing at 10 o'clock this morning, and to make all steps possible in gathering together all of the facts, and in order to have both sides of the situation presented to issue an invitation to the strikers to appear and testify. In pursuance of this decision Mr. Nixon gave out this prepared statement just before leaving for his home last night:

Judge Garrison during the course of the hearing this afternoon stated that he would receive a committee of his employes. The grievances of the men on strike have not so far been stated to the Commission, but it is hoped that a delegation of the strikers will appear before this Commission tomorrow morning to present them.

As soon as a representative committee of employes can be selected, this Commission will use all its efforts as a mediator to bring about an early and amicable settlement.

Mr. Garrison, called to the witness chair, was asked if he cared to make a statement. He replied that he had not attended for that purpose but that he would be glad to answer all questions.

He said that he had been in close touch with the situation since the strike began and that the strike became effective Wednesday morning there were on hand and ready to go to work 1,194 conductors and motormen out of the normal number of 1,293 employed on the surface lines.

The 1,194 faithful employes, he said, had begun their day's work as usual but nearly all of them had been compelled to suspend work later in the day because of attacks on their cars by the strikers and their sympathizers. This unruly element, he said, had cut trolley ropes, burned out fuses, smashed windows, and, in a number of instances, had assaulted the men operating the cars.

Asked what the attitude of the police was, he replied that it appeared to be passive, and he explained that in some cases the police tried to do all they could to preserve order and protect property, and in other instances the reverse seemed to be the case.

Criticises the Police.

"Some of the police," he said, "seemed inclined to remain inside of the car barns. So far as they were of any use in the emergency they might just as well have been in South Africa."

Mr. Garrison explained the conduct of the loyal employes who were prevented from working by fear of personal injury by saying that a citizen could not be expected to risk his life as a soldier does, and he recited the experience of a young man employed in his office who was riding on a trolley car when the strikers cut the rope. Mr. Burr objected to testimony of this character, and Mr. Garrison retorted that the young man would testify if asked to do so.

Asked by Mr. Burr just what his position toward the employes of the company was, he explained that he was willing to meet a committee of his employes or any part of them without regard to color, race or creed, and to confer with them on any question they were pleased to propose, but that he would not meet with or confer with a committee of a union which did not represent more than 20 per cent. of the employes. He thought that any committee pretending to represent the employes should show that it represented a majority.

"I have always believed in collective bargaining," stated Mr. Garrison, "but I will not bargain with 30 per cent. of my employes. When the men presented their demands for recognition of the union I did not think much about the matter, but I refused to accord recognition. The demands of the union did not represent the sentiment of more than 20 per cent. of the employes."

He cited several occasions when he had treated with committees representing the men, and he again stated his position concerning the union. Asked about the wages paid the men, he replied that it was about the same as the wages paid to similar classes of workers in this vicinity. He expressed the opinion that the men "were hardly sincere when they asked for 75 cents an hour."

Mr. Burr wanted to know if Mr. Garrison had not always been opposed to unions, and the reply was:

"I have not."

Will Not Deal with Outsiders.

In reply to another question he said that when he was Secretary of War he had been asked to discharge some men working on the Lincoln Memorial, and that he told the representatives of the union that he would not discharge the men even if a strike was called. Then he stated his position over again in this way:

"I wish to say that if the men employed on my system come to me they can deal with me or in the event I refuse to deal with them they can quit clean. That is inherent in the situation. But I will not deal with men of an outside organization."

Then he turned to Mr. Burr and said:

In reply to other questions, Mr. Garrison said that he had been misquoted when he was credited with having said that he would resign as receiver of the B. R. T. system if Judge Mayer ordered him to deal with representatives of the union. He said that he would gladly meet a committee of his own employes at any time they wished to confer with him, but that his refusal to confer related only to a committee from the Amalgamated Association.

He said that at the outset of the strike the Mayor did not think it would be necessary to furnish patrolmen for each one of the cars, but that assurances of protection had been given. Then he testified:

"But the mere physical presence of a thousand policemen would not prevent disorder if they did nothing to stop it. You can't tell me that we could not by one hour of vigorous police activity put a stop to the disorder attending the strike."

Mr. Burr sought to defend the police, but Mr. Garrison was positive in his statements that much of the disorder could have been prevented if the police had taken up the task in the right spirit.

He said that he had seen glass broken in the cars and the sides smashed in; that he had talked with Inspectors and Superintendents of various departments of the system, and learned of much disorder followed by the destruction of property, vicious assaults upon faithful employes, who sought to serve the public, and that the reason why the service was not practically operating at normal was because the men were afraid to take the cars out.

Gives Views on Police Power.

Mr. Garrison told of the difficulties confronting the police, and explained that while he did not expect them to be wherever there was disorder, he did expect them to put a stop to it when it happened before their faces. He told of his communications with the various officials and of the police arrangements, and he expressed the opinion that the police did not appear to understand that they were supposed to interfere with any lawless element which might threaten to injure the employes and property of the company. He said that the company employed about 13,000 men and women, and he admitted that the service on the surface lines had been decreasing since the first day of the strike.

Joseph P. Griffin, President of the Passengers' Protective Association, asked Mr. Garrison if he would meet representatives of the Amalgamated if the commission directed him to do so. He replied that he would obey any order from any lawfully constituted authority. On being asked if he would issue such an order Mr. Nixon replied that he would first have to ascertain what jurisdiction he had.

Later on Mr. Garrison explained that he was not a politician, but only the trustee of a great railroad property, and that he would seek to do his duty without regard to consequences. He understood, he said, that labor unions controlled votes and that those who wanted votes had to pay heed to the unions.

Mr. Burr said that he had received information that half of the witness's employes were on strike and Mr. Garrison replied:

"Well, suppos half of them are out, suppose all of them are out, and I am wrong, it does not give any one the right to start a revolution."

Mr. Nixon remarked that the commission he was always ready to mediate, and Mr. Garrison retorted: "I will be glad to accept mediation if employes who have grievances will present them to the commission."

Murphy Defends the Police.

Police Inspector Murphy of Brooklyn and Second Deputy Commissioner Lahey testified concerning the police arrangements, and both asserted that orders had been given to the patrolmen not to take sides, but to devote their time to the impartial preservation of order and the protection of property. Inspector Murphy sought to show that the police had done their full duty by referring to the number of arrests that had been made.

Then came half a dozen inspectors and conductors of the company, some of them with black eyes, swollen faces, and torn features. One was limping badly. They were the men who had been attacked while attempting to run cars and to protect them during transit, with the result that the strikers had maltreated them.

Some of the testimony was to the effect that policemen had refused to protect them from assault, that one conductor had been threatened with arrest if he struck a striker who threatened to beat him, that the attitude of the police was cold and uninterested, and that their sympathies appeared to be with the strikers.

Further testimony along this line will be gathered later and efforts will be made, it was said, to learn the names of the policemen who were accused in the testimony, so that they might be placed on trial for neglect of duty.

JUDGE MAYER ASKED TO REMOVE GARRISON

Lindley M. Garrison, receiver of the Brooklyn Rapid Transit Company, was characterized as "un-American, intolerant, and unprogressive" in a telegram sent last night by the Central Federated Union of New York City to Judge Julius M. Mayer, in which the Judge was asked to remove Mr. Garrison. When the motion was put at the regular meeting held at the Labor Temple, 243 East Eighty-fourth Street, cheers arose from the audience, and the vote was unanimous for sending the telegram. The motion was closely followed by one indorsing Mayor Hylan's plan for municipal operation of motor bus lines as competitors of the B. R. T.

In direct opposition to the policy expressed by the American Federation of Labor at its recent convention at Atlantic City, the Central Federated Union last night passed without a negative vote a resolution calling for the withdrawal of all American troops in Russia, protesting against "conniving or collaborating with any counter-revolutionary groups such as those of Kolchak or Denikin," and holding that the "American Government must do nothing that will hinder the Russian people from determining their own form of Government in accordance with their own economic and political ideals."

A strong protest was made against the "evasive" policy of the Board of Education of New York City in which, according to the Central Federated Union, it has refused to allow the Teachers' Union to meet in the school buildings and then, after the first protest of the central body, has indulged in nothing but evasion.

The telegram to Judge Mayer was sent by the Secretary of the union, and read as follows:

The Secretary of the Central Federated Union is instructed to telegraph Judge Mayer to remove Lindley M. Garrison as receiver of the Brooklyn Rapid Transit Company for his autocratic, un-American, intolerant, and unprogressive attitude in refusing to treat with the employes of the B. R. T., who are duly elected representatives of thousands of other employes in the Amalgamated Association of Street and Electric Railway Employes, such conduct being opposed to general practice and common sense in dealing with present-day labor questions on the large railway systems of the country.

Delegate W. J. Coyne of the Federal Employes' Union argued that one way to fight the B. R. T. would be to establish city-owned buses, and to that end introduced a resolution, as follows:

"Whereas, the private ownership of the transit systems of this city has demonstrated its incompetence in operating these public utilities, because of the inefficiency of the management and their reactionary and tyrannical opposition to legitimate railway labor organization, therefore be it

"Resolved, that the Central Federated Union, representing 500,000 organized workers, again reaffirms its unqualified approval of the principle of public ownership and operation of public utilities.

"And be it further resolved that the Central Federated Union approves of the publicly announced plan of Mayor Hylan to establish publicly operated lines of buses throughout the city as being a beneficial and reasonable method to bring relief to the present insufficient transit system of the city.

"And be it resolved that copies of this resolution be sent to the Mayor, the Board of Estimate, and the Board of Aldermen."

The Russian question was dealt with briefly in an approval of the action of the Executive Committee. There was no opposition, despite the fact that the larger labor organization voted down similar resolutions by a large majority. The resolutions read:

"We, as citizens of the United States, call upon the Congress of the United States to take action in the present Russian situation which shall bring about the discontinuance of the blockade against the Russian Soviet Republic. Without our having declared war against Russia, this blockade is bringing death by starvation to hundreds of thousands every month.

"We urge the recall of all American troops in Russia and the abandonment of attempts to secure special troops for service there, as this is not service for the soldiers of democracy.

"We do most earnestly protest against the conniving or collaborating of our Government with any counterrevolutionary groups such as those of Kolchak or Denikin, servers of a discredited monarchical régime.

"We hold that the American Government must do nothing that will hinder the Russian people from determining their own form of Government in accordance with their own economic and political ideas.

"In sum, we call upon Congress to exercise its constitutional functions for the purpose of creating a generously democratic foreign policy, consistent with the traditions of a nation which cherishes the honorable memories of the revolution by which it was founded and the civil war by which it was perpetuated."

STRIKERS' COMMITTEE TO MEET NIXON TODAY

Fridiger Declares Union Will Visit the Public Service Commission in Conciliatory Mood.

Amid cheers of several hundred strikers, Louis Fridiger, counsel for the strikers, announced last night that a committee representing the strikers would meet with the Public Service Commission today in the hope of finding a way to settle the strike by arbitration, and added that the representatives of the strikers would be fairminded and conciliatory.

"We are going to show that we can be reasoned with," he said. "Even if Garrison is obstinate, autocratic, and Czarlike, we are going to show that 9,000 of his employes are ready to mediate, conciliate, and arbitrate. Garrison does not live in Brooklyn, and aside from the fee he will collect as receiver, he doesn't care about Brooklyn. But we live in Brooklyn, and we love Brooklyn, and are ready to arbitrate, if it will serve the interests of the people of Brooklyn. We will give concessions. We are ready to give a little and to take a little. We will show, by contrast, what sort of a tyrant the receiver is when he refused the requests of the Mayor and the Public Service Commission and won't give in an inch."

MAYOR VISITS CAR BARNS.

Makes Automobile Tour to Inspect Conditions in Brooklyn.

To ascertain for himself conditions at the various car barns in his immediate vicinity, Mayor Hylan, with Police Captain David Kane of the Ralph Avenue Station, made a tour in a small automobile last night, visiting four of the car barns, talking with the strikers, and the police officers there, and reached his home on Bushwick Avenue shortly after 11 o'clock.

The Mayor first visited the East New York barns, where there were about 300 strikers standing about. He was cheered and applauded, and several of the more enthusiastic of the strikers demanded a "speech," but the Mayor declined to respond. He made inquiries about the number of police at the barns and then proceeded to the barns at Bergen Street, Fresh Pond, and Halsey Street. At the latter place he inquired how many men were ready to take out cars, and one of the loyal men stepped forward and said he was, but there were no other responses.

TRANSIT LINES MAY STOP.

Commissioner Nixon Grants Permits and Asks Hylan's Views.

The application of the three companies, operating unprofitable lines, for permission to cease operating them was granted yesterday by Public Service Commissioner Nixon. The Pelham Park and City Island Railway Company and the Third Avenue Bridge Company will cease operating the lines from City Island and through Pelham Bay Park and the line over the Queensboro Bridge on Aug. 31. After an inquiry, Mr. Nixon decided that he had no power to compel the companies to continue operation. He asked them to keep the lines running, but they declined.

Assistant Corporation Counsel Joseph A. Devery contended that the commission had the power to refuse the applications and to force the companies to keep the lines going. If Mr. Devery can show within one week that his contention is based on law, the permission given to the companies to cease operation will be revoked. Mr. Nixon read into the record a letter which he sent to Mayor Hylan. The letter also referred to his action in regard to these two lines and to permission granted to the Mid-Crosstown Line to cease operating cars through Twenty-eighth and Twenty-ninth Streets.

His letter, after explaining the action he had taken in reference to the lines, says:

"Your views, as expressed in the press, are that if lines find they cannot operate they shall abandon them and the city will undertake the service. While understanding, of course, that there were qualifications as to your intentions, the commission, if you wish, will arrange a hearing on this matter so that the expediency of municipal operation may be made clear.

NEW MOVE IN RENT CASE.

Returned Army Officer May Ask for Federal Inquiry.

A case of rent profiteering which may lead to Federal investigation was brought to the attention of the Mayor's Committee on Rent Profiteering yesterday, when it was stated that a landlord had been harassing the mother of a soldier in the service, by repeated demands for increases in rent and had finally sent a dispossess notice. The Federal statutes forbid the harassing of the relatives of soldiers and sailors in the service. Lieutenant M. Weissberg of the Medical Corps complained of the tactics of the owner of a house at 161 Vernon Avenue, Brooklyn, occupied by his mother.

Lieutenant Weissberg told the committee that he was the sole support of his mother, and that while in France the landlord on two occasions had increased the rent of the house on Vernon Avenue by $5 a month. On his return the officer said he purchased a house with the intention of giving up the rented one so soon as the new one was ready for occupancy. Learning of the Lieutenant's intention of moving, the landlord, it was said, served notice on the mother of the officer to move by the end of August. As the Lieutenant is still in the service and the new house will not be ready by the date of the eviction, Mr. Weissberg, according to the son, has been caused considerable worry and has suffered injury to her health.

The landlord of the house, when heard by the committee yesterday morning, did not deny the allegations of the officer, but said he did not know he was in France. A representative of the Department of Justice, who was at the hearing, said that local officials of his department were going to Washington today to discuss reports of similar complaints from other parts of the country. It was decided to postpone further consideration of the complaint of Lieutenant Weissberg until the Department of Justice officials report the result of the conference in Washington.

Nathan Ilirsch, Chairman of the Mayor's committee, appointed a committee yesterday to dispense under his personal supervision the funds contributed to aid persons financially distressed because of rent profiteering. Such cases will be passed upon by the committee after investigation by the Department of Public Charities. The members of the committee are Charles C. Hughes, assistant to Chairman Hirsch; Mrs. William Einstein, Chairman of the Mayor's Committee on Child Welfare, and Miss Dorothy Donnelly, sister of Supreme Court Justice Thomas F. Donnelly.

URGES HOME LOAN BANKS.

Senator Calder Says $4,000,000,000 Is Needed for Domiciles.

WASHINGTON, Aug. 8.—One million homes to cost about $4,000,000,000 are needed in the United States, Senator Calder, Republican, of New York, declared today in an address in the Senate in support of his bill proposing a system of "home" banks similar to the farm loan banks. With both material and labor short, Senator Calder said, the Government should provide a system for easy loans to home builders.

"It is the belief of those interested," said Senator Calder, "that the people who live in the cities have as much right to expect encouragement from the Federal Government in the matter of obtaining homes as the man who lives on the farm does in obtaining a mortgage on his farm."

The kidnapping of several loyal employes of the company was reported to the B. R. T. in the afternoon as occurring at noon after a mob of strikers gathered at the plaza in front of the Williamsburg Bridge and threatened to raid surface cars on their return from Manhattan. Because of this danger, the surface cars were held up on the Brooklyn side. The loyal motormen, who had operated them, started to return by elevated from the De Lancey Street terminal in New York. A crowd of strikers, which had crossed the bridge and seen this move of the crews, followed them to the elevated cars, pulled them off, put them in automobiles and sped away with them.

By dragging crews from their cars, tampering with switches, building obstructions on the tracks and similar acts, the strikers finally got control on every line. A 3 o'clock only eight surface cars were running, and each of these was a storm centre. Later B. R. T. officials issued orders not to attempt to operate any more surface cars.

The Mayor's Statement.

City of New York,
Office of the Mayor,
Aug. 8, 1919.

"No man can ask me to do anything which I don't consider advisable to do." Mr. Garrison said when informed that Corporation Counsel Burr, following instructions from Mayor Hylan, had telegraphed Judge Mayer asking him to see that Judge Garrison received the union representatives. "Remember that I can leave my job as receiver just as I left my job in Washington as Secretary of War. I am still determined that I will not deal with the union, not if they tie up every damn car in the service."

On reading Receiver Garrison's statement, Mayor Hylan said:

Such a statement coming from a public official designated by the Federal courts to operate the railroad systems in the interest of the traveling public is almost unbelievable. I again urge that the Federal Court direct Receiver Garrison to take up the questions at issue with his employes and submit them to a committee for arbitration. As to Receiver Garrison's threat to resign his position as receiver as he did as Secretary of War, I would remind Mr. Garrison that he was quickly replaced and as quickly forgotten, and if he persists in his refusal to arbitrate so that peace may be restored in the city, his resignation might be most acceptable.

The Police Department have been instructed to suppress all acts of violence and to immediately arrest all those who seek by violence to intimidate the employes of the company in any way, and the police have furnished and are still ready to furnish as many men as the officials of the B. R. T. require to operate their systems.

Wants Reserves Used.

The suggestion that the Police Reserves, who have not been used at all by the Police Department in the strike, should be called out, was made in a letter to Mayor Hylan by the Chamber of Commerce of Flatbush, which was the scene of some of the worst rioting. The Chamber of Commerce in its letter to the Mayor said:

"We realize that the entire police force available for the Borough of Brooklyn is now being called upon to its fullest extent, but if there are not sufficient police to furnish the necessary protection under the existing conditions, would it not be possible for the Police Commissioner to call out and assign the Police Reserves to patrol our section and the other residential sections of our borough during the present strike? The Police Reserves were organized, drilled, and maintained in order to meet such contingencies."

The strike leaders wer eelated over their success in abolishing service on the Brooklyn surface lines, and were busy making plans to extend the strike to Manhattan and to suburban lines in Long Island. Patrick J. Snea, leader of the strike, who addressed a meeting at the Browsville Labor Lyceum, said:

"This is the biggest strike and the most successful strike in the history of street railways. All you have got to do is to stick together. Be orderly! Hold out! Don't let them talk you into weakening."

He said that Garrison was "Czarlike," but that he would soon be "forced to his knees." Louis Fridiger, counsel for the strikers, said:

"I habe seen several strikes, but this is a real strike. I am surprised at the thoroughness of the work we have achieved in organizing the men. The B. R. T. employes are now 98 per cent. organized."

Harry Appleton, a New Jersey organizer, urged the men to remain on strike over the week-end under any circumstances.

"If they lose the tremendous receipts they get on Saturday and Sunday," he said, "they will be on their knees on Monday."

At a meeting of strikers at Greenpoint in the afternoon one speaker, who said that he was a Captain in the police reserves, asserted that the police reserves of Greenpoint were in sympathy with the strikers, and would decline to act if they were asked to guard cars. Counsel Fridiger, who addressed this meeting also, said:

"I am preaching peace. I do not want any rough stuff. But if the B. R. T. brings in strikebreakers I am not going to be responsible for what happens. Those hired gunmen ought to be met at the city line and shot down by citizens with shotguns."

chooses at a wage on which he agrees without physical molestation or intimidation?

"2. Can property be protected inviolate at all times?

"These are Constitutional questions and their maintenance in the affirmative means law and order and their negation means the absence of law and order.

"The New York Railways, of which I am receiver under the order of the Federal Court, charges me with running these roads. The employes of these roads, through an organization of their own, instituted by themselves in a manner selected by themselves, provide for collective bargaining and an accurately specified mode of registering complaints and for their proper solution with arbitration in case of difference. The members of this organization are entitled to look at me, as receiver, for protection, and they are entitled as individuals to rely on the sure operation of the law.

Will Appeal to Governor.

"The police force of the City of New York is adequate to suppress disorder, when adequately directed thereto in sincerity and good faith. In view of the pronunciamento quoted above, I officially call upon you for the full protection guaranteed by law, and to see that the employes of the New York Railways and its property are fully, adequately, and instantly protected against threat, violence, or disturbance of whatever kind. Upon failure to receive such protection I shall appeal to the Sheriff and through him to the Governor of the State of New York.

"Upon the failure of any public official in the City of New York to perform his constitutional duty in fact and full sincerity as embodied in his oath of office, I shall lay charges before the Governor, asking for the removal of that official by the Governor on account of such failure of duty.

"This letter is written at this time, not only in view of the public declaration referred to, but that there may be no question of full opportunity being given to you and to the police force acting under you for the due performance of a constitutional duty.

"These lines are also written with full knowledge of the human nature involved in this question. The Police Department understands its duty and will perform it beyond question when directed emphatically thereto by you. The slightest indication on your part, through any public declaration or otherwise, varying from fundamentals in the matter of the New York railways, will humanly be taken by the police force as conveying the idea that your attitude is that of 'lip service' rather than right action. The police force is entitled to know that their mere presence without due conduct does not fulfill their duty or yours.

"Neither the City nor the State of New York require an organization from beyond its limits to interpret the law or to prescribe the manner in which it shall be enforced."

Copies of the resolutions adopted at the meeting of the New York Railways Brotherhood were prepared for Mayor Hylan, Mr. Hedges, Public Service Commissioner Lewis Nixon, and Frank Hedley, General Manager of the Interborough lines. The resolutions said in part:

"The Brotherhood of New York Railways Company Employes is an organization of workingmen. Its members have contracts with the New York Railways Company which they intend to keep. On behalf of the employes of the company we desire to assure the Receiver that in these time of serious public moment we intend to do our part toward the maintenance of efficient and uninterrupted transportation service for the people of this city. In the performance of our duties we want no interference, advice or 'assistance' from those exploiters of the laboring men who have repeatedly sought to involve us in difficulties.

"If an attempt is made to interfere with our running of the cars we shall expect and demand, as American citizens, the right of police protection in the performance of the public service which we are rendering."

P. J. Shea, the national executive officer of the union, declared that at least 60 per cent. of the men on the transit lines of Manhattan were members of the Amalgamated Association of Street Railway and Electric Workers of America, despite the assertions of the operating officials that the employes had formed their own organizations. Other leaders said that one of the aims of the strikers in Manhattan, if organizers were able to force it, would be recognition of the union.

PLUMB APPROVES SOVIET OWNERSHIP

Again Expresses Fear of Revolution if Workers Are Not Satisfied.

EXPECTS $6,000,000 FUND

Condones Letter Threatening Mr. Webster with Political Extinction at House Committee Hearing.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, Aug. 8.—Admission that he favored part of the Russian Soviet plan for the nationalization of all natural resources was made upon the stand today before the House Interstate Commerce Committee by Glenn E. Plumb, author of the "Plumb Plan" for nationalization of the railroads.

Representative Sanders of Indiana, Republican, trapped Mr. Plumb into this admission. Mr. Sanders read the following:

"Do you indorse that?" asked Mr. Sanders.

"Yes," said Mr. Plumb.

"Have you ever read the Russian Soviet Constitution?" asked Mr. Sanders.

"No."

"Well, I read this paragraph from a photographic copy of that Constitution obtained from the State Department."

Mr. Plumb was on the stand for five hours under a severe cross-examination by members of the committee. At one time Representative Webster of Washington, Republican, who asserted at the first day of the hearing that he would not be "coerced" by labor, presented a letter to prove that such an attempt was actually made. This letter, which Representative Webster said was "one of scores" he had received, read:

"Falls Lodge 512.

"J. Daniel Webster:

"Greeting: In council assembled, the Brotherhood of Railway Carmen of America, Falls Lodge 512, do most emphatically proclaim and assert that under Government control of the railroads that wages have been increased, the work day shortened, and our working conditions improved; that labor and the family have had more of the necessities of life.

"Which condition has made it possible for him to become a better citizen, as from his savings he has become the owner of a home, and the children have the advantage of a better education.

"Therefore, he who obstructs the Government in this policy of control or ownership becomes our direct enemy and shall so be posted, and a record of his action shall be kept for future reference, and it shall be our pledged policy to remove him from whatever political line of trust the public has given into his keeping.

"We believe it to be our duty to our God, our country, and to man 'that labor should have an equality of opportunity.'

"And he who denies to labor the right of a living wage is as great an enemy as the alien, the pro-German, and the anarchist.

"And we so strongly affirm this position that he who strives to object or demean labor, or in any political way detract from the quality of labor, shall be posted throughout the length and breadth of our fair land as an undesirable. 'He has denied the right of labor to equality.'

"TONY CASPERIAN.

"East 923 Riverside, Spokane."

Again Speaks of Revolution.

Under examination Mr. Plumb said he would not indorse such a letter.

"I admit that it is a plain threat," he said.

He altered materially, testimony which he gave yesterday. Then he said after a speech he made at St. Louis, a man said to him:

"By God, if we can't have this plan there's going to be revolution!"

This afternoon the witness said:

"By God, if we can't get something like this there's going to be revolution!"

Mr. Plumb believed the man meant an overturning of the industrial system and that "direct action" would first come by "the use of the ballot." "The men will get liberty to live, through the Constitution and the law, but if the powers of reaction prevent that form of expression, then the men will take another way"—the one used "in all history against reaction."

To further questions he said:

"There's not any doubt in my mind that you have any doubt in your mind as to what I mean."

Plan for Dividing Revenues.

He said that he would split revenues under the plan into 70 per cent. for operating expenses, 20 per cent. for sinking fund and interest charges on bonds, and divide the remaining 10 per cent. between the Government and the employes, perhaps half of it going to a 5 per cent. rate reduction. He expressed no doubt as to the ability to sell $12,000,000,000 of bonds to float his scheme, saying the bonds would have more security than the Liberty issue, and investors would "welcome" the chance for safe investment.

When Representative Winslow of Massachusetts, Republican, asked if "good will" would be a purchasable asset under the plan, Mr. Plumb said that "good will" did not exist in "monopoly and the railroads are monopolies." Mr. Winslow said accommodating clerks in a store added to its good-will. But Mr. Plumb would not agree.

"The clerks are accommodating merely because they want to hold their jobs," he said. "If there is any good-will it should go to the clerks and not to the employers. I would not assume the employer paid them any more for being accommodating."

"The realm of business seems the only line you are not thoroughly familiar with," commented Mr. Winslow.

Charges were made by the witness that the Chicago & Alton, Southern Pacific, Kansas City Southern, and "every railroad" under the laws of Illinois, Missouri, Kentucky, Pennsylvania, Louisiana, Mississippi, Alabama, Texas, Colorado, the Dakotas, California, Washington, Oregon, and "other States" had violated the law by issuing securities in excess of their value. He said there had been but one prosecution. The Alton he called the "shining example of scandalous management," saying it had been over-capitalized 100 per cent.

"By taking counsel" of the men under him he "democratized" a street railway of which he once had "absolute control," said Mr. Plumb.

"You said you had absolute control, you used those words; how can that be democracy?" asked Representative Montague of Virginia, Democrat.

"Did you divide the profits?" followed Representative Winslow.

"I raised the wages and I made the men earn them," responded Mr. Plumb.

"Oh, he 'made them earn them'; he made them earn them," commented Representative Montague, laughing.

While the committee was talking about the letters received by Mr. Webster, Mr. Winslow said:

"You said yesterday that there were different kinds of propaganda, and most of your proposals came from the heart out of love of humanity, or something of that sort. Would you say this was a letter of love?"

"I think any one should have the right to use the ballot to protect their rights; they are powerless to remove a member of Congress unless public sentiment in his district does so," said Mr. Plumb.

"But this letter would hold me up to scorn and ridicule outside of my district," insisted Mr. Webster.

Defends Russian Soviets.

Mr. Plumb said that "charity" must be shown to writers of such letters because they had a "bitter road to travel." He admitted he did not indorse such a threat. Mr. Webster asked if Mr. Plumb did not realize that such a letter written to a Judge would be punishable by contempt. Mr. Plumb agreed with this, but said the present subject was pending legislation and constituents had a right to express their opinion.

"There's not a Congress in the world able to patch up the old broken-down system; it needed the awakening of the wage-earners to be the vehicle for bringing in this plan," he said at one time. "The proponents of the plan are weary of industrial strife and want peace."

"That's quite commendable," answered Mr. Winslow. "But do you think your workers have such superior wisdom that they can speak for all the people?"

"If we could induce the opponents of the plan to meet us in 100 cities in debate, we would welcome the chance, and give every advantage and pay all expenses," was the answer.

The income of the Plumb Plan League, the witness said, was "in the neighborhood of $100,000 or $125,000 annually now," though only organized in July. He estimated that its income soon would be $500,000, and implied that it might run up to $5,000,000 or $6,000,000. All of it, he aid, was coming from brotherhood members.

The 2,000,000 workers, he said, did not know the details of the plan.

"They don't ask to know," said he, "so long as the heads insist that the principles they stand for are carried out."

"Don't you think the Plumb plan is a Soviet rule instead of Government ownership?" asked Mr. Sanders.

"I don't know what the Soviet plan is, but I know the misconception that is buried in the newspapers," said Plumb. "It seems to be an idea that the working men go out, grab something and divide it among themselves. It is inconceivable to believe that this would be done."

"Do you believe that any one would be willing to underwrite your confidence that the bond issue can be subscribed?" was a question by Mr. Winslow.

"Oh, yes, and it would not need anything like the underwriting required by the Liberty Bonds."

He had not consulted the President for two years, said Mr. Plumb, but was "delighted" to find Mr. Wilson's ideas were similar.

"You think the Plumb plan announced the principles of the President?" queried Mr. Sanders.

"Just reverse that—I think the President announced the principles of the Plumb plan," replied Mr. Plumb.

He will testify again tomorrow.

PLAN NATIONAL LABOR PARTY

Conference at Chicago Aug. 18 to Consider Feasibility.

Special to The New York Times.

CHICAGO, Aug. 8.—Plans for the formation of a National Labor party are to be considered at a conference to be held in Chicago beginning Aug. 18, Frank J. Esper, Secretary of the Labor Party of Illinois, announced today. Members of Farmers' Associations also are to be invited to the gathering, he said.

"We will have at least fourteen States represented by delegates from city and State labor parties," Esper said. "We will discuss the feasibility of a National Labor party. We do not want to start a mushroom organization, but a good, stable one, and if conditions continue as they are, I believe a National Labor party will go over 100 per cent.

"We have assurances from Arthur Henderson, leader of England's Labor Party, that he will come to the United States, and one matter to come before our meeting will be the planning of a speaking tour for him throughout the country. Other speakers also are to be engaged.

"If it is decided to launch a National Party it is quite possible that a big convention will be called for October."

The Non-Partisan League of North Dakota is to be strongly represented at the coming meeting, Mr. Esper said. The Kansas farmers also are to send delegates, he declared.

WANT GERMAN ARMY CUT.

But French See Treaty Protection—Peace Debate Aug. 26.

PARIS, Aug 8.—The report of the Chamber of Deputies Peace Committee on the military, naval and aerial clauses of the treaty makes little criticism of the two last named clauses, but regrets strongly the military terms, which leave Germany in possession of an army.

"What all peoples desired, what they well earned after five years of such a terrible war, was disarmament," the report says. "Despite the limitations prescribed, the German Army will exist with a proportion of officers far superior to normal and with an excessive allowance of armament—270 machine guns to a division.

"Our chief guarantee lies in Article 213, imposing investigation by the Council of the Society of Nations, and Article 430, authorizing prolongation of the Rhenish occupation if the terms are not fulfilled. These dispositions give us relative security."

MEARS ON ALASKAN BOARD.

Appointed to Take Charge of Railway Construction There.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, Aug. 8.—The President has appointed Colonel Frederick Mears as Chairman and Chief Engineer of the Alaskan Engineering Commission, in charge of the construction of the Government railroad in Alaska. Colonel Mears was a member of this commission, but retired to return to active duty with the army during the war.

He was with General Goethals during the construction of the Panama Canal and built the Panama Railroad, and was General Manager of the American railroad lines in France.

The President has appointed William C. Edes as Consulting Engineer to the Commission.

POLICE RAID BOND OFFICE.

Detectives from the District Attorney's office yesterday raided the office of the Eastern Bond and Securities Company, at 1578 Broadway, and took to the Criminal Courts Building two automobiles of chemical samples, papers, documents, letter files and other belongings of the company. Later in the day Broughton Brandenberg, head of the company, was arrested and locked up at Police Headquarters, charged with grand larceny. The complainant against him was Edward S. Suggs of Mount Pleasant, Texas, now an employe of the Army Transport Service in this city. The amount involved was $150.

Suggs asserted that recently he went to the company's office and was induced by the sales manager to purchase $150 worth of stock in a metals company. After he left he began to doubt the wisdom of his investment. He returned some time later to the office and was told, he said, that the return of his money would be made a matter for the Board of Directors. Then he complained to the District Attorney.

Brandenberg is said to have been promoting a metals company which had the right to a process of employing asbestos in the manufacture of a certain brick. Attention was attracted to the activities of the prisoner some time ago by William A. Maxwell, who owns property on Pavilion Hill on Staten Island. He returned from a visit from the West a month ago, and while inspecting his property he came across more than forty men posed before a camera in an excavation he had made for a cellar. He questioned them and learned, he said, that his property contained deposits of asbestos, and it was hinted also that it might contain rubies and sapphires. He was told that a company had an option on the property for $10,000. Mr. Maxwell had never given an option on his property. Later Mr. Maxwell was asked by several men to show him the mine. They showed him a picture of the "entrance" to the mine and he said he recognized it as one for which the men had posed in the excavation.

ADVOCATES OF PLUMB PLAN REMAIN SILENT

PREPARE FOR CONVENTION

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, Aug. 8.—Having drawn the fire of the President and not finding it to their liking, the advocates of the nationalization of the railroads and basic industries remained silent tonight after digesting President Wilson's address. No comment concerning the message to Congress was issued from the headquarters of the Plumb Plan League.

Plans for holding a convention in Washington tomorrow and next week were being perfected, however, it was stated, and men who have and some who still are holding a prominent place in public life are expected to be present. An informal meeting will be held tomorrow morning at the Willard Hotel, it was said, and arrangements made for a continuation of the sessions Monday at a place yet to be selected.

It was stated that among those expected at the conferences tomorrow and next week were Governor Allen of Kansas, Frank P. Walsh, former Joint Chairman of the Government War Labor Board; Morris L. Cook, who was a member of the Blankenburg administration of Philadelphia and is now a consulting engineer; Professor Bemis, an economist of Chicago; ex-Governor Joseph W. Folk of Missouri, who more recently was chief counsel of the Interstate Commerce Commission, and such officials of the four railroad brotherhoods and other railway organizations in sympathy with the Plumb plan as may be in town.

The advocates of the Plumb plan would not admit that they accepted the words of President Wilson as directed at any suggestions put forth by their organizations, but that was the viewpoint taken by a number of the members of Congress who have opposed proposals made by the league to Congress committees.

ITALY RAIDS GAMBLING DENS

58 Fashionable Casinos Have Been Closed by the Government.

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

MILAN, Aug. 8.—The Government's crusade against gambling dens is being prosecuted with the utmost vigor of the law. Fifty-eight fashionable casinos have been forcibly closed down. Two of the latest surprises occurred at the famous mineral water resorts at Fluggi and Acqui. At Acqui about 12,000 in banknotes were seized in a raid on the Municipal Casino.

Still more exciting was the swooping down of a special corps of Rome police on the Fluggi Kursaal. Prior to bursting in upon the big throng of wealthy idlers the authorities plunged the whole town into sudden darkness by cutting off the electric supply. Meantime the Kursaal Gardens had been surrounded, and the frightened frequenters, jumping from windows, or seeking to steal off by garden paths, were caught in the cordon.

Many bejeweled aristocrats of both sexes were compelled to remain with their captors until dawn, awaiting their turn for examination here.

The official raiders were rewarded with the haul of nearly £4,000.

GERMAN DESERTERS TO GO.

7,000 Must Leave Holland, Amnesty Being Decreed at Home.

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

THE HAGUE, Aug. 8.—According to the Vaderland, the German deserters, about 7,000 in all, who arrived in Holland during the war will soon be obliged to leave the country.

The paper says that the reason for this is that Dutch laws provide that foreigners can only be admitted on foreign passports, and the deserters had no passports, but enjoyed the right of asylum during the war, when deportation would have meant death, while now amnesty is declared by Germany.

The pro-German Vaderland makes no reference to the ex-Kaiser and the ex-Crown Prince, who also arrived in Holland without passports.

Germans are at present swarming into Holland. Of 20,000 requests monthly for the Dutch visé to enter the country, 75 per cent. are made by Germans. In spite of elaborate red tape, many undesirables manage to reach Holland with Bolshevist propaganda, of which the Netherlands live in fear and trembling.

READY TO MEET BENNETT.

La Guardia Announces Willingness to Debate Campaign Issues.

Accepting the challenge of his opponent, former Senator William M. Bennett, Congressman F. H. La Guardia, candidate for the Republican nomination for President of the Board of Aldermen, yesterday declared that he would be delighted to debate with Mr. Bennett the issues of the campaign. At the Brevoort Hotel, where Representative La Guardia is stopping, he issued this statement:

"I shall be delighted to debate with any one who believes he has a message to the enrolled Republicans of the city. I was delighted to read Mr. Bennett's statement. I have known him for many years. I was associated with him in his office for a long time and patiently endeavored to school him in public matters. The progressive ideas contained in his statement show that he has acquired, at the least, some of my ideas on municipal government. Of course, my platform is beyond the realm of promises. It is backed by actual constructive achievements in public office. To date I have received no word from Mr. Bennett."

ALBERT TO MAKE LONG STAY

BRUSSELS, Aug. 7.—Details of King Albert's trip to America have not yet been fully arranged, but it is likely that he will start about the middle of September and will not return until his presence here is necessary because of the elections. According to present plans, he will make a complete swing of the country and will be accompanied by his son, Prince Leopold.

Cardinal Mercier will start for America Sept. 4 or Sept. 8 and will probably be gone until the end of October. He intends to visit Montreal and Quebec. He has been invited to British Columbia, but will hardly find time to make this extended trip.

SHOPMEN RESPOND TO JEWELL APPEAL

UNION OFFICIALS CONFER

Chicago Leaders Ask Workers to Heed President—Boston Men Act Tomorrow.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, Aug. 8.—The indications tonight, according to officials of the Railroad Administration, are that the majority of railway workers who went on strike without the sanction of their national leaders, are returning to their work as a result of the announcement made yesterday by President Wilson that Director General of Railroads Hines was vested with full power to adjust wage differences, but only in the event that the strikes were brought to an end.

B. M. Jewell, acting national representative of the men, said that a day or two would establish the attitude which the strikers would assume. He has been making every effort to get the men back to work, and has sent telegrams to the local leaders in all parts of the nation. Today he received many replies, and it is said that the large majority of them are favorable to an amicable settlement of differences.

The Railroad Administration said tonight that they had received reassuring reports from a large number of the lines, including the Baltimore & Ohio, Lackawanna, Pennsylvania, Norfolk & Western, Rock Island, Chicago, Milwaukee & St. Paul; Western Maryland, the Kansas City terminals, and the city round houses. Reports continued to come into the Administration headquarters throughout the country and the officials indicated that the situation was most encouraging.

The most serious condition, it was said, was found in shops in and about the nation's capital, but it was believed that the vast majority of the strikers would heed the words of the President and return to work.

The Railroad Administration is making preparations to speed up consideration of the wage demands of the men as quickly as the unauthorized strikes are ended, and unless there are some unforeseen developments it is expected that a peaceful agreement on the questions at issue will be reached.

There has been no decision yet as to the manner in which the money to meet the increased wages will be raised, in the event such an agreement is arrived at. It is probable that either increased rates or a request upon Congress for an appropriation will be resorted to as the situation at the time the agreement is reached warrants.

NEW HAVEN PLACES EMBARGO ON FREIGHT

The strike of the more than 7,000 shopmen on the New York, New Haven & Hartford Railroad, who without serving notice, quit their jobs Thursday, continued yesterday. From outward appearances there was nothing to indicate that the strikers would follow the orders of B. M. Jewell, the acting President of the Railway Employes' Department of the American Federation of Labor, who on Friday night wired the striking shopmen in all parts of the country to return to their jobs as requested by President Wilson, adding that the action of the men in "striking in violation of the laws of our organization has been detrimental and embarassing to your officers in the handling of these negotiations."

Not only did the men who struck on Thursday remain idle, but reports from other parts of the New Haven system yesterday showed that their ranks were increased by men employed by the Central of New England and the Boston & Maine Railroads, both of these lines being affiliated with the New York, New Haven & Hartford. The effect of the strike was the further curtailment of the passenger and freight traffic over the system which so far as freight is concerned, resulted in an embargo on all freight on the New York, New Haven & Hartford, and the Central of New England systems.

The New Haven also discontinued twenty-six of its passenger trains yesterday until further notice, the trains temporarily removed from the schedules including some of the most important of the expresses operated between this city and Boston and points in northern New England. The New York, New Haven & Hartford management issued this notice:

The embargo following was put out in order to control the movement of freight, so that arrangements may be made to give preference to the handling of foodstuffs and shipments of immediate necessity.

All freight is embargoed.

Effective Saturday, Aug. 9, the following trains originating and terminating at New Rochelle will be discontinued until further notice:

Leaving New Rochelle.	Leaving Grand Central Terminal.
7:41 A.M.	5:06 P.M.

8:09 A.M. (2 sect'ns.)	5:44 P.M.
8:30 A.M.	5:57 P.M.

Effective Friday, Aug. 8, the following trains via the New York, New Haven & Hartford will be discontinued until further notice:

The New Haven announced late last night discontinuance today of a large number of additional trains. Among them are those leaving Boston for Providence at 7:39 and 9:05 A. M. and 11 P. M.; Providence for Boston at 9:37 and 11 A. M.; Providence for Worcester at 7:50 A. M., 12:05 and 10:20 P. M.; Worcester for Providence at 7:42 and 10:35 A. M., and 4 and 9:30 P. M.

It was also announced that parlor cars on day trains had been temporarily discontinued, but that a limited number of sleeping cars would, until further notice, be operated on the trains leaving the Grand Central for Boston about midnight.

Special to The New York Times.

GREENWICH, Conn., Aug. 8.—New York commuters were delayed this morning from reaching their places of business on account of the railroad strike. The 719 and 817 trains, to which the club cars for Greenwich commuters are attached, did not run, and many of the commuters had to use their automobiles. Only three trains passed through here this forenoon, and they were late.

BOSTON, Aug. 8.—The railroad shopmen resolved at a general meeting today that their strike in New England would continue at least until Monday, when the proposition of President Wilson that work be resumed pending an adjustment of their grievances will be considered. It was stated that no official notice of the wish of the President had been received, nor had any word come from B. M. Jewell, acting President of the Railway Employes' department of the American Federation of Labor.

Monday was set for the discussion, as a meeting of the System Federations of the Boston & Maine, Boston & Albany, and the New Haven roads has been called for that day here.

Annulment of suburban passenger service on the Boston & Maine and New York, New Haven & Hartford lines on account of the shopmen's strike interrupted rapid transit between fifty cities and towns and this city today. The Boston & Albany Railroad, also affected by the strike, started its suburban business as usual, but officials said that it might have to be curtailed later.

Thousands of commuters who customarily use the trains were compelled to travel by trolley today, with the result that there was confusion and congestion at the electric terminals and stations, and general traffic delays were frequent. Mail distribution to suburban points was carried out by the use of automobiles.

The Boston & Albany Railroad announced today that several hundred shopmen in this city and practically the entire force of car inspectors, both here and at Worcester, had joined the strike, and that some curtailment of service would be necessary.

The Boston and Maine, which maintained some suburban service this morning, announced that there would be absolutely no service tonight. A number of important through trains used by vacationists and others to reach the Summer resort points will be eliminated also tomorrow.

MECHANICSVILLE, N. Y., Aug. 8.—Four hundred and fifty shopmen, carmen and inspectors, in the employ of the Boston and Maine Railroad, quit work this morning.

FITCHBURG, Mass., Aug. 8.—Five hundred employes of the Boston and Maine car shops and engine house here went on strike today.

EAST DEERFIELD, Mass., Aug. 8.—The 319 Federated craftsmen employed in the Boston and Maine shops here went on strike today. All of the men are out except eight or ten who belong to an older union than that to which the strikers belong.

Appeal to Workers to Return

CHICAGO, Aug. 8.—The ranks of the striking railroad shopmen began to break today following the warning of President Wilson that their wage demands would not be acted upon until they had returned to work. R. H. Aishton, Northwest Regional Director, announced that in Chicago about 450 men had returned to their places, 375 of them employes of the Chicago, Milwaukee & St. Paul, and seventy-five of the Chicago & Northwestern Railway.

At Kansas City 4,000 of the shopmen returned to their jobs, and 10,000 more at Council Bluffs and Milwaukee. All of the Chicago & Great Western's employes returned to work. At the following places the shops are reported in full operation: Tomahawk, Wis.; Wausau, Wis.; Portage, Wis.; Lacrosse, Wis.; Clellum, Wis., and Melstone, Wis.

All Illinois Central shopmen at Champaign were back at their benches at noon, and so were all the Michigan Central workers in the territory surrounding Chicago.

Foodstuffs on all lines were kept moving, but nonperishable shipments were much delayed. All passenger trains were on time, and none, except the seventeen suspended by the Northwestern Thursday night, were taken off.

Representatives of the six international organizations of railway shopmen met in Chicago yesterday to devise means of ending the walkout. Later the following statement was given out:

"We believe the men are honest and sincere and will show their good judgment and their faith in the President by returning to work without delay. Any individual who advises the men to disobey the request of President Wilson has not the interest of his associate members at heart, and we question his honesty and motives. We appeal to the sound judgment of the rank and file of organized labor to work in order that the international officers may immediately get into conference with the Director General and settle the wage question."

CLEVELAND, Aug. 8.—One thousand Pennsylvania Railroad shopmen on strike here since Monday voted tonight to return to work tomorrow morning on the basis of President Wilson's assurance that their demands would be taken up when they returned to work. Striking employes of the Nickel Plate shops here also have decided to return to work tomorrow.

SPRINGFIELD, Ill., Aug. 8.—Striking members of the Federated Carmen's Union, affiliated with the International Brotherhood of Electrical Workers, were ordered back to work today. The order was sent out by John P. Noonan, International Vice President, as a result of the decision by President Wilson that settlement of the wage question would be held in abeyance pending return of the railroad workers to their tasks.

CINCINNATI, Aug. 8.—The return to work today of about 100 Big Four Railroad mechanics employed at the Riverside roundhouse and the Sharonville yards was taken as an indication of improvement of operating conditions in this district. The action followed a vote taken by the men last night to rescind their strike resolution of last Monday.

KANSAS CITY, Aug. 8.—Responding to the appeals of the heads of their national organizations, striking railway shopmen of the six federated crafts, at a mass meeting here today, voted to return to work immediately.

CONNEAUT, Ohio, Aug. 8.—All employes of the Nickel Plate Railroad car shops here are on strike today following the walkout of 600 machinists, car repairmen, and other shop craft this morning. They had been held at work by union officials pending the results of a national strike vote, but at a meeting last night voted to quit work today.

Special to The New York Times.

ATLANTA, Ga., Aug. 8.—The Executive Committee of the Affiliated Shop Craftsmen this afternoon adopted resolutions stating that they would not return to work until a satisfactory settlement to them had been made.

FAVOR WORKER DIRECTORS.

Boston Commerce Chamber Also Votes for Rail Consolidation.

Special to The New York Times.

BOSTON, Aug. 8.—The just completed mail vote of members by the Boston Chamber of Commerce on the international railroad situation developed a number of surprises, chief of which, perhaps, was the vote, 446 yeas to 157 noes for giving employes representation on the directorates. Another significant vote was that in favor of permitting consolidation, 720 in favor to 906 opposed.

The big items in the referendum and balloting results were as follows: Private ownership, yes, 700; no, 58.

Opposition to the regional organization, yes, 436; no, 183. Immediate return to owners, yes, 671; no, 51.

Continuance of Government guaranty until Dec. 31, 1919, that legislation may be enacted to protect the roads from the disastrous consequences which would result from the present relation of expenses to income, yes, 720; no, 8.

Explicitly to direct the Interstate Commerce Commission to authorize a rate structure which will produce sufficient revenue to pay a reasonable return on an equitable valuation of railroad property, and in this way revive and strengthen the credit of solvent railroads, yes 715, no 15.

To permit consolidations, unifications, and joint use of facilities, when shown to be in the public interests, having due regard to the value of competition; Yes, 720; No. 8.

To provide that the Interstate Commerce Commission shall regulate and control the issuance of securities and shall supervise all capital expenditures; Yes, 622; No, 76.

That employes should be given representation on the directorates; Yes, 446; No, 157.

URGES ARMED FORCE TO CHECK SHOPMEN

Blanton Declares in Resolution in House That a State of Anarchy Exists.

SAYS PRESIDENT BLUNDERED

Accuses Congress of "Truckling" to Organized Labor in Heated Discussion.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, Aug. 8. — Anarchy exists in the land in the shape of the railway shopmen's strike and the President should be directed to use armed force to destroy the menace, Representative Blanton of Texas, Democrat, declared in a resolution he introduced today in the House. Mr. Blanton, who is one of the most outspoken opponents of organized labor in the House, later made a speech in which he said the passage of the Adamson eight-hour law was "the most colossal blunder" in the life of President Wilson.

Mr. Blanton accused the House of having "truckled" to labor in the past. This accusation was immediately challenged by Representative Wingo of Arkansas, Democrat, who tried to have the words stricken from the record. But the House supported Mr. Blanton and refused by a vote of 125 to 82 to expunge the language. The vote was a two-edged sword, for it was taken not only to reflect the stand of the House toward the strikers but as a condemnation by the present Republican Congress of the former Democratic Congress, which passed the Adamson law in 1916.

Mr. Blanton was upon his feet as soon as the House met today. He sought, immediately, to speak on a question of personal privilege to reply to accusations of falsehood, which, he said, had been made against him Saturday night on the floor by Representative Burke, Republican, of Pennsylvania. At that time Mr. Blanton made a speech against labor and its demands, and Mr. Burke, who is a member of the Order of Railway Conductors, took him to task.

"Threats, forced increases for the brotherhoods during the war," cried Mr. Blanton today, speaking in loud tones. "They now ask Congress and the President for $1,000,000,000 when they have already received $833,000,000. If they don't get it, what? Then Mr. Jewell says the railways will be tied up so tight they will never run again."

Mr. King of Illinois, Republican, contended that Mr. Blanton was not confining himself to his question of personal privilege. The Speaker admonished the Texan.

"Are we going to be men and not truckle?" shouted Mr. Blanton. "The brotherhoods are before the Interstate Commerce Commission with this plundering Plumb plan."

There was another interruption from Mr. Mondell, the Republican floor leader, who said Mr. Blanton was straying from his subject.

"I may have committed lese majeste. I did so, but I accuse Congress of having truckled in the past," cried Mr. Blanton, louder than ever.

At once Mr. Wingo demanded that the language be struck from the record. Mr. Blanton was told to "sit down." He seated himself on a chair in front of the Speaker's desk, but kept hopping up. Mr. Mondell and Mr. Wingo insisted that he remain seated, and the House rang with cries of "Sit down! Sit down!" Then Mr. Blanton tried to withdraw his language. Mr. Wingo refused to allow this.

"May I put Congressmen on the witness stand to prove they truckled?" asked Mr. Blanton, leaping to his feet.

"Sit down! Sit down! Oh, sit down!" yelled House members.

A roll call was demanded, but just before it began Representative Quinn of Mississippi appeared with a huge dictionary. He wished to prove that "truckled" was not unparliamentary language. The Speaker did not recognize him. After the roll call Mr. Blanton and Mr. Burke spoke, one against labor and one in favor of it.

Text of Resolution.

The resolution which Mr. Blanton introduced today reads:

"Whereas, through organized effort the proper transmission of interstate mails, telegraphic communication, and interstate traffic has been interferred with, retarded and in many instances has been forcibly prevented altogether, thereby hampering, crippling, and attempting to destroy the industries of the United States; and,

"Whereas the personal rights and privileges of the citizens to peaceably travel with safety the highways and common carriers of their native country have been interfered with, disregarded, and prevented, and the right of private property jeopardized; and

"Whereas, as a result of open brigandage, hitherto tolerated, demands have been made upon the Government of the United States to pay out of the people's Treasury into the hands of a special class public money to the extent of billions of dollars, with threat of revolution against the Government of the United States unless such demands are complied with, which conditions create and establish a state of anarchy in the United States;

"Therefore be it resolved by the Senate and House of Representatives of the United States of American, in Congress assembled,

"That anarchy is hereby declared to exist in the United States; and that the President be and he is hereby authorized and directed to employ the entire naval and military forces of the United States and the resources of the Government to destroy such anarchy, to prevent any interference whatever with the proper transmission of interstate mails, telegrahpic communication, and interstate traffic, that he shall make secure all citizens in their private property rights, and their rights and privileges to work without molestation, and to bring this state of anarchy to successful termination all of the resources of the country are hereby pledged by the Congress of the United States."

ADOPT ERZBERGER TAXES.

Germans Approve Centralized Plan of Finance Minister.

WEIMAR, Aug. 8, (Associated Press.)—The Association of States of the old Imperial Council voted yesterday to present to the National Assembly the imperial impost tax proposed by Mathias Erzberger, Vice Premier and Minister of Finance.

This decision, which approves the Erzberger plan of unified imperial taxes, removes the rights of states to impose taxes, and was bitterly contested. It is regarded as a great personal victory for Erzberger.

The Association of States must approve every bill before it goes to the Assembly and its approval often assures the passage of a bill.

TROOPS LEAVE STOCK YARDS

CHICAGO, Aug. 8.—State troops were ordered removed today from the scenes of last week's race riots and the Stock Yards. After a general strike of union workers had badly crippled the packing companies and livestock dealers had warned producers to suspend shipments to Chicago temporarily. Although four regiments, including all troops at the Stock Yards, were withdrawn tonight by order of Adjt. Gen. Dickson on request of Mayor Thompson, union leaders declared the strike would continue until policemen and Deputy Sheriffs also had left the yards. The last State troops would be out of Chicago by tomorrow night, according to General Dickson's plans.

Differing claims as to the number of men involved in the strike were made by packers and union leaders tonight. J. W. Johnstone, Secretary of the Stock Yards Labor Council, declared that with 6,000 wool workers who had agreed tonight to join the walkout, 36,000 men had quit work and that 4,000 carpenters and wood workers and 1,200 stationary engineers were expected to join them.

John O'Hern, General Superintendent of Armour & Co., asserted the entire number of strikers was not in excess of 13,000. He said an appeal had been made to union employes of the street railways to stop carrying non-union workers to the Stock Yards. The street car men had promised to consider it, he said.

Everett C. Brown, President of the Chicago Livestock Exchange, said the situation was not as bad as had been believed. After a conference with the packers, he said Armour & Co. and Swift & Co. could operate at 80 per cent. of normal and Morris & Co. at 60 or 70 per cent.

Union leaders declare the strike was in protest against the presence of armed guards—troops, police, and deputy sheriffs—and not because of prejudice against negro workers who returned to work yesterday, after an absence of ten days because of the race riots.

ASSAILS POLICY ON IRELAND

London Times Says Lloyd George Faces Issue as a Tactician.

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

LONDON, Aug. 8.—The Times, in regretting Lloyd George's treatment of the Irish question, declares that nothing he said in Parliament yesterday tended to remove the suspicion that he faces this issue as tactician rather than as a statesman. It says:

"His invariable practice in domestic—and, indeed, in many international—matters has been not to take a thought for the morrow, or to recognize that foresight and government are in truth identical, but to wait for the 'crisis' and then to tide it over by some 'happy improvisation.'"

The Times concludes:

"As regards the Prime Minister's references to this journal as not being 'particularly friendly' to him we entirely decline to make of this or of any other national issue a matter of friendliness or unfriendliness toward any politician. We are friendly toward a good policy based on a high conception of national interests, and we are unfriendly to any policy which falls short of that standard."

IRISH ATTACK POLICE HUT.

Latter Win Rifle and Revolver Battle in East Clare.

DUBLIN, Aug. 8, (Associated Press.)—A party of more than thirty men attacked a police hut at Moinoe, East Clare, with rifle and revolver fire this morning.

The police replied vigorously, the fight lasting more than an hour. None of the police was hit, but it is believed two of the attackers were wounded.

ALLIES DEMAND GEN. KRUSKA

Ask for Prison Camp Commander Accused of Misdeeds.

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

BERLIN, Aug. 8, (via Copenhagen.)—According to a telegram to the Vossische Zeitung from Cassel, General Kruska, late commandant of the prison camp at Kaiser, will be the first blacklisted person summoned to appear before the Entente Court. He is accused of having caused the death of 3,000 prisoners through spotted fever by brutal and negligent administration.

The newspapers report the case of Dr. Eduard Schmidt Landau, who was tried and convicted by a French military court for cruelty toward French soldiers dating back two years ago. Lieutenant Merty was convicted of similar charges dating from the Belgian occupation.

"Aida" Postponed to Next Saturday.

The mammoth open air performance of "Aida," which was to have been given tomorrow night at the Sheepshead Bay Speedway, has been postponed to next Saturday night on account of the strike on the Brooklyn Rapid Transit lines. The managers state that the same cast of stars as previously announced will appear, together with the ensemble of 2,000 under the direction of Giorgio Polacco.

SEVEN-HOUR DAY FOR BRITISH MINERS

Commons Adopts the Bill for Shorter Working Week in English Mines.

YORKSHIRE STRIKE STILL ON

LONDON, Aug. 8, (Associated Press.)—The House of Commons today adopted the bill providing for a seven-hour workday in mines.

Notwithstanding the fact that there were further conferences today, the strike of coal miners in Yorkshire remains unsettled, and the conditions as a result are becoming very serious.

The strike on the tramways of Liverpool was settled today. Work will be resumed Saturday.

The bread strike in some of the provincial towns has ended, and, although it continues in London, there is good prospect of a settlement, the bakers' union having authorized a resumption of work individually with employers who are willing to concede the bakers' terms.

The Ministry of Labor is endeavoring to induce the men to accept arbitration on the wage question and leave the vexed question of night work to be settled afterward. Further, the Ministry, with the sanction of the Cabinet, has promised to introduce a bill in Parliament providing that night work shall be compulsorily abolished two years hence throughout the country. The bakers' union is recommending that the men accept the proposed terms.

The report of the Sankey Coal Commission, submitted last March, recommended seven hours of work under ground for British miners instead of eight, from July of this year until July, 1921, when a six-hour day would be adopted if the economic position of the industry warranted it.

200,000 STRIKE IN ITALY.

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

MILAN, Aug. 6.—The general strike in the Italian metallurgical industries is assuming vast proportions. It is spreading from Lombardy over the whole of Northern Italy, down to Tuscany and large parts of Central Italy.

Two hundred thousand workers have abandoned the machine shops and steel foundries. The men's demands, which have already been the subject of two months of laborious attempts at arbitration, are of a technical and complicated character, but they may be summed up as an endeavor to establish minimum pay for all skilled employes over 25 years of age on a par with the maximum rates paid to the highest categories during wartime. These demands, however, take into account the 45 per cent. dividend actually already given on the score of the cost of living.

The iron and steel masters on their part have proclaimed a lockout and announced their determined refusal to reopen their works until solid guarantees are forthcoming against further interruption in production. In this proclamation the masters declare that the dearth of coal and raw materials, added to the present heavy advances in wages, has left all metal working enterprises in Italy, with perhaps the sole exception of the Piedmontese automobile industry, without an appreciable margin of profit.

It is generally feared in trade circles that the struggle will prove to be a stubborn one. The Central Executive of the Metal Workers' Federation has a reserve of about $200,000, and several local branches have much larger sums at their disposal.

INDIA WOMEN ASK BALLOT.

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

LONDON, Aug. 8.—A deputation of Indian women, who are permanent residents in this country, waited upon the Secretary of State for India, Mr. Montagu, today to appeal for the enfranchisement of Indian women. The deputation included notable women whose works in art, literature, politics and finance are well known in both hemispheres. Most of them wore gorgeous Oriental costumes with beautifully jeweled Indian ornaments. The chief speakers for the deputation were the poetess, Mrs. Sarojini Naidu; the orator and writer, Mrs. Sen and Mrs. Debant.

Montagu expressed sympathy with the argument placed before him and declared that he would give the matter earnest consideration, but couldn't commit himself to any definite promise.

SAYS REDS CAN'T RULE ITALY

Nitti Has Faith in Wilson's Power to Help Solve Problems.

ROME, Aug. 8, (Associated Press.)—"The fear of a revolution of Asiatic Bolshevism is unfounded," said Francesco Nitti, the Italian Premier, in an interview given out today with reference to conditions in Italy.

"There have been fewer disturbances in Italy than in other countries," the Premier pointed out. "The workers of Italy," he added, "will solve the high cost of living problem by greater production."

The Premier said he had confidence that President Wilson's scholarly and energetic mind would reach a satisfactory conclusion regarding Italian interests.

KING FERDINAND NOW IN BUDAPEST

DENIES BREAK WITH ALLIES

VIENNA PREDICTS MONARCHY

Friedrich, New Magyar Premier, Long a Workman in the United States.

ZURICH, Aug. 8.—King Ferdinand of Rumania arrived in Budapest yesterday, according to a dispatch reaching here from that city.

PARIS, Aug. 8, (Associated Press.)—Nicholas Misu of the Rumanian peace delegation, was called today for the second time before the Supreme Council on account of the Rumanians' refusal to comply with the demands of the Peace Conference. In conversation with members of the Council M. Misu denied that Rumania had broken away from the Peace Conference. His explanation of the situation in Budapest was that Rumanian officers there had ignored the Supreme Council's orders.

The attitude of the Rumanians is causing great embarrassment to the Supreme Council, it is understood, and the Council is discussing practically nothing else.

Rumania Severely Criticised.

Rumania, it was said today in some quarters, declared herself an ally of the Entente in order to gain economic and financial aid. The United States, it was pointed out, extended a credit of $20,000,000, and the other allies advanced a like amount for feeding Rumania. Rumania's violation of the Peace Conference's orders at this time, when the harvest renders her temporarily self-supporting, is said to have surprised conference members, who hold that her economic future depends upon the Allies' good-will. They expressed resentment at the unofficial statement of the Rumanians that Germany will help them if the Allies do not.

The Supreme Council's warning note to Rumania, according to the usually well-informed "Pertinax," writing in the Echo de Paris, is a call to order, and Rumania seems to have decided to make concessions in form, if not in fact. He thinks it probable that an agreement will be reached.

Archduke Joseph, governing at Budapest, Pertinax says, is the first of the old régime to come back, and he asks if the period of returns from Elba is about to begin in Central Europe.

"We have never felt that our alliance would find safety in the founding of democratic States in Germany and Austria-Hungary," he adds, "and we shall not regret the shifting of scenery in Hungary if it acted as a warning to the holders of certain illusions."

Some distrust of Archduke Joseph is expressed by the newspapers generally and an attitude of reserve is urged. The Figaro says he "is a Magyar and therefore a resolute, traditional enemy of France, and this is enough to justify our mistrust and, if necessary, rigorous action by us."

The Journal expresses the opinion that the Supreme Council, "which often has been criticised for its hopeful attitude," is handling the case with desirable prudence.

Rumanian Commander Defiant.

BUDAPEST, Aug. 7, (Associated Press.)—General Holban, Rumanian commander in charge of the occupation of Budapest, today told the Allies' representatives who inquired why he did not obey the wireless orders of the Peace Conference, that he was not obliged to consider them as authentic and that the occupation of Budapest would continue as long as he thought necessary. He added that any conversations of a diplomatic character must be carried on with the Rumanian Government at Bucharest.

A censorship has been established over foreign messages and the local newspapers appear with many blank spaces.

The Rumanians are carrying out requisitions of supplies and material demanded of the Hungarian Government in the armistice terms. Three hundred thousand crowns held by the police and several millions of soldiers' savings deposited at the Central Military Depot were said to have been taken, along with stocks of shoes and uniforms. Cattle, hogs and chickens are being seized in the villages.

Complaints about the shooting of a number of civilians were said to have been answered by Rumanian officers with the admission that the killings were prompted by revenge, and that the Rumanians would seize all the valuables they could find.

Archduke's Coup Startles Germany.

BERLIN, Aug. 8, (via Copenhagen).—The appointment of Archduke Joseph as Regent of Hungary has created a great sensation in Germany and is deplored deeply by the Democratic and Socialist press, the latter going so far as calling it a monarchistic counter revolution.

The Centrist papers hesitatingly approve the appointment, while the reactionary press discreetly avoids any comment as far as Joseph's person is concerned. Not even the Freiheit, the Independent organ, has anything but appreciative remarks, but the Freiheit suggests that Joseph will probably follow Louis Napoleon's example and the Hungarian President will change to a Hungarian King. Most of the Democratic and Socialist papers express like fears, some adding that Joseph may only act as place holder for Charles of Hapsburg.

The Berliner Tageblatt suggests that Joseph's appointment may be regarded as a stern refusal by the Entente regarding Rumania's measureless aspirations in Hungary, and that Joseph or Charles or some other Hapsburg may soon appear as the Entente's candidate as ruler of the Danube Federation, which developments in Hungary have brought within the range of possibility.

The effect of Joseph's appointment on Republican politicians is even more depressing. THE NEW YORK TIMES correspondent being assured by them that it would strengthen the reactionary cause tremendously because creating a base for the reintroduction of the monarchy in Central Europe.

State Secretary of the Interior Heine said he feared the Entente statesmen, especially those in England and America, understood the situation insufficiently or they would not have permitted this appointment, which is evidently of French origin and intended to create new trouble for the German republic. He thought the Americans, even if they recognized the mistake made by Joseph's appointment, would not have sufficient influence to neutralize the bad effect it was bound to have on the Republican idea of Central Europe. This appointment means wind for the sails of reaction which work unceasingly for the overthrow of the Republican Government.

Expect Return of Monarchy.

BERLIN, Aug. 8, (Associated Press.) (Hungarian.)—The Tageblatt's Vienna correspondent says it is believed that the elections for the Hungarians National Assembly will likely give a large majority in favor of re-establishment of the monarchy, with Archduke Joseph as King, and adds that numerous supporters of Bela Kun have been arrested, and the "Nephava," the organ of the Soviet Dictatorship, has suspended publication. Johann Sauery has been appointed Hungarian Minister of Commerce.

Stephen Friedrich, Hungarian Premier under Archduke Joseph, according to sketches of him published here, spent eight years in the United States as a workman in machinery plants. He became an engineer and owner of a machinery factory. Upon his return to Hungary he was active in politics for seven or eight years, but did not hold office.

Premier Friedrich was a follower of Count Karolyi and accompanied the latter to the United States in 1914, and was interned with him in France on their return. Later the Premier reached Budapest and became Minister of War under Count Karolyi.

The appointment of M. Friedrich as Premier, dispatches from Budapest assert, is generally accepted by Hungarian politicians as assurance that the Government will be democratic-bourgeois and not monarchistic in tone, although the delegation of power to Archduke Joseph is commented upon as constituting a virtual temporary military dictatorship.

A sensational report that the resignation of the short-lived Peidli Ministry was accomplished by the use of a revolver was printed today by the Vossische Zeitung. M. Dovohak, former President of the revolutionary Government Council and Minister of Commerce under Premier Peidli, was said in this version to have been shot and to have died later.

General Schnitzer, the newspaper said, "ostensibly took over the Ministry of War, but as Budapest received two hours in which to surrender its weapons, it is believed probable that his chief duty consists in quickly collecting the weapons and ammunition demanded by the Rumanians before the Allies can interfere. The army at Budapest is able to defeat easily the allied troops should it come to a conflict."

One of Hungary's best known newspapers, the Pester Lloyd, passed out of existence yesterday. It was taken over by the Soviets when they assumed control of Budapest, and was so conducted that its editor, M. Josseffzi, states that he is unable to continue its publication. He announced that he would not be responsible for the articles that had appeared in it since the beginning of the Soviet régime.

Thief Steals Archduke's Trousers.

VIENNA, Aug. 7, (Associated Press.) After various consultations with allied representatives, including General Gordon of the British Army and Colonel W. B. Causey, U. S. A., attached to the Relief Administration in Budapest, as well as Lieut. Col. Romanelli of the Italian mission, yesterday, Archduke Joseph and his Generals called upon the Allies in a group. Reports reaching here say that this visit had to be delayed because the Archduke's trousers had disappeared, having been stolen. His attachés had to do some quick skirmishing to borrow another pair, it is said, inasmuch as the Communists had taken most of the Archduke's clothing a month ago. When he visited the Allies he presented his plan for a new Government, which was tacitly accepted.

"In view of the fact that the proclamation of Archduke Joseph, Governor of State, calling on all classes of the people to help him win in his fight to establish order in Hungary is signed "Joseph, Archduke, Field Marshal," it is taken here for granted that an attempt is to be made to set up Joseph as King of Hungary.

After the Communist outrages it is believed the peasants would not oppose such a step. Already the peasants are touching their hats to those above them in caste. Archduke Joseph enjoys a certain popularity among the people for having shown courage in exposing himself to danger during the war. In the fighting his cap and clothing several times were pierced by bullets and shell splinters.

The Social Democrats are taking the setting up of another kingdom for granted and are much discouraged, declaring that their struggles for freedom during a period of thirty years will be nullified by such action. The Vienna monarchists, on the other hand, are enthusiastic over the prospects.

AUSTRIA IMPLORES LIGHTENING OF DEBT

COPENHAGEN, Aug. 7, (Associated Press.)—A summary of the Austrian note presented to the Allied Peace Mission at St. Germain yesterday has been received here from Vienna.

"If German Austria's territorial demands are fulfilled to the minimum extent maintained for in the appendix to the note," says the summary, "German Austria will make efforts to believe that she can live independently and in peace in this territory. She expects that the League of Nations will hear her in her hour of distress.

"On the other hand, German Austria still is firmly convinced that the economic burdens imposed upon her by the Peace Treaty cannot really be carried out, and that if they are not substantially lightened she is bound to collapse."

Dealing with the economic and financial clauses of the Peace Treaty, the note continues:

"It will be impossible for the next few months to deliver milk, cows, and cattle, as German Austria's children are perishing for lack of meat and milk. German Austria must allow herself to be placed under the Entente powers' financial control, but she expects that the Repatriation Committee will act with the consideration demanded by her desperate position and grant German Austria the necessary credits to obtain raw materials and foodstuffs."

The note urges amendment, with a view to investing a commission with plenary powers regarding all economic and financial peace conditions. It then argues at length regarding "the unjust and unequal division of old Austria's debts among the States which succeeded it and the injustice of stipulations regarding war loans."

"It seems self-evident," the note continues, "that all States in what formerly was Austria-Hungary should divide the debts of the old monarchy. Apart from the banknote debt, clauses in the Peace Treaty show a burden of debt for German Austria of some 40,000,000,000 marks. Thus two-thirds of the entire debt of the Austrian States, without the note debt, is placed on the shoulders of one-fifth of the former population."

The note proposes, as in the case of pre-war debts, that all debts shall be divided by the Reparations Commission according to the ability of individual States to meet them. A similar proposal is made regarding Austro-Hungarian banknotes held abroad.

As to settling accounts between German Austria and other States of the former monarchy, the note says that stipulations not capable of fulfillment must be removed and these questions regulated by the Reparations Commission in order not to prolong the peace negotiations.

"It would be of indisputable value for all parties," the note adds, "if the members of the German Austrian deputation were heard and called upon the give oral explanations before the committees."

The note is accompanied by extensive proposals on territorial and political questions.

RUMANIA WORRIES PEACE CONFERENCE

FRANCE IS INDIFFERENT

By CHARLES A. SELDEN.

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

PARIS, Aug. 8.—The Rumania-Hungarian crisis continues to be the only thing talked or thought about in the Supreme Council and Peace Conference. Even the reply with counterproposals to the Austrian treaty received from the delegation of that country at St. Germain two days ago has been sidetracked by the Rumanian effort to subdue Hungary and bring disrepute on the Conference. As a matter of fact, the Austrian reply has been relegated to experts to digest and summarise it without the plenipotentiaries discussing it.

Despite the undivided attention the council is giving to the Hungarian affair, no progress has been made yet in straightening out the difficulty. Another note was sent to Bucharest last night, but it was only a repetition of the command of the council forbidding Rumania to do what she has already done, namely, capture the Hungarian capital, take virtual control of the whole country, and strip it of all resources, pursuant to the Rumanian ultimatum.

Rumania is carrying water on both shoulders and succeeding remarkably at it. In trying to justify her defiance of the Peace Conference she declares she is no longer subject to its control, although pretending to be acting for the best interests of the Allies in her military activities in Hungary. As a matter of fact she is indirectly robbing all the Allies by removing all the resources of Hungary, thus making it impossible for that country to meet her share of reparation to be imposed later.

As against her claim that she is virtually out of the Peace Conference there is the contradictory fact that in all her many demands on America for money Rumania emphasizes the fact that she, too, is an ally member of the Conference and League of Nations. Of course, she is, inasmuch as she signed the German treaty containing the League covenant.

In her defiance now and the helplessness of the Peace Conference to control her any criterion of what the League of Nations itself might do through its council, if it was actually functioning, against a member State behaving as Rumania is? It is a disturbing question in conference headquarters in Paris. Optimists, such few as there are at this moment, say that if the League were actually in operation now we could settle this Rumanian hash. But the retort is: What could the Council of the League do that the Supreme Council of the Conference cannot do? One opinion expressed today was that we would be better off if Germany were already in the League, for she would have seized the opportunity to show that she wants to behave by bringing Rumania to terms.

There are ample grounds for perplexity in the conference. Rumania is in a strong position. She has got good food supplies, ample for more than six months to come, and is rapidly increasing her stocks by withdrawal of supplies from Hungary. So she can laugh for the time being at the threat of the Peace Conference to punish her by refusing to send supplies.

Secondly, she has no fear of military intervention on the part of the Allies either in her own territory or to force her withdrawal from Hungary.

Most important of all, perhaps, from the Rumanian point of view, she knows she is acting in full accord with what has been French foreign policy concerning continental Europe ever since the collapse of Russia. That policy, as has been intimated from time to time in the last six months by M. Pichon, is to build the strongest barrier possible between Russia and Germany. It has manifested itself in French willingness to grant the maximum Polish and Rumanian claims regardless of their reasonableness for the sake of building an unbroken barrier across Eastern Europe from the Baltic to the Black Sea, composed of Poland and Rumania.

Part of the same policy has been to yield as much as possible to Czechoslovakia and Jugoslovakia. This has been the explanation of the lukewarmness of France in supporting the Italian claims against Jugoslovakia. Hungary and Bulgaria are the two states to be sacrificed to this policy if necessary. This policy also explains her indifference at the present time to Rumanian aggression in Hungary and persistence in the theory that a large force of allied troops should be sent to Hungary.

On her part England is disposed to support this continental policy of France, partly because she, too, fears a German-Russian alliance and partly because it may make things easier for England in Asia Minor, where she is in direct conflict with all French aims of territorial supervision. But in the present crisis England is apparently in accord with America and Italy in denouncing the conduct of Rumania.

ALLIES' RIVALRY A FACTOR.

French-Italian Rift Playing a Part at Budapest.

PARIS, Aug. 8.—"After all, the Rumanians are our friends as the Hungarians our enemies," was a phrase on the lips of a high diplomatic authority that summed up both French public opinion and the official viewpoint regarding the Budapest situation. Editorials in Le Temps and Journal des Débats, which are usually thought to interpret the views of the Foreign Office, defend the Rumanian action and contrast its success in driving out the Hungarian Bolsheviki with the messages, directed toward the same end, of the Paris Council and its representatives in Budapest. Pertinax, in L'Echo de Paris, strikes the same note, saying: "The Paris Council gives an unfortunate impression of always chasing events in Hungary and never quite catching up with them."

All three newspapers refer more or less openly to "quarrels on the military missions," and Le Temps further suggests that the Supreme Council is liable to be misled by some of its agents in Budapest, whose judgment is impaired by the failure of their own plans to materialise.

The French are rather in the position of a person who says "I told you so," when a disagreeable event justifies his foresight. The French have had a long experience with international control, in Tangiers and China to mention notable instances. They feel that even should the chiefs of the nations concerned come to an agreement, which is generally a slow and difficult process, their decisions are liable to be nullified by the discord and jealousy of their representatives on the spot. Especially is this the case if the latter belong to the army.

The touchiness of the military over questions of seniority and precedence is proverbial, and it frequently happens that a General who technically ranks the others represents the weakest power concerned or has the smallest force under command. It is this distrust of international co-operation which underlay the French desire that the League of Nations should have a permanent military force at its disposal with a commander and staff to carry out the orders of the Supreme Council. That proposal was negatived chiefly by the opposition of America, which, many Frenchmen think, has ruined by this whatever chance the League had of being more than a glorified Hague Tribunal, with platonic powers.

The situation at Budapest is complicated by a factor that bids fair to be a serious point in European politics for some time. This is the Franco-Italian rivalry. A diplomatic duel is being waged between France and Italy from the shores of the Mediterranean to the Russian frontier and no soft words from Nitti or Tittoni will alter it. This fact is at the bottom of the cryptic references of the French press to the quarrels of the military missions and against the turmoil of cross-purposes the efforts of England to reopen central Europe to trade and of America to feed the people and get them back to productive work are rendered vain and exposed to misconstruction.

Many Frenchmen, and those not the least patriotic, dread the results of France's return to the aggressive European policy that dominated the epochs of Louis XIV. and Napoleon. They see the only remedy in a League of Nations, established on a practical basis with powers to enforce its will. They appeal to America, the most disinterested and most powerful of nations, not to shirk her world responsibilities, but by pulling her full weight in the League to preserve in Europe those ideals for which she was ready to fight.

GENEVA HAS SITE READY FOR LEAGUE

Switzerland's Full Adherence Will Assure Offer of Lake Leman Grounds.

EIGHT MILES FROM THE CITY

Buildings of State and Municipality Available for Committee Conferences.

GENEVA, Aug. 6.—Where will the executive of the League of Nations be housed? There is much more in this question than a choice between one site and another, between a suburb of Brussells and a little paradise on Lake Leman. Above all it is choice of moral and political atmosphere.

The matter is not yet settled and cannot yet be formally settled.

The Geneva site lies about eight miles outside the city, between the villages of Genthod and Versoix, and between the north bank of the lake and the French frontier. It includes the château of M. De Saussure, dating from 1723, and M. De Pourtales, from 1750. Another large house is called the Château Rouge and there are lesser buildings.

With five or six square miles of grounds by the lakeside is eminently suitable for the establishment of aviation and wireless stations, and the City of Geneva, situated so near the centre of Europe, offers many advantages for other means of communication.

Tradition counts for something, too. Geneva is not only the heart of ancient Protestant thought. It is the birthplace of the Red Cross and organized aid for prisoners of war and the seat of the first great trial of international arbitration.

In the quaint old buildings of the State and municipality of Geneva, State Chancellor Bret was good enough to show me the range of rooms that might serve as committee meetings of the League. They include the famous hall where the Geneva Red Cross convention of 1864 was negotiated and where the Alabama arbitration in 1872 removed the last danger of conflict between Britain and America. Several smaller chambers looking upon a sunny terrace contain notable portraits, including one of Queen Anne by Kneller, given by her to the Republic of Geneva in 1710.

There is little doubt that the Swiss will vote their final adhesion to the League, for the Federal Council has given a clear lead in this sense, and writers such as Professor Rappord and M. Schulthes have shown beyond doubt that the Confederation has practically no choice. Whether from the military or economic point of view, the outlook of Switzerland, which already presents difficulties enough, would be much worse if she refused her place at the new council board of nations.

The German-speaking Cantons are ingeniously critical and obstructive, but the leaders of the republic are clear-sighted and firm. It is said that the labor organizations will probably refuse to send delegates to the first labor conference under the Gompers-Barnes convention to be held in Washington in October. It would be a strange spectacle, as M. Schulthes says, if in this or any other way, whether from pique or blindness, Switzerland were now to abandon the leading place which she has held in international movements for social progress.

SPAIN TO JOIN LEAGUE; SWISS APPROVE PLAN

MADRID, Aug. 7, (Associated Press.) —Parliament approved today the proposal that Spain join the League of Nations.

BERNE, Aug. 8.—The Federal Council, at sittings held to discuss the subject of Switzerland's adhesion to the League of Nations, agreed unanimously to propose to the Legislative Council an additional article to the Federal Constitution through which Switzerland would assume membership in the League.

FLEW 168 MILES AN HOUR.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, Aug. 8.—The air speed record between Washington and New York was broken today by a De Haviland plane, piloted by Lieut. Col. H. H. Claggett, commander of the Dallas-Boston fliers, who covered the distance of 210 miles from the Capitol at Washington to the Statue of Liberty, in 75 minutes. This was at an average speed rate of 168 miles an hour. Sergeant Ralph Krnis was a passenger in the plane. The elevation during flight averaged 4,000 feet.

The Ellington Field, Houston, Texas, trans-continental fliers, in four De Haviland planes, today flew from Elko, Nev., to Salt Lake City, altitude 14,000 feet, a distance of 200 miles in 100 minutes. Since leaving Houston these four planes, traveling via San Diego and San Francisco to Salt Lake City, have covered a total distance of 2,730 miles in 1,800 minutes.

Zeppelins to be Used in Seven-Hour Service Between Cities.

BERLIN, Aug. 8, (Associated Press.) —Zeppelin airship service between Berlin and Munich will be inaugurated in the near future, says the Vossische Zeitung.

EICHHORN REAPPEARS.

Indicted Berlin Ex-Official Turns Up in Weimar Assembly.

BERLIN, Aug. 7, (Associated Press.)—Former Police President Eichhorn of Berlin, against whom indictments are pending, appeared suddenly in the National Assembly at Weimar this afternoon. He was elected to that body at the first election of members, before his career as Police President developed.

Eichhorn, who has been a fugitive from justice for months, was able to appear in the Assembly because of the immunity automatically granted to its members, he never having been formally expelled.

GERMAN LABOR FOR FRANCE.

Workmen Will Rehabilitate Northern and Eastern Departments.

PARIS, Aug. 7.—Several commissioners, having to do with reconstruction and other work in connection with the German delegation, went to the Paris offices of the Eastern Railway today to work out with French commissioners the railroad schedules for the transportation of a large number of German workmen.

The laborers will be assigned to rehabilitation operations in the northern and eastern departments of France.

Poincare to Return to Parliament.

PARIS, Aug. 8.—President Poincaré is willing to enter Parliament again in the service of the Department of the Meuse if the occasion offers, he stated yesterday in replying to an address from the Council of the Arrondissement of Commerce in that department. The President, before his election to his present office, represented the Department of the Meuse in Parliament twenty-five years.

BELGIANS RATIFY TREATY AND ANNEX

BRUSSELS, Aug. 8.—The Chamber of Deputies today unanimously ratified the Peace Treaty with Germany.

In the discussion the Foreign Minister said:

"The League of Nations fails to offer immediate guarantees and compels us to look to our own defense. That is why we are seeking at Paris a revision of the treaties of 1839.

"I wish to assure our delegates that the whole nation supports them. Revision of the treaties will provide the required guarantees."

The speech of the Foreign Minister was loudly applauded.

The Chamber also ratified the annex to the treaty concerning the military convention entered into by France, the United States, Great Britain, and Belgium.

At a conference of Presidents of the groups and committees of the Chamber of Deputies today it was decided to open discussion of the Peace Treaty on Aug. 26, says Le Journal. This decision was taken at the request of former Premier Viviani.

China's President Against Signing.

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

PEKING, Aug. 8.—Despite telegrams sent by the President, stating that China is not considering signing the German Peace Treaty, the militarists and pro-Japanese officials are urging this course. But the President declines to budge from his position, declaring that if China signed and America refused to ratify the treaty China would be acting inimically to America, to which China looks for financial assistance.

GEN. HARBORD TO HEAD MISSION TO ARMENIA

PARIS, Aug. 8, (Associated Press.)—Major Gen. James G. Harbord, Chief of Staff of the American Expeditionary Forces, with a commission of American specialists in transportation and economic problems, will leave Paris about Aug. 15 for Armenia to make a study of conditions there.

Various relief organizations have asked the American officials to request Premier Lloyd George of Great Britain to delay the removal of British troops from Asiatic Turkey until the report of Major Gen. Harbord has been received.

CONSTANTINOPLE, Aug. 6.—Lieut. Gen. Sir George Francis Milne, commander of British forces at Saloniki, has been empowered by the Peace Conference, pending its ultimate decisions, to control all allied troops in Western Asia Minor and to restore order in the Smyrna district.

General Milne has been made responsible for the delimination of the zone of Greek military occupation.

AGREE ON FREE STATE OF CONSTANTINOPLE

Allies Divide Thrace, Giving Greece Three Portions of the Territory.

BULGARIA SHUT FROM SEA

Another Free State to be Set Up in That Region Under League of Nations.

PARIS, Aug. 8.—The Peace Conference reached a solution of the Thracian problem yesterday, according to the Intransigeant, by dividing Thrace into a number of parts, some going to Greece and others being designated to form the future free State of Constantinople and a new free State under the League of Nations.

The solution arrived at, the Intransigeant says, provides for dividing Thrace into Eastern and Western Thrace. Eastern Thrace will be divided into three parts, Greece getting two of them and a third being designated as part of the future free State of Constantinople.

Of Western Thrace, a quarter is to be given to Greece and the other three-quarters are to constitute a free State to be set up under the League of Nations.

A commission of technical experts will be sent to Thrace to put the solution into practical form, it is said.

The Peace Conference, the paper adds, will adjourn for a vacation throughout September, the American, English, and Italian delegates returning to their homes.

Thrace is merely a geographical expression which has no specific location in geographies, and so what the term has meant at the Peace Conference is not definitely known, except that it refers to the Balkan country lying east of Macedonia, south of Bulgaria as she was prior to the Balkan wars of 1912-13 and north of the Aegean Sea and the Turkish vilayet of Constantinople and part of that of Adrianople.

In other words, the region is that known to the Turks as Rumili, which includes a large portion of Turkish territory ceded to Bulgaria by the Treaty of Bucharest of 1913, at the close of the second Balkan war.

According to the probable designation of Thrace and its projected partition, Bulgaria will be completely shut out from the Aegean Sea, on which she secured a coast line from the Mesta to the town of Enos, (about 80 miles,) in 1913 while Greece will secure the rich tobacco lands of the Kavala region already given her, however, by the Bucharest treaty. The future free State of Constantinople, on the east, will secure the Dedeaghatch railway and Maritza River system leading north to the junction with the Belgrade-Constantinople-Orient Railway at Adrianople.

SENATORS DISTURBED BY FEARS FOR THRACE

Alarm Expressed in Debate at Reports That It Was to Go to Bulgaria.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, Aug. 8. — Protest against embroilment of the United States in Europe's squabbles was voiced in the Senate today by Senator Brandegee of Connecticut and caused a brief renewal of the debate on the Peace Treaty.

Senator Brandegee presented for reading an article by Frank H. Simonds, asserting that M. Venizelos, the Greek Premier, had cooled in his enthusiasm for the League of Nations, telling of an alleged American position on the Greco-Bulgar quarrel over the possession of Thrace.

"I desired that article to be read," said Mr. Brandegee, "because of several declarations made by the President, suggestions that a new day has dawned, that nations are no longer jealous of each other, but are all living together in a spirit of brotherhood. The article shows that the Balkans are still aflame; it shows that Italy and Jugoslavia are at swords' points; it shows that every time we attempt to mix in or butt in and settle the boundaries of Europe, which are none of our business, we get into trouble and make enemies for America.

"When this war ended every nation in Europe except Germany was our friend. Now I should like to have anybody point out the nation in Europe that is friendly to America, owing to our intermeddling.

"Venizelos, President Wilson told us at the White House, when the Foreign Relations Committee was there last March, is the ablest man he met in Europe. Evidently he has found his way out of the regions of Utopia and has got down to brass tacks; and whatever adherence he may have given to the delusions and hallucinations which animated at least one of the distinguished members of the Peace Commission abroad, and which, owing to our Treasury and man power were imposed on others, he at last has returned to earth and to sanity, and I think others will soon follow his footsteps."

Senator Lodge said that to him it was unpleasant to find Americans in favor of handing over Thrace to Bulgaria.

"I do not believe that any Americans in this country who understand the question at all believe in handing Thrace over to Bulgaria," said Senator Lodge. "To hand Thrace over to Bulgaria, our enemy, the ally of Germany, seems to me a great wrong."

"It would be consistent, however," remarked Senator Poindexter, "in view of what is called the American attitude toward the Italians in Fiume, handing them over to the Jugoslavs, and the Chinese in Shantung, handing them over to the Japanese."

"Yes," replied Mr. Lodge, "but I have been unable to believe that Thrace was to be added to that catalog."

Senator Thomas, Democrat, said that he, too, regretted very deeply "the identification of the United States with these squabbles." No boundary settlement in the Balkans or Central Europe would stand, he predicted, unless it were confirmed by an armed allied force, constantly on guard.

"But," he added, "we should have foreseen these things if we object to them, when we entered the war. Because, going into the war, we entered the European arena, and there we are. We cannot help ourselves and have got to stay there until the entire condition is cleared up. If we were to adopt the treaty without the League of Nations provision, as some urge, we would still be in Europe, because the provisions of the other parts of the treaty require our participation, as I now remember, in nineteen different boards and commissions."

Senator Brandegee suggested that "it is perfectly feasible for us to strike ourselves out of these commissions and let Europe settle its own affairs."

Senator Thomas acknowledged that this could be done, but said he assumed that some time some kind of a treaty with Germany would be ratified.

Mr. Brandegee declared that the Versailles treaty was not essential, as peace now existed and trade had been resumed. Therefore, he said, if Congress decided that it did not want any treaty requiring the United States to take part in European boundary settlements and other controversial questions, it could make its own treaty with Germany.

Senator Thomas disputed this stand, but said that when "the details of the proceedings at the Peace Congress are given to the world they will disclose a selfishness and sordid interest of many of the nations there represented that will go far toward establishing the fundamental proposition that human nature, in all its details, is practically the same now as in 1815 or any other period of history."

LENIN REFUSED HELP TO SUSTAIN BELA KUN

Sent Word That Moscow Did Not Wish to Mix in Affairs of Foreign Governments.

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

BERLIN, Aug. 6.—The Vossische Zeitung publishes this evening a message from its Stockholm correspondent which throws an interesting light on the State affairs within Bela Kun's Government prior to its fall, and also light upon the mentality of Lenin's Government in Moscow.

The correspondent, who gives "a well informed Russian quarter" as his authority, says that Kun telegraphed in the middle of July to Lenin giving him a full summary of conditions prevailing in Hungary and emphasizing the fact that within the ranks of the Communists themselves disruption was beginning to appear. Several of Kun's supporters at that time thought it advisable to arrange a compromise with the Social Democrats, while others thought that the only course open was for the whole Communist Government to resign.

Efforts to effect a reconciliation apparently failed, for on July 20 Kun again telegraphed to Lenin that he "could no longer promise the continuance of the Communist régime unless the Moscow Government sent military help, either from the Red Russian or the Red Ukrainian army." Moscow's Bolshevist Government was also asked whether it was prepared to receive Tibor Szamuely, one of Kun's chief supporters, and to discuss with him a basis of common action between Budapest and Moscow.

Moscow sent a definite refusal of this request, on the ground that it did not wish to mix itself in the affairs of foreign governments. Such a refusal, and still more the ground on which it was based, must have come as a great shock to Kun, who probably interpreted it as a sign that the Russian Bolsheviki had lost either the means or the will to enforce and support revolution outside their own frontiers. At any rate, Kun saw that the game was up and he departed for Austria.

DAUGHTER PREFERS FATHER

The suit of Mrs. Marion Tainter Bishop Dickerson of 210 East Sixty-second Street, Manhattan, wife of Edwin Dickerson, a New York lawyer, to obtain custody for a part of each year of her daughter, Julienne Marion Tainter, 15 years old, came up before Justice Kapper in the Brooklyn Supreme Court yesterday. According to Mrs. Dickerson, she was divorced from Tainter in Texas in 1908, and was subsequently married to Edward L. Bishop, in the same year.

By threats to have the divorce set aside, Mrs. Dickerson said, Tainter got her to sign an agreement giving up the custody of the child, which had been awarded to her by the Texas Court, but she was to have the girl during the Summer. Then, she said, Tainter took the girl, contrary to the agreement, out of the country, and hid her in England, so that she did not see her for five years, until a few weeks ago when she heard of her presence in Quogue, L. I.

Justice Kapper said that the only basis for his decision would be the welfare of the child. All the parties are reported to be wealthy. Mrs. Dickerson married Dickerson in London, she said, on July 3, 1914, and was at Geneva, Switzerland, at the outbreak of the war. The Dickersons own a villa at Monaco, the famous Mediterranean resort.

Julienne Marion Tainter, the daughter, took the stand, and was examined by Tainter's counsel. After her direct examination, the case was adjourned until Monday, when she is to be cross-examined.

Asked to describe her earliest impressions of her mother, the girl said that her mother never showed her any real friendliness or affection. Asked what was the special reason why she never had any regard or affection for her mother, Julienne replied:

"The principal reason was that she married so often. Even the tradespeople spoke of it, and my acquaintances commented."

PLEADS FOR DAYLIGHT LAW.

Mrs. John Francis Yawger Asks President to Veto Repeal Bill.

On the ground that the daylight saving legislation has been a great benefit to all and a real injury to none, Mrs. John Francis Yawger, President of the State Republican Women's Association, sent a telegram to President Wilson yesterday urging him to veto the daylight saving repeal bill.

Among the reasons for her request advanced by Mrs. Yawger are that, in addition to the great saving in light and fuel cost under the law now in effect, the present law safeguards the young woman returning from her business before darkness has fallen; that it makes the home ties more binding, in that the father is able to be with his little ones longer before they retire, and that it has been an immense aid in reducing the high cost of living by giving the amateur gardener an opportunity to raise much of the food for his table.

NEW HOME FOR HOSPITAL.

Beth David Institution to Erect a Seven-Story Building.

The Beth David Hospital, Lexington Avenue and 113th Street, according to an announcement made yesterday by Mr. J. Carlinger, Executive Director, has completed plans to erect a modern seven-story building upon the present hospital site. Work on the new building is to begin soon.

The hospital now holds more than fifty beds. The new building when completed will have room for about 150 patients, besides increasing the dispensary facilities. The Beth David Hospital was chartered in 1856, and for the last six years has occupied its present building. In September a drive for $100,000 needed for the new building will be begun.

Denies That Adolph Joffe Was Shot.

The report printed in Polish newspapers and cabled to this country last May to the effect that Adolph Joffe, the Bolshevist Ambassador to Germany, had been shot to death by Polish troops when Vilna was taken by them from the Bolsheviki, is denied by a Stockholm dispatch to the Berliner Tageblatt, which says that Joffe escaped just before the city was occupied. Joffe was expelled from Germany just before the fall of the Kaiser's Government for his Bolshevist activities in Berlin, and he has never been readmitted by the new German Government, although the Soviet Government insists that he is still its representative accredited to the German capital.

POLISH TROOPS TAKE MINSK

LONDON, Aug. 8.—A Bolshevist wireless communication, dated Thursday and received here today, says:

"An enemy flotilla, consisting principally of British ships, bombarded Ochakov (Government of Kherson, forty-one miles northeast of Odessa) Tuesday night. More than 500 shots were fired, which destroyed many buildings. Enemy ships also bombarded Stanislavov."

The communication says the Bolshevist troops are retiring under enemy pressure on the western front, but it claims notable advances for the Bolsheviki on the eastern front.

Other wireless Bolshevist messages received today say that General Judenich is reported to have formed a Russian Government at Helsingfors for the purpose of taking over the administration of Petrograd after its capture by Finnish White Guards. They add that General Mannerheim has accepted conditional command of the Finnish Army.

A dispatch from Archangel under date of Thursday to Reuter's Agency says that since the recent mutiny of Russian troops at Onega there has been hard, intermittent fighting for several days, entirely by the Russians, except for British gunners. The Russians captured part of the town, but after heavy street fighting were obliged to retire.

Two British monitors afterward shelled Onega and its approaches for eleven hours, and are effectively controlling the situation, says the correspondent. Some houses were set on fire by the bombardment.

The Bolsheviki, according to the dispatches, have taken 5,000 prisoners belonging to Admiral Kolchak's 11th Division and 5,000 from his 13th Division.

PARIS, Aug. 8, (Havas.)—Dispatches from Warsaw carry the announcement by the newspapers there that Polish troops have occupied the City of Minsk, capital of the old Russian Province of Minsk, situated near the border of the Province of Vilna, and about 100 miles southeast of the City of Vilna.

The American steamer Kickapoo, carrying $500,000 worth of cloth, shoes, and various manufactured goods for exchange for Russian wheat, has arrived safely at Novorossyesk, a non-Bolshevist port on the eastern coast of the Black Sea, where she is unloading. The Kickapoo left St. Nazaire July 2. The experiment in bartering is being conducted by the American Relief Administration, financed by the American Committee for Relief in the Far East.

Novorossyesk is the chief port for the Government of General Denikin. The goods on board the Kickapoo were purchased from the United States Army Liquidating Board and the American Red Cross.

WELCOME MORRIS'S INQUIRY.

Omsk Officials Hope Much from American Ambassador's Report.

OMSK, July 27, (Associated Press.)—"It is a fortunate circumstance, perhaps, that the American policy toward Russia should be formed at a moment when the stability of the Russian Government is being tried by a heavy blow on the front," said M. Soukine, Acting Foreign Minister of the All-Russian Government, today, with reference to the presence here of Roland S. Morris, the American Ambassador to Japan, on his mission to investigate conditions with regard to the Omsk administration.

"We are strong in the belief that Russia will recreate herself by her own effort," continued M. Soukine. "The fact that we are passing through the most difficult period causes us to emphasize ourselves that if we receive support from the outside it will be on the basis of a demonstration of strength inside of Russia. The military situation will probably clear up within ten or fifteen days, so that if the discussions undertaken by Mr. Morris bring forth a recommendation favorable to a plan of action, that plan will rest on the solid foundation of the most acute crisis survived by the Kolchak Government."

M. Soukine added that the Kolchak Government hoped that Mr. Morris, while noting the weak points of the Government, which it would not try to hide, would see also the substantial progress made during the Winter and Spring toward the establishment of a stable Government, and would prove an impartial witness in the recommendations which he will make.

No previous development respecting the foreign relations of the Omsk Government has been of equal importance with the arrival of the American delegation in the minds of the people, it is indicated by various expressions, and the delegation has been met with every evidence of a most cordial spirit.

In a military way there has been some improvement in conditions during the last week, according to the official reports, inasmuch as the western army has undertaken an offensive north of Cheliabinsk and captured an enemy brigade, with its commander and eleven other officers, together with the light and heavy artillery and the entire engineering equipment of a Bolshevist division. The possession of Cheliabinsk is being contested, and fighting is going on about the town.

At this writing the Bolshevist advance from Ekaterinburg has slowed down perceptibly beyond Bogdanovitch, approximately eighty miles eastward.

Refugees from the districts retaken by the Bolsheviki have reached Irkutsk. Up to the beginning of July about 100,000 refugees passed through Omsk going eastward. The Russian Red Cross, cooperating with the Ministry of the Interior, has organized a chain of settlements where they are fed and receive medical aid.

An official Bolshevist dispatch received in London a few days ago told of the defeat of Kolchak's forces fighting to hold Cheliabinsk with the capture of 4,000 men. The Siberian troops were reported in retreat thirty-seven miles east of the city.

UKRAINIAN MISSION HERE.

Petlura's Government Seeks Recognition by United States.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, Aug. 8.—A diplomatic mission from the Ukrainian people's republic seeking to bring about the recognition of the Ukrainian Government and establishment of commercial relations with America arrived in Washington today, and submitted to Secretary Lansing a letter setting forth its aims.

Julian Batchinski, who heads the mission, is a well known Ukrainian lawyer and writer, author of the book "Ukrainia Irredenta," which has been used as the independence plank of Ukrainian political platforms since its publication in 1893. He is also the author of a number of political essays, and a work on "Ukrainian Emigration to the United States," which was the result of his visit of 1907 to this country, and in which he urged Ukrainians in America to become Americans. Victor Kasakevich, an engineer from Russian Ukraine, is Secretary to the mission, which has opened headquarters at the Hotel Powhatan, preliminary to renting a house for its use.

Members of the mission explained that the present Ukrainian Government, of which Simon Petlura is head of its Directorate, was desirous of establishing its independence as a separate nation. The Petlura Government, they said, was anti-Bolshevist, but was not desirous of linking its fortunes with those of the Kolchak Government. Ukraine, the second largest country in Europe in territory, the richest in natural resources, and the fifth largest in population, was fighting on three fronts—in the West against the Polish and Rumanian invasions and in the East against the Russian Bolshevist invaders.

GERMANS AIDING LENIN.

Are Also Stripping Bare Territories Allotted to Poland.

PARIS, Aug. 8.—A dispatch to the Havas Agency from Warsaw says:

"In addition to exporting everything belonging to the Government from the territories awarded Poland, contrary to the Peace Treaty terms the Germans have made preparations to export into Germany this year's crops.

"Arms and munitions are being sent wholesale to Bolshevist Russia by the Germans. They also are sending instructions for the Red Army, and movements of troops have been effected with the object of strengthening the anti-Polish Bolshevist front."

MURDER AMERICAN CITIZEN.

Russian Officer Also Slain by Russian Monarchical Society.

LONDON, Aug. 8.—A dispatch to the Exchange Telegraph from Stockholm by way of Copenhagen says that Colonel Hadjelache Ettinger, a former Russian naval officer, and an American citizen named Legros have been killed by a band which is supposed to be part of an organization called "the International League for Reestablishment of the Russian Monarchy."

The Dagens Nyheter of Stockholm, the dispatch adds, says that the former Russian officer took part in an international organization whose object is to reestablish the monarchical regime in Russia by placing Grand Duke Alexander Michaslovitch, brother-in-law of the former Russian Emperor, on the throne.

The organization, according to the newspapers, is led by Alexander Feodorovich Trepoff, a former Prime Minister.

WIFE LOSES DIVORCE SUIT.

Court Rules in Favor of Lieutenant Bay of the Aviation Service.

Supreme Court Justice Giegerich dismissed yesterday the divorce suit of Mrs. Audrey Hammond Bay against Lieutenant James Holmes Bay of the aviation service on the ground that the testimony concerning the defendant's alleged misconduct at Mineral Wells, Texas, when he was stationed at the Dallas aviation field, was unsatisfactory. The defence was that the plaintiff, who is well to do, was determined to obtain a divorce and sent agents to Texas to persuade the defendant to compromise himself.

Lieutenant Bay testified that he became suspicious of the man sent to get evidence against him and followed him on the advice of his superior officer, because he believed the agent was engaged in a German plot. He contended that he was not in the hotel when the alleged offence testified to by the plaintiff's witness occurred.

STUDENT COMMITS SUICIDE.

John Hipp, 25 years old, a student at Columbia University Summer School, committed suicide yesterday afternoon by slashing his throat and left wrist with a safety razor blade and then leaping from the third floor window of his boarding house at 55 Morningside Avenue to the areaway. He died while Dr. Frank McMahon of the Knickerbocker Hospital was attending him.

Detectives William Hadptman and Frank Mullahey of the West 125th Street Station, who investigated the case, said they learned that Hipp lived with his parents at 234 Kittridge Building, Denver, Col., and was studying at Columbia Summer School to become a professor. A number of letters from his parents, $80 in travelers' checks and a ticket for Denver, purchased Thursday, were found in his room.

At the college no reason could be advanced by the professors or students for the young man's suicide except that he had failed to obtain high marks in his recent examinations.

THE REMEDIES.

In his address to Congress upon the high cost of living, President WILSON gave utterance to two truths so obvious and incontestable that they should long ago have found lodgment in every mind, that they should be the basis of any discussion of remedies for the swollen costs of daily existence. Yet multitudes of the American people ignore these foundation verities or pass them lightly by. One is that, as the President put it, "We must "quicken, not slacken, our national "production." That is absolutely the only effective and permanent cure for the present disturbance of price levels. Senator GRONNA used the emphasis of exaggeration when he said that the way out was for everybody to work fourteen hours a day, but beyond all doubt the resolve of every capable person to work ten hours a day, if kept, would be the shortest way to the return of normal conditions. Men of great responsibilities, men charged with the duties of management, are working ten hours a day or more—they have to. The prevailing disposition to demand a reduction of working hours is in effect a demand that the costs of living shall continue to be unbearably high. The troubles of which we now complain are part of the burdens of the war. They should be borne, as they might be borne, in the spirit that was shown during the war, with the firm determination to end them as soon as possible by the only reasonable and sure method.

Mr. WILSON was again on solid ground when he declared that no legislative or executive action can force the processes of supply and demand "into full natural operation "until there is peace. There is now "neither peace nor war. All the "world is waiting—with what unnerv-"ing fears and haunting doubt who "can adequately say?—waiting to "know when it comes." The world is waiting to know whether it is to be "a peace in which each nation shall "make shift for itself as it can, or a "peace buttressed and supported by "the will and concert of the nations "that have the purpose and the power "to do and to enforce what is right." The world is still in the turmoil of war's aftermath, it is disturbed in its mind, in the processes of its business. In all its plans and calculations. "Where there is no peace of mind "there can be no energy and en-"deavor." In these words the President spoke the thoughts of the people, not yet the thoughts of the Senate of the United States. To that perversely misbehaving body a serious consideration of what the President said may be commended.

What the Government can do for the relief of all the people, the Government will do. For one thing, it will search into the secrets of the great and small purveyors of the people's food supplies. If any of them be guilty of demanding and receiving extortionate prices, of hoarding foodstuffs for the sake of gain, or of any other wrongful practices which the law can reach, they will and should be made to suffer the penalty of their wickedness and their cruelty; for it is an act of cruelty in these times to seek extortionate profit.

Publicity cures many evils, calls many malefactors to account. Government agencies will diligently endeavor to make the people acquainted with the actual facts of production and distribution in the whole field of the country's food supply. That will uncover hoarding where it exists, it will make profiteering dangerous. The one great difficulty in the way is the fact that profiteering is a vice not of the big traders alone; it is of common and everyday knowledge that multitudes of retailers in their grasping practices outdo the most daring of the big traders. Nobody expected that the President could either declare that there should be an end of the high cost of living or that he could out of hand propose remedies that would cure it. All that is beyond human power. Patience must be the sustaining virtue of the public, for these troubles cannot be ended at once, though the sale to the people at cost of the great stores of food supplies accumulated by the Government for war use should have some effect in mitigating them. Beyond that the counsel of quickening, not slackening, production, and the undertaking of the Government to expose and punish those who by their conscienceless devices have made bad conditions worse, must be our reliance for relief.

Not the least important, timely, and valuable part of the President's address is the exceedingly wise and much needed admonition he gives to labor and its leaders against the folly of reckless agitation, unreasonable demands, and strikes that only add to the burden of which they complain.

THE PARADE OF THE SECOND.

To mark the bearing and read the faces of the splendid body of men, regulars and marines, heroes of Chateau-Thierry, Belleau Wood, St. Mihiel, and the Meuse-Argonne, many of them, who swung up Fifth Avenue yesterday afternoon with slanting bayonets and in perfect formation, was to feel with a strong faith and something of rapture that law and order would be secure when such men were ready to maintain it in an emergency. The regular army is never to be summoned unless States and local authorities fail in their duty to repress disorder, or find themselves impotent to do so. In our history there have been instances of supineness or helplessness, and never has the army, which has no liking for police duty, failed to restore order and protect property from destruction when called upon to deal with conditions threatening anarchy. Such is the respect for it as a law-enforcing body, and such the fear of its efficiency in the hearts of enemies of society, that its mere appearance has generally quelled riot. Never has it stepped an inch over the line of necessary duty. There is no militaristic spirit in the United States Army. It is a citizen force, although trained to perfection for any service. The rank and file come from the people and return to them.

May the regular army not be called upon again to assert its strength and vindicate the Constitution and the law, but there are sinister influences at work in the country today that would stop at nothing to overturn the Government and repeat here the cataclysm that has overwhelmed Russia and is casting a baleful shadow over some of the oldest civilizations of Europe. THE TIMES believes that there will be no occasion to require the services of the regular army to teach the enemies of the American Commonwealth a lesson. There should be none if State and city authorities are watchful and do their duty intelligently. Moreover, it is not conceivable that the regular army would ever be availed of except for temporary police duty. The preservation of American liberties is assured by that love of country which called into being the great army of citizen soldiers who fought the good fight in France and saved the liberties of Europe from extinction. Always those heroic veterans can be depended upon to keep the torch of civilization burning in their own land.

THE AMUSEMENT STRIKE.

A nation which is shuddering beneath the threat that its railways are to be "tied up so tight they will never move again" may face with indifference, or possibly with amusement, the threat of being debarred from the theatre in sweltering August. And for those who are scandalized by the goings-on of war-profit spenders, the actors' strike gives occasion for pious hallelujahs. If Mr. AUSTEN CHAMBERLAIN, Chancellor of the Exchequer, really thinks that "spending at the present rate" will lead England "straight to national bankruptcy," he might do nothing better than to bring on a sympathetic strike among the actors of London. But only a war-weary world will view the crisis in any such manner. To the actors, and possibly also to the managers, it is serious enough.

Being thus serious, and not a little mysterious besides, the situation offers slight temptation to partisanship. On the public showing thus far the rights seem to be mainly with the Actors' Equity Association. One of two things is certain: either the association is waging a just war or it is employing a far better press agent than its antagonists. And any manager would think twice before admitting a shortcoming in his press department. This much is known—in the past the Actors' Equity Association has, in a large measure, remedied conditions of employment which were almost incredibly hard, and in so doing it has performed a service of the first order.

For the present there are two chief difficulties. The first is with regard to what, as strikers, the actors no doubt call overtime. On Sunday evenings in certain cities, and on holiday afternoons everywhere, the managers call for performances in addition to the normal number, of eight a week. For each such performance the actors now ask pay to the extent of one-eighth of a week's salary. In their new parlance, their cry is "Time for overtime!" To their fellow-members in the Federation of Labor, whose slogan is "Time-and-a-half for overtime!" such a demand must seem weak-kneed and craven. To the mind of the general, it will seem eminently fair. The capitalist employer would doubtless hail it as a shining precedent.

The second difficulty is in regard to "recognizing" the Actors' Equity Association to the extent of accepting it as part of a proposed system for arbitrating such differences as arise between individual actors and managers. In the past, both parties have been guilty of high-handed and injurious conduct. The general impression has been that the managers were more to blame, and their present refusal to accept any system of arbitration appears to confirm it. A properly constituted court would throw a flood of light upon all practices and establish a body of precedent sorely needed in this most perplexing and perplexed industry of the theatre.

There is, however, another phase to the question which is by no means so easily disposed of; and it is here that one feels most inclined to censure the managerial press agent, for he has not stated a case which has many strong points. Arbitration means delay. In the case of ordinary quarrels, that is one of its chief advantages. Passions cool and reason takes the seat. But delay is the thing which a theatrical manager can least afford. In making a production he deals with materials that are sometimes artistic and always temperamental; and he is obliged to bend them to the most rigid practical conditions as to theatres and dates. Nothing would more delight the average minor actor than to hold up an entire production while he (or she) was elevated to the position of star in the arbitration court. And many questions are ill adapted to arbitration, depending, at the last analysis, on a matter of artistic or business judgment. There is much to be said for a system in which a producing manager is autocrat. Yet with moderate reason and good-will a plan could be devised for limiting arbitration to the considerable number of causes in which it is feasible. The managers, as it seems, have been steadfast against arbitration.

Little can be ventured as to the outcome of this amusement strike; but it seems tolerably certain that few understudies who find themselves elevated to the lead will listen to the voice of the union that calls them out.

ENCOURAGEMENT TO DISORDER.

If there was less violence in Brooklyn yesterday, it was because the crews willing to man the cars, the employés who wished to work for the company, have been cowed by the permitted violence of Wednesday and Thursday. They didn't dare to run the cars because the strikers were the masters, because the police protection which would have crushed disorder at the start was not given, because the Mayor and his men are neutral against disorder.

Because police protection was inadequate, the company is blamed for inadequate service by the city authorities that have denied that protection and caused that lapse of service. The Brooklyn Rapid Transit Company is under the direction of a Federal court. The Judge of that court has put away the Mayor's talk of arbitration and supported Receiver GARRISON, whom the Mayor attacks. Against the courts, against the laws, against the public peace and good order, Mayor HYLAN, by his omissions and his commissions, has arrayed himself. He pretends to be neutral, though his whole action or inaction amounts to encouragement of the strikers and their violent abettors in fomenting disorder. His own Borough of Brooklyn is given over to anarchy, to the reign of mobs, to the suppression of the freedom of labor. Must the Federal power step in to end the intolerable situation created by his shilly-shallying or his subservience to sinister and unofficial influences?

THE PRESIDENT AS A STRIKE-BREAKER.

Some striking railway shopmen are returning to work as the result of the President's letter to the Director General, and of the advice of the leaders of the union to the forces which defied their authority. The strike vote was not to be taken until Aug. 24, and already has been abandoned. The men thought they had a grievance because their demands had been pending for six months. The President makes it clear that the delay was due to the fact that the shopmen were opening a new cycle of wage increases before the first cycle had been completed, the delay being due to the preoccupation of the board with earlier demands. When the shopmen's demands were reached the Board of Railway Wages was not able to agree, and the Director General had nothing on which to base his action.

The President thought that the time remaining for his action under the war emergency law was so short that Congress ought to take the matter up; but Congress prefers that the President should proceed under the authority soon to end. The President is nothing loath, but finds the shopmen in mutiny against their officers and in strike against the railways. There can be no negotiations amid such disorders, and the President shrewdly decided that it was good policy to promise negotiations when the men were working, and would respect the agreements made on their behalf. That put the officers of the unions on the President's side at once and left the strikers in bad position before the public. The officers threatened the strikers with ejection from the union if they did not submit to authority and stop the strike which was declared contrary to the union's lawful procedure. As swift as the telegraph came back scattering promises of obedience and resumption of work.

The manner of the ending of the strike is almost as important as the fact. Labor matters had been going from bad to worse, threatening to drift into mob law. That many leaders were more sober than the strikers was evident previously from their refusal to countenance a strike without a referendum, and the refusal of the men to abide by the vote if taken. Nothing but a surrender to their demands was the ultimatum of many of the unions within the International. That was not a union strike. It was a rebellion within the ranks of the union, with danger of much trouble if such tendencies were not checked. That the strikers are yielding to the President's intervention is a sign that even amid excesses the voice of union and national authority has not lost its power. If that were not so, this country would not long remain a country governed by law and reason. The attempted domination by the strikers was even more obnoxious than the burden of their demands, which before could not be considered on their merits, but which now may be adjusted with more advantage both to the men and the country than had seemed likely.

SABOTAGE OF VICTORY.

General GOUGH, representing the Allied Council, has ordered General VON DER GOLTZ to get his Germans out of the Baltic provinces at once. This is a matter of some importance; if the Germans stay where they are, Poland and Lithuania are crippled from the outset, and exposed to a German attack at the first favorable opportunity which would have a good chance of success. General VON DER GOLTZ obviously does not want to get out, and may have to be put out if we are to keep the victory which was won last year.

Hungary is in turmoil, with Bolsheviki, labor unionists, Archdukes, Rumanians, and allied Commissioners at odds; the outcome may be satisfactory, and it may not. If it is not, there will be a weak spot in European civilization from which new dangers may arise at any time. Who is going to put VON DER GOLTZ out of the Baltic provinces and rearrange the affairs of Hungary? The Allied Council lays down its decrees, but has no power to enforce them. It has no power very largely because England and America are unable to put any force behind it. The British Government is muddling through from one labor crisis to another, and our Government is threatened by gentlemen who talk of tying up the railroads, starving our cities, and killing American industrial life if they do not succeed in holding up citizens who do not belong to their group.

The men who are most prominent in the present labor disturbances in this country, and many of those who are most prominent in England, are men who were whole-heartedly behind the prosecution of the war. They did all they could last year to help the Allies to victory; but victory has to be secured as well as won, and it is not being secured. Eastern Europe is still greatly unsettled, and the nation which has its way is the one which hangs together in pursuance of its national policies. If the eventual settlement is unsatisfactory to America, it will be the fault of those who made our nation unable to do anything but express opinions. If the Germans recover in this year of "peace" much of what they lost in the last four months of war, it will be the fault of those who crippled the British and American Governments. The leaders of American labor knew a year ago that the war had to be won. Either they do not realize the importance of keeping it won, or the men who are leading the labor movement are compelled to take orders from the very small minority which was always against the war. The Federation and the Brotherhoods are strong organizations, in which it is not usual to see the tail wagging the dog; it must be that the labor leaders of this country are not aware that a great deal of Europe may still go to pieces, or fall into the hands of Germany, unless America is able to give some attention to it, and unless the American people give some support to the Government.

POLICE PAY.

In asking for a salary of at least $1,800 a year the New York patrolmen show a modesty which is all too uncommon in requests or demands for increased pay in these days. They are a fine body of men. The ancient New Yorker does not have to be pre-Adamite to notice the marked improvement in the physique and the morale of the force that has been made in the last few years. Sometimes, as at present, the New York police is badly led, is in the hands of men who make political considerations superior to the natural duty of the police, that of preserving public order. None the less, the great body of New York policemen are honorable men, willing to do their duty, and constantly doing it so far as they are not interfered with by authorities bent on "playing politics."

The New York patrolmen ask the city for a salary of not less than $1,800 a year. They ought to get it. They are entitled to it. They are entitled to more than that in comparison with the wages of many less skilled private and public employés to whom falls a much easier task. At present a patrolman of the seventh grade who has served less than one year gets $1,200. The pay rises according to service, till the patrolman of the first grade, who has served five years, gets $1,650. This scale of pay is inadequate under present conditions; it is not just compared with general wages and salaries. When rents are steep and growing steeper the patrolman has not the wide choice of a clerk or a workman. He must, as far as possible, live in his precinct. He has to pay for his uniform. He has to pay a high price. When his uniform is injured or spoiled, as it often is in the course of his imperative public duties, he has to stand the cost of repairs or of a new uniform—a uniform useless to him in his private hours.

To an extent that a public most innocent of New York's life has no notion of, he has to subscribe to all sorts of funds, buy all sorts of tickets, help out all sorts of associations; and his kindness, his charity, his sense of pity, is always making him dip into his own pocket to help some child, some derelict lost to the calculations of regular charity societies. As an officer of the law he has a certain position to live up to. Even with the thriftiest mind he cannot be quite as economical as other savers.

Not on any grounds of disposition and temperament, however flattering to the kindness and injurious to the pocketbook of the policemen, should their moderate and reasonable request for an increase in pay be founded. To look at the work they do, to look at the wages they get, to look at their vital importance to the community, and to compare their pay with the prevailing rate of wages for labor much less difficult and intricate than theirs, is to insure a cordial support for the very slight increase which they ask. It is a matter of mere justice.

TOPICS OF THE TIMES.

Murderer but Not Anarchist.

In what seems to be the complete clearing away of the mystery that at first covered the dynamiting of the Lawler residence in Los Angeles there is an element of something like relief to be found, for the first and very plausible, because very natural, theory of the outrage turns out to have been without foundation.

That theory was based on the fact that Mr. LAWLER had taken part as prosecuting attorney in bringing to justice several men who used dynamite as a means of social or economic argument, and the almost unavoidable conclusion was that his assassination was attempted by friends of those "victims"—that is, by men who resented any activities against their kind by representatives of the law they hate, and expected, by a further use of bombs, to gain immunity from punishment by means of terrorization.

That conclusion, with all its disquieting implications as to the present condition of society, is not warranted by the facts in this case, for it now is revealed that the Lawler house was dynamited not as an incident in war by anarchists or proletarians against the hated bourgeoisie and their still more hated defenders, but by a man who had been enraged by his failure to break a will the provisions of which he did not like. This disclosure, of course, does not diminish the seriousness, as a crime, of the nearly successful effort to assassinate the Los Angeles lawyer and his family in their beds, but it does remove the crime to another category—to one that can be called personal as distinguished from public, and of a kind too familiar to cause any particular anxiety.

The commission of murder in quarrels over the division of property by competing heirs has been too frequent in the past to be surprising now, and while it remains shocking, it does not threaten the continuance of civilization and its institutions. Society has had experience in the handling of such criminals as that and knows how to do it successfully.

A Favorite Weapon of Cowards.

That the man McGURK, as a defeated litigant, used dynamite instead of pistol or dagger to emphasize his resentment of what he thought the law's unkindness or injustice may indicate that he moved in circles more or less "advanced" or "radical," but more probably it only showed that he had kept himself informed as to recent developments or fashions in crime, and that he appreciated and valued the chances of escaping arrest enjoyed by the murderer who uses a weapon that kills after he has had a chance to get far away from it.

Curiously enough, however, this superiority of the bomb to other lethal tools is more apparent than real. Now and then, indeed, the confidence of the dynamiter is justified by his permanent escape from detection and punishment, but much more often his failure is a double one—he neither destroys the object of his animosity nor evades arrest—and not infrequently his plot ends in a premature explosion and his own destruction.

Dynamite employed legitimately is highly effective, but in the hands of society's enemies not much ever has been accomplished with it, or seems at all likely to be. The most ambitious of such enemies dropped enormous quantities of somewhat similar explosives from their Zeppelins, and it profited them less than nothing at all. Its chief and only important effect was to make easier the recruiting of enemy armies and to aggravate the penalties of ultimate defeat.

When Does a Level Diminish?

As the suddenly famous GLENN E. PLUMB was graduated first by Oberlin College and then by the Harvard Law School, it is reasonable to expect him so to use language as to make himself understood by all hearers, and not only to have something to say, but to know how to say it. This reasonable expectation he disappointed when, in the course of his impassioned orations before the House Interstate Commerce Commission, he told its members that a revolution was due because "men have reached the level of diminishing existence."

Students of KARL MARX will recognize in this sonorous phrase an approximation to one often used by that eminent German philosopher, but MARX, though he shared with not a few other eminent German philosophers a tendency to be obscure rather than profound, did usually manage to make his doctrinal formulae comprehensible. But to say, as did Mr. PLUMB, that men have reached "the level of diminishing existence" means nothing at all. Between the words "diminishing" and "existence" the incompatibility is obvious and irremediable, and even if the word "level" had been changed to "state" or "condition," the phrase would not have been bettered very much.

Deprivation Left Out of Account.

There is, probably, one element of inaccuracy in the elaborate table prepared by the Bureau of Labor Statistics to show what the advance in the cost of foods to the consumer has been since 1913. As mathematical computations the percentages shown no doubt are correct, but it is unbelievable, because impossible, that the poor as well as the rich, and everybody in between wealth and poverty, are paying as much more for food this year than three years ago as is indicated by the table.

They all would be doing so if everybody were buying now as much food and the same foods as then. As a matter of fact, hardly anybody is doing so. Few indeed are the households in which some degree of economy as to food is not practiced, and the result in a good many cases is that, while grocery and butcher bills are larger than formerly, they are not as much larger as they would be if all were buying the old amounts and qualities and in like diversity.

Some of this simplification and reduction of diet must be beneficial to health, but not a little of it comes to deprivation of needed sustenance. It is not only in Central Europe that children suffering from lack of milk are to be found.

AGAINST HEROIN.

Association of Pharmaceutical Chemists Would Eliminate It.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

It is commonly believed by the uninformed that those engaged in the manufacturing or wholesaling of drugs are opposed to the control of the sale of narcotic drugs.

With the view of correcting this erroneous impression I submit the following resolution, which was adopted by the American Association of Pharmaceutical Chemists at its annual meeting, held at Atlantic City, week of June 2, 1919:

Resolved, That the American Association of Pharmaceutical Chemists reiterates its resolution adopted two years ago that the narcotic drug heroin be eliminated from all medicinal preparations and that legislation (Federal and State) be enacted to require such elimination.

This association consists of about fifty active members situated throughout the United States engaged in manufacturing medicinal preparations, including narcotic compounds, and about thirty associate members who manufacture or import raw materials.

Those legitimately engaged in the manufacture or sale of drugs are heartily in sympathy with the efforts being made to control the narcotic drug situation, and desire to lend effective co-operation to those charged with the responsibility of remedying the evil.

How to Keep Good Judges.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

No one can dispute what you write in your editorial today, "Judgeships as Spoils," but the public and you have frequently said the same things, and the same thing occurs almost every time Judges are renominated. The trouble is we complain after the damage is done. Politicians controlling spoils do not care for the reputation a Judge has made—in fact, there is no incentive for a Judge making a reputation, so far as obtaining a renomination on his reputation is concerned, but he must keep his ear to the ground constantly while in service looking for a return. He gives up practice, great possibilities, &c., and his future is in the hands of spoilsmen.

Bar associations and lawyers could remove this blight if before nomination time (which always occurs during Summer months when lawyers are away on vacations who would otherwise be actively interested) they would interest themselves in placing before the public candidates who should be nominated in every court—the Supreme, City, County, Surrogates, and Municipal. The inferior courts require better and more experienced men than the higher. A year before term expire, the views of bar associations, citizens' unions, lawyers, and the public should be expressed and a public demand and sentiment created for the return of those considered good Judges. But when they let the thing drag along until it is too late, when the damage has been done by political parties turning down good Judges, it is hard to overcome the effect of that action. The summary dismissal of good Judges can only be prevented by the timely united action of bar associations, lawyers, and of the press in giving publicity in advance of the character and ability of Judges who should be returned.

With or without primaries, (candidates being now designated by political leaders,) Judges will continue to be named by the politicians, unless by public opinion the rule be made an unwritten law that good Judges must be renominated, and that the few who select candidates must take notice or suffer the consequences of defeat.

FRANCE.

The lightsome touch that made life seem
As if a holiday, or dream,
With song and dance;
The boulevards and fashions gay,
The windows of the Rue de la Paix,
The Champs Elysées' golden way—
That was not France!

Château, cathedral, legends told
Of bygone glory; armor old
And rusted lance;
Kings, cavaliers, and ladies fair,
With manners grand and debonair,
Jewels, and lace, and powdered hair—
That was not France!

The mood that set a final seal
To nothing—changing with the wheel
Of circumstance;
The coup d'état so quickly made;
The sans-culottes, the red parade,
The murders of the barricade—
That was not France!

But when the great world-peril came,
There rose a mighty soul of flame
As from a trance;
It faced the monster whose foul blow
Would all life's noblest things o'erthrow,
And stayed him with a thunderous
"No"—
And that was France!

When hope was faltering, and distress
Seized honest hearts lest righteousness
Have scarce a chance,
We heard a voice cry: "All is well!
I'm dying, but no tongue shall tell
I flinched before the hordes of hell!"
And that was France!

When Moloch fell at last, whose breath
Had swept with suffering and with death
The land's expanse,
A figure stood, face toward the goal,
With bleeding heart, but honor whole,
Sublime in aim and self-control—
And that was France!

JAPAN IN SHANTUNG.

Even After "Restoration" Her Economic Control of Province Will Be Absolute.

By W. W. WILLOUGHBY.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

Will you permit me to make one or two observations with regard to your editorial entitled, "Japan and Shantung", in the issue of THE TIMES of July 24?

It is certain that to those not well informed of the situation, your analysis will be misleading. You give the impression that, if Japan makes the restoration which she has promised to make, no injury will be done to the Chinese people and no situation left remaining that will prejudice the continued sovereignty and administrative independence of the Chinese State. The fact is far otherwise, and this is seen as soon as attention is directed to the conditions under which Japan has asserted her intention to restore to China the leased area of Kiao-Chau. Japan has never undertaken to surrender any of the railway and mining and other economic rights which she now possesses in Shantung. These she intends to hold permanently. Some of these rights are those which the Germans forced the concession of in 1898. Others are some that Japan has since obtained from certain of the Chinese politicians at Peking whose consent to them she has been able to buy. Others she claims as embraced within the German concessions, but actually they are such as the Germans themselves never claimed, some of them, indeed, being ones which the Germans before the outbreak of the war had formally and explicitly surrendered back to China.

And, as regards the territory of Kiao-Chau, the important fact is that, after the return to China is made—if it is made—Japan will remain in possession of a "concession" within the City of Tsing-tao which, according to limits already laid down by the Japanese authorities, will include all of the city that is of any commercial or political importance—all the water front suitable for shipping purposes, and the site of the permanent railway station, the yards and approaches. In other words, China will receive back the shell, but the meat will remain within the hands of Japan. Over this concession Japan will have exclusive political jurisdiction.

What gives vital significance to this is that Japan is the one country which seriously threatens the sovereignty and administrative integrity of China. From this source the danger to China is greater than was ever, prior to 1914, believed to be the threat of Germany to France. Already Japan is in possession, under a ninety-nine year lease, of absolute control of the Liao-tung Peninsula, and her influence in Manchuria is so great that her officials and nationals openly flout the authority there of the Chinese officials. And this dominance in the north Japan has gained and justified by precisely the same railway and other preferential rights which she will remain in possession of in Shantung after she has made what she is pleased to term a "restoration" of Kiao-Chau to the Chinese.

That Japan has not changed her policy toward China since the presentation of the infamous twenty-one demands in 1915 is shown by her actions in Shantung since she landed troops in 1914 upon the shores of that province. No attention whatever has been paid to the wishes and rights of China: the expedition against Tsing-tao was made the excuse for the military occupation of the railway zone to a distance of over 250 miles to Tsi Nan-fu, the capital of the province. In open disregard of Chinese sovereignty the Japanese have asserted the right to exercise civil control at points along the railway from Tsing-tao to Tsi Nan-fu. In numberless ways no attention has been paid in Shantung by the Japanese to Chinese law or the interests of the Chinese people. In violation of Chinese law many tons of the currency of the common people, the copper "cash," have been collected and exported to Japan. The salt administration has been defrauded of great revenues. Constant aid has been given by the Japanese authorities to the bands of bandits operating in the province; and, worse than all, tons of morphine have been introduced into the country in the form of military supplies or through the Japanese parcels post. From this infamous traffic alone it is known that millions of dollars have been received by the Japanese in Shantung.

Much more could be said upon this point, but sufficient has been said to show that it is a vital matter to the Chinese that the Japanese should not find that firm and permanent lodgment in Shantung which they will have if the provisions of the Paris treaty of peace are carried into effect. It is also a vital matter to those western nations which are concerned to have China protected as an independent State and to see that justice prevails in the East as well as the West.

DIVIDING CHINA.

Mr. Millard Says Japanese Denial Evades the Question.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

Many years of experience has shown me that it is difficult, indeed it is almost impossible, to keep track of the tergiversations of Japanese diplomacy and Japanese press propaganda; but I desire briefly to elucidate a rather important phase that is included in Mr. Selden's dispatch from Paris printed in today's issue of THE NEW YORK TIMES.

Mr. Selden's dispatch says: "The Matin has a signed statement from the Japanese delegation, authorized by Baron Makino, to the effect that Thomas Millard's statements to THE NEW YORK TIMES correspondent in Washington that a secret agreement was made between Japan and European powers in February and March, 1917, are without foundation."

First, I have made no statement of that nature to the Washington correspondent of THE TIMES or to any other newspaper. What THE TIMES published was taken from certain memoranda written by me for the information of the Administration and Senators. The alleged secret, or private, agreement, or "regional understanding," referred to in what THE TIMES published was not supposed to have been arranged in 1917, but some time last Spring at Paris. Japan's propaganda thus once again obscures a question by raising a dust in another quarter.

And, even in regard to that aspect of the matter, the statement attributed by Le Matin to Baron Makino is categorically incorrect. It is perfectly well known that Japan did make, in February and March, 1917, (Baron Makino's statement to the contrary notwithstanding,) no less than three secret agreements with European powers, and those agreements, although directly touching the interests of China and the diplomatic engagements of the United States, were not revealed (so far as we know now) until after the Paris Peace Conference met. THE NEW YORK TIMES has published the texts of those secret agreements.

Those matters are now being considered by the Administration and the Senate, and still are in camera. As far as I am concerned, they can remain in that stage until they emerge in the proper official manner of disclosure. This disclosure, pro or con, is certain to be made sooner or later.

The Price of Coal.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

In your issue of July 30 you print a letter from John Kennedy, in which he says: "If you try to buy anthracite at circular, there is none to be had; but if you pay $1 to $1.50 premium you get it within a few days. This would apply to bituminous coal as well as anthracite."

If Mr. Kennedy is connected in any way with the coal business, as he says he is, he must know that the companies issuing what are known as circular prices have never been known to ask a cent over those prices. What some irresponsible scalper may do is another thing, but such scalper has little or no coal to sell at any time and has no standing in the industry. As a matter of fact, so far as New York is concerned, the companies are pretty well sold up on the domestic sizes of anthracite for the present, and it is now a question of getting the coal here. There is delay in this, but it is up to the Railroad Administration.

Mr. Kennedy says that the small sizes of anthracite are a drug on the market. In this he is correct and he should know the reason. These small sizes are used for steam purposes. About 40 per cent. of each ton of anthracite coal produced at the mine is composed of the small or steam sizes. The absence of buying on the part of steam users is in part responsible for the small sizes being a drug on the market. Another factor has been the competition of Mexican fuel oil, produced by peon labor and admitted duty free, which has replaced in many plants the steam sizes of anthracite coal mined by our highly paid American labor.

These steam sizes must be disposed of, otherwise the prices of the domestic sizes must be increased or the mines must close, because no business can afford to have 40 per cent. of its product thrown back on its hands.

No coal man in the least informed regarding conditions in the industry would give such advice as Mr. Kennedy does when he says that his "advice to the buying public is to buy their coal as they want it and when they want it, and not be stampeded." If this advice were followed there would surely be untold suffering this Winter.

Coal at the mines is not coal in the bin, and unless coal is at hand it is of no value to the consumer. Transportation is a big factor in the coal industry, and it takes time to transport coal. AMÉDÉE J. CASEY, Editor American Coal Journal.

SEA VIEW HOSPITAL.

Dr. Knopf Opposes Its Use for Drug Addicts.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

I read with interest the item in your issue of today entitled "No Addict Hospital in Pelham Park; Patients Will be Housed in the Tuberculosis Institution on Staten Island." No one can possibly have more sympathy with the unfortunate drug addicts than the physician who has seen the sufferings of such individuals when deprived of their accustomed dose of opium, morphine, cocaine, or allied products, and I have witnessed such sufferings, hence I sincerely hope that Commissioner Copeland's praiseworthy efforts to help those unfortunates may receive from his Honor the Mayor and the Board of Estimate and Apportionment the desired financial support, either by the creation of a new institution or, what would seem far more economical, accepting the buildings of the Rockefeller Foundation, which, in my judgment, seem admirably adapted for that purpose.

As an anti-tuberculosis worker in this city for well-nigh a quarter of a century, having been intimately associated with the work of the Health Department of the City of New York, under the leadership of Hermann M. Biggs and his successors, I beg leave, however, to enter as strong a protest as I possibly can against the utilization of Sea View Hospital on Staten Island for the treatment of drug addicts. Here is the finest building of its kind in the world, having been erected at the cost of $5,000,000 for the exclusive use of patients suffering from tuberculosis, especially designed and equipped for this purpose. It is the only institution which not only takes care of patients afflicted with tuberculosis of the lungs in all stages of the disease, but also of orthopaedic cases, that is to say, tuberculosis of the bones and joints, and of maternity cases, that is to say, tuberculous mothers for confinement. All other institutions are either limited to adults or children, to joint or lung diseases only, or again only to cases in the first, second, or last stages of the disease.

Sea View Hospital on Staten Island has established an enviable reputation because of its admirable work and excellent management. And now it is suggested to turn over this valuable plant to the use of drug addicts, the tuberculous patient to be turned out and distributed among other institutions. Many of the 700 patients now at Sea View are in a condition where removal would mean death, and all this for the sake of treating drug addicts for an indefinite and relatively short period of time. What would be the result? Our tuberculosis clinics, already hampered by the work for drug addicts, will be at a loss where to send maternity or orthopaedic cases. Sea View Hospital as a tuberculosis institution is visited by physicians from all over the United States and Europe, who pronounce it the best of its kind in the world. Patients eagerly flock there in the hope of improvement and cure.

Sad as it is, there is a stigma connected with even the most innocent victim of the drug habit. Crime and drug addiction are always associated in the public mind, and I fear that with the peculiar psychology of the tuberculous patient, few would be willing to enter an institution which has or has had the stigma of a hospital for drug addicts.

I am entering this protest as an individual, but I know that all the co-workers with whom I have discussed this matter are of the same opinion, and I have no doubt that similar communications will reach his Honor the Mayor, Commissioner Coler, and Commissioner Copeland. I trust that the latter, in his enthusiasm for the unfortunate drug addict, will not allow his judgment to be clouded, and that he must realize that the tuberculosis problem is as important a one as that of the treatment of drug addicts. I hope his Honor the Mayor, as well as Health Commissioner Copeland and Charity Commissioner Coler, will realize the truth of what has been said and preserve Sea View Hospital for the worthy consumptive poor for whom it was created. I hope the city will accept the Rockefeller Foundation gift, and transfer these buildings to Warwick, and thus save unnecessary expense and preserve the good name of Sea View Hospital and the enviable reputation of the New York Health Department as the best and the most efficient in the world in dealing with the tuberculosis problem.

'DEVIL DOG' DIVISION CAPTURES FIFTH AV.

Gen. Lejeune, with Smiles for All, Leads His Regular Heroes Through Five-Mile Ovation.

BOMBARDED WITH ROSES

The 2d Division of Regulars and Marines, the famous American combat unit that was deployed at the critical moment in May, 1918, to meet the Germans at Château-Thierry and in that action put an end to the enemy's advance on Paris, which again in July won a glorious victory before Soissons, and later led the American advance in the Argonne operations, captured New York City yesterday afternoon. For the first time in the history of the United States New York City had a chance to acclaim a complete division of the regular national forces, and New York rose to the occasion and tendered to Major Gen. Lejeune and his fighters a welcome that they will not soon forget.

Fifth Avenue, from Washington Square to 110th Street, the route of the parade, was thronged with enthusiastic men, women, and children, who cheered the "soldiers of the sea" and their "comrades of the shore," for the 2d Division is the one and only organization under the Stars and Stripes which includes among its officers and enlisted personnel regulars of the sea as well as of the land. The division, appearing perhaps for the last time in steel helmets and certainly for the last time in the line-up with which it faced and overwhelmed its German opponents, marched as only trained regulars can, a fact that may be fully appreciated when it is stated that it required only forty-four minutes for the entire unit of more than 25,000 men to pass a point.
